Program: KVPR/KPRX's Valley Edition
Host: Joe Moore

10/1/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Healthcare, Immigration, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at issues that have an impact both in Central California and the rest of the state. Starting off the program host Joe Moore speaks with Fresno Bee Editorial Page Editor Bill McEwen about the state of politics in the region.

Segment 2: Later in the program, our reporting team takes a look at the Affordable Care Act. Reporter Rebecca Plevin tells the story of a group of Californians eligible for the state's expanded Medi-Cal program. These young immigrants were undocumented until last summer when President Obama announced a new policy, called Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals. In the same vein, Moore interviews California Health and Human Services Secretary Diana Dooley about what the Affordable Care Act means for Californians.

Segment 3: Ending the program, Moore highlights a music and art festival that takes place in an unlikely place, Orosi, Calif. The Spanspek Music and Arts Festival will be held Friday Oct. 4.

10/8/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Politics, Immigration, Education, Environmental, Business, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we explore emerging California politics with Fresno State Political Science Professor Thomas Holyoke. Valley Edition Host Joe Moore speaks with Holyoke about immigration reform and more.

Segment 2: Later in the program, College of the Sequoia's President Stan Carrizosa talks with Moore about development in the college's efforts to stop the potential loss of accreditation.

Segment 3: Also on the show FM89 reporter Ezra David Romero reports on the Forest Service's efforts to recover from the Rim Fire before the autumn rains come. Max Stauffer with Yosemite Mountain Sugar Pine Railroad joins Moore in a conversation about how tourism for his business is up, because of the government shutdown and the Rim Fire.

Segment 4: Ending the program, Moore interviews Colleen Bailey, the executive director for the National Steinbeck Center, about a 10-day road trip following the footsteps of John Steinbeck's novel 'Grapes of Wrath.' The tour will pass through Bakersfield on October 13 and in Arvin at the Weedpatch Camp on October 14.

10/15/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Politics, Environmental, Agriculture, Poverty, Health, Sports

10/29/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Health, Transportation, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we explore the issues that have plagued West Fresno and how California's future bullet train may impact one of the oldest districts in Fresno. For years, the historically African-American community of West Fresno has borne a heavy burden. From polluting heavy industry to waste dumps, a sewage plan and superfund sites – it's a side of Fresno quite different from the wealthy suburbs north of Herndon Avenue. Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin explores two controversial projects that have some asking: How much is too much for one part of the city to bear? Valley Edition Host Joe Moore explores the issues the community of West Fresno face with Fresno State Professor John Capitman, Mary Curry with Concerned Citizens of West Fresno and Tate Hill with the Fresno Metro Black Chamber.

Segment 2: Later in the program we explore the changes expected to come from California's future bullet train. FM89 Reporter Ezra Romero explores the implications of archeological digs in Fresno's Chinatown. Moore takes a look at the possibility of the historic Fresno Arch's move to a more visible locale in the city.

Segment 3: Ending the program, Moore interviews Fresno's longtime conductor Theodore Kuchar about his latest album Latin American Classics that he was nominated for a Latin Grammy for.

11/5/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Transportation, Immigration, Health, Education, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at the issues of immigration, high speed rail and agriculture in an interview with Republican Congressman David Valadao.

Segment 2: Later in the program Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin reports on "Valley Fever Research Day," Saturday November 9, at the UCSF Fresno Center for Medical Education and Research. The event is an opportunity for researchers from UCSF Fresno, UC Merced, and Fresno State to connect with community members who have been impacted by the disease.

Segment 3: Ending the program, Valley Edition Host Joe Moore speaks with Julia Woli Scott, the project curator for the new M Street Arts Complex in Downtown Fresno, about the new building, a partnership with Fresno State and ArtHop.

11/12/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Sports, Veterans, Education, Business, Housing, Environmental

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at Fresno State football, veterans, the possibility of a new town in the region, water issues in the region and more. Beginning the program, Valley Edition Host Joe Moore talks with Paul Swearingin, host of the Paul Swearingin Sports Podcast, about Fresno State Football. The two discuss the dispute over the team's name, mascot, gangs and more.

Segment 2: Also in the program Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin tells the story of one Central California marine's reinstatement into civilian life.

Segment 3: FM89 Reporter Ezra David Romero reports on a new community to take root at the base of the Tehachapi Mountains called Grapevine.

Segment 4: Ending the show, Moore discusses the issue of water in the San Joaquin Valley with Scientist Peter Gleick, President and Co-founder of the Pacific Institute. Moore also tells the story of one the San Joaquin River restoration and salmon spawning.

11/19/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Housing, Poverty, Crime & Punishment, Cultural, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we discuss the issues of homelessness, prisons and a new book about the legacy of the Dust Bowl. Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin tells the story of how two women evicted from a Fresno homeless encampment chose entirely different homes after eviction - one an eco-home and the other a field.

Segment 2: Also on the program Valley Edition Host Joe Moore speaks with San Francisco based reporter Michael Montgomery about his piece on California's three strikes sentencing law.

Segment 3: Moore also speaks with journalist Timothy Egan about his book "The Worst Hard Time," which won the 2006 American Book Award. Egan will speak in Fresno on Wednesday morning, as part of the San Joaquin Valley Town Hall Lecture Series.

Segment 4: Ending the program, Moore and FM89 Reporter Rebecca Plevin discuss the next book in Valley Public Radio's 'Homegrown' book club. 'What You See In The Dark' is authored by Dinuba native Manuel Munoz. We will discuss the book during Valley Edition on December 3. Plevin will speak with Munoz about his book. We encourage listeners to share their questions and comments about the novel.

11/26/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Cultural, Agriculture, Business, Environmental, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we explore the once in a lifetime experience of "Thanksgivukkah" - Thanksgiving and Hanukkah overlap this year and won't happen for another 70,000 years - through the culinary creations from the only Jewish Chef in Fresno. FM89 Reporter Rebecca Plevin reports.

Segment 2: Also in the program, Valley Public Radio Reporter Ezra David Romero reports on the growing craft distilling movement in the region.

Segment 3: Later in the program, Valley Edition Host Joe Moore speaks with California Secretary for Natural Resources John Laird about water in California, the Bay Delta Conservation Plan and more.

Segment 4: Ending the show, Moore speaks with Bakersfield Artist David Gordon about the Arts Council of Kern and Kern County Museums art show "Creating Community: Kern County - Then and Now." The show is open through December 4.

12/3/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Government, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at the effect of fires on the Sierra Nevada. FM89 reporter Ezra David Romero visits multiple groves scorched by fires - caused naturally and by the human hand - and speaks with ecologists about the future of the forest burned by the Rim Fire. Gray George, a reporter with the Calaveras Enterprise joins Valley Edition Host Joe Moore in a discussion about logging in the Rim Fire burn area.

Segment 2: Also in the show, Moore speaks with Congressman Jim Costa about logging, the farm bill, the budget and more.

Segment 3: Later in the program FM89 Reporter Rebecca Plevin interviews Dinuba native Manuel Munoz about his book 'What You See in the Dark.' The interview is part of KVPR's Book Club 'Homegrown.' The novel follows a director and actress who arrive in Bakersfield in the late 1950s to film a movie at a motel along the old Highway 99.

Segment 4: Ending the show, Moore speaks with Fresno Philharmonic Executive Director Stephen Wilson and local jazz singer Karen Marguth about the Fresno Philharmonic jazz inspired Home for the Holidays concert. The show takes place Saturday Dec. 7 at 7 p.m.

12/10/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Government, Law Enforcement, Immigration, Cultural

Segment 1: This week we take a look at the issues of waste in Kettleman City, abuse in a Tulare County developmental center, how trees illustrate California immigration patterns and more. Starting the program Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin reports on one Kettleman City woman's "hate-hate" relationship with the city's water, which contains unsafe amounts of naturally occurring arsenic.

Segment 2: Also in the program, Valley Edition Host Joe Moore interviews Center for Investigative Reporting reporter Ryan Gabrielson about his work on a beating at the Porterville Development Center that has gone unpunished after years of delay.

Segment 3: Later in the program, Moore speaks with Jared Farmer about his book Trees in Paradise: A California History. The book explores California's culture through four trees: redwood, eucalyptus, orange, and palm.

12/17/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Law Enforcement, Healthcare, Children, Agriculture

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we discuss issues in Central California with Fresno County Supervisor Henry Perea, talk California wine with and more. Starting off the program, Moore speaks with Supervisor Perea about a range of topics in the region including public safety, planning and budget issues.

Segment 2: Later in the program, Moore speaks with the Center for Investigative Reporting reporter Will Evans about a collaborative effort with CNN to expose fraud in California's taxpayer-funded drug and alcohol counseling program.

Segment 3: Ending the program, Moore speaks with San Francisco Chronicle Wine Editor Jon Bonne about his latest book 'The New California Wine.' The two discuss everything from growing up in a wine oriented family, the state of California wine compared to other global regions and the success of the Central California wine industry.

12/24/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Transportation, Crime & Punishment, Business, Education, Youth, Environmental

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition host Joe Moore recaps the year with Fresno Mayor Ashley Swarengin. The two discuss everything from high speed rail to law enforcement.

Segment 2: Also in the program, Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin visits one Central California high school with a club that is helping teens relax and process life issues. Groups of the sort aren't new, but the Sunnyside Meditation Club is one of the first in the region.

Segment 3: Later in the program, Moore speaks with Bakersfield Californian Reporter Lois Henry about a water exchange between Kern and Madera counties that's growing sprawl in the north Valley.

12/31/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Technology, Youth, Business

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at what we are calling "Alt. Farmers."

In a region where big agriculture is big business, a new generation of farmers is challenging our notion of what life on the farm is all about. These socially conscious, technology savvy boutique growers and ranchers are going beyond organic to embrace the latest trends in food and popular culture.

They're not just small farmers, they're diversified entrepreneurs and clever marketers who are doing their part to make farming hip and cool. It's a movement that has its roots in hipster Meccas like Portland and Brooklyn, where skinny jeans wearing millennials raise artisanal chickens on rooftops.

In this week's program we ask farmers, agriculture experts and chefs whether small farming can succeed and thrive in the most productive agricultural area in the country?

Federal Shutdown Jams Immigration Courts

What does the government shutdown mean for some 250,000 federal workers living in California? It's not entirely clear. The president has said Yosemite will be closed, while the Post Office will continue to deliver and air traffic controllers are staying in their towers. Federal courts remain open, but support staff will be furloughed and caseloads will shrink. Reporter: Steven Cuevas.

Covered California Open for Business

Covered California, the state's insurance marketplace, launches today. Eligible people can now sign up for plans and premiums and subsidies. The plan itself kicks into effect on January 1st. Lisa Aliferis, editor of the California Report blog, State of Health, brings us up to date.

Graphic Video at Center of Prison Mental Healthcare Trial

Videos of mentally ill prison inmates being pepper sprayed and dragged out of prison cells will be front and center in a federal case being heard in Sacramento today. The videotapes are the latest controversy in a long-running legal battle over mental healthcare in state prisons.

Furloughs Hit Communities Around Military Bases

California's active-duty military personnel are not being furloughed. They're considered essential to the country's defense and will remain on duty with full pay. But thousands of civilian employees who work alongside those troops have been furloughed. And that's impacting life in and around two of the biggest military bases in Southern California. Reporter: Steven Cuevas.

California Standardized Testing Goes Digital

Governor Jerry Brown signed a bill Wednesday tossing out the state's 16-year-old standardized testing program, known as STAR. Schools are dropping the old bubble-in multiple choice paper tests, and switching to a digital system designed with the coming Common Core standards in mind. Reporter: Ana Tintocalis.

Could Immigration Reform Help California's Farm Labor Shortage

The federal government may be shut down but House Democrats moved ahead on Wednesday with their own version of immigration reform. It's an open secret that California farmers rely on an undocumented workforce, and they say they're facing a labor shortage that could be solved with comprehensive reform. Reporter: Krista Almanzan

Furloughed Californians Protest Shutdown

The U.S. Congress is getting paid during the shutdown of the federal government -- it's required by law. But many lawmakers are giving up their pay, including 11 from California. But nearly 151,000 federal workers in California remain off the job and out of a paycheck involuntarily. And for some, patience is wearing thin.

State Health Exchange Sees Heavy Traffic Opening Week

Ready or not, like it or not, health care exchanges opened up across the nation this week, allowing individuals to shop for insurance. California's online marketplace, Covered California, went live Tuesday morning. The Covered California website received more than 500,000 unique visitors on the first day, and the service centers logged some 19,000 calls. For a closer look at how this first week has gone, Scott Shafer talks with Lisa Aliferis, editor of KQED's State of Health blog.

A New Wine Country in Baja

Plenty of alcoholic beverages carry the label "Made in Mexico" -- or maybe "Hecho en Mexico." Best known are beers like Corona and Bohemia, tequila, and the newly-hip mezcal. But Baja California is now home to a thriving wine region. It's all part of a gastronomic revolution that's helping to turn the area into a gourmet destination. Reporter: Meghan McCar

Meditation Program Help Vets Cope with the Trauma of War

For military veterans struggling with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, or PTSD, medication and counseling can be a first line of defense. But research by the Veterans Administration and others is finding that relief for PTSD symptoms like depression, anxiety and anger can be found in the ancient practice of meditation. Simply slowing down the mind and carefully breathing can help -- and that's exactly the goal of a program sponsored by the San Francisco Zen Center. It's called Honoring the Path of the Warrior.

Hunger in the Valley: Farmworker Families Can't Afford Produce They Pick

It's harvest time in the San Joaquin Valley, and farmworkers are out shaking almond trees and picking grapes. The valley is one of the most productive farm regions in the world. Yet the people who work and live near these farms often struggle to feed their families fresh and healthy food. In part of our series called "Hunger in the Valley of Plenty," The California Report's Central Valley Bureau Chief Sasha Khokha starts by introducing us to a farmworker family who can't afford to buy the produce that grows all around them. Reporter: Sasha Khokha

D.C.'s Shutdown Hits the Golden State

Despite signs of progress in Washington, the government shutdown drags on, and the impact is being felt -- and feared -- even on the West Coast. Host Scott Shafer talked with some Californians.

The Shutdown as Seen from Tuolumne County

The standoff in Washington began this summer, when 80 conservative members of Congress urged House Speaker John Boehner to use the budget and debt ceiling debate to try and kill the Affordable Care Act. One of those Congressmen was California Republican Tom McClintock. He represents an inland district stretching from Lake Tahoe to Fresno. Sacramento bureau chief Scott Detrow hit the road this week to see how the shutdown is affecting life in McClintock's rural district. Reporter: Scott Detrow

Hunger in the Valley of Plenty: Gleaning the Harvest

The Central Valley produces most of the nation's nuts and fresh fruit - but the people who harvest those crops often can't afford them. At the same time, a recent study by the Natural Resources Defense Council estimates as much as 30 percent of some Central Valley crops go to waste in the fields. As part of a series we're calling "Hunger in the Valley of Plenty," Central Valley bureau chief Sasha Khokha takes a look at a grassroots effort to feed people by rescuing some of that produce. California's Chief Justice on Budget Cuts, Initiatives and Diversity

The federal government is open for business again, now that disputes over the Affordable Care Act and the debt ceiling are behind us -- for now. In California, it's been a relatively tranquil budget year, but the road there has been bumpy. Nearly three years into her term, Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court Tani Cantil-Sakauye has had to weather severe cuts to the statewide legal system, with layoffs, courthouse closures and shorter court hours. She spoke with host Scott Shafer.

How Climate Change May Transform the Bay Area's Landscape

California has a long history of preserving its open lands. In the San Francisco Bay Area, for example, about a quarter of the nine-county region is permanently protected from development. But what might those parks and open spaces look like decades from now, as climate change transforms the landscape? Jazz Review: Kenny Burrell, Still Innovating at Age 81

Like many artists drawn to the West Coast, guitar master Kenny Burrell's musical voice was shaped by his move to California. BART 'Redoubles' Commitment to Resolve Strike After Deaths

Federal authorities have launched an investigation into the deaths of two Bay Area Rapid Transit workers fatally struck by a train over the weekend. Two maintenance workers were hit Saturday as they inspected a stretch of track. Many union members wondered aloud about the fact the driver of the train was a BART manager. BART's directors said in a statement the tragedy has "redoubled" their commitment to a quick resolution of the strike, and they are open to restarting mediation. The Image and Influence of California's Organized Labor

In many ways organized labor is the most the powerful political force here in deeply Democratic California. But the bitter Bay Area transit strike that ended this week revealed a few cracks in the armor. As the second BART strike in four months unfolded, commuters were frustrated and furious -- at both sides. Some blamed the transit agency for disrespecting the workers and for hiring an outside negotiator despised by the unions. But public anger seemed especially aimed at the workers, who some saw as greedy. So what do we learn from this very public transit strike? And what does it say, if anything, about the image and influence of unions in California? Scott Shafer and The California Report's Sacramento bureau chief Scott Detrow have more.

Ballot Measure Seeks to Raise Calif. Minimum Wage

Many of the salespeople who'll keep those retail cash registers ringing this holiday weekend work for minimum wage. Right now that's $8 an hour. In September, Gov. Jerry Brown signed legislature that will raise it to $10 in 2016. But now support to raise it faster and higher is coming from an unlikely source -- Republican high tech entrepreneur Ron Unz. Earlier this week Unz proposed a state ballot measure for November of next year to raise the state's minimum wage up to $12 an hour by 2016. Walking Across California with Three Mules

Road trips are a quintessential part of the California experience. But here's a journey that's unusual even by California standards. Sixty-five-year-old John Sears has spent 10 years traveling on foot -- with three mules. But it's more than just an adventure. Sears is on a mission: he's protesting the loss of open spaces by living outdoors with the animals. Shuka Kalantari caught up with the man nicknamed 'Mule' in Salinas to learn where he's going next, and why. Reporter: Shuka Kalantari

The Last Living Resident of China Camp

China Camp State Park in Marin County is known for good hiking and mountain biking. But before China Camp was a state park, it was a settlement where many Chinese immigrants and their families made a living, and a home. They're all gone now. Except for one. Reporter Julie Caine visited the last living resident of China Camp, and brings us this story of a place where the past and the present are still very much alive. Reporter: Julie Caine

The Chicana First Lady of Song

Central Valley bureau chief Sasha Khokha brings us this profile of 74-year-old Carmencristina Moreno of Fresno, who some call the "Chicana First Lady of Song." Reporter: Sasha Khokha

Facing Facts and Finding Hope After Moving to a Nursing Home

As part of our occasional series on community health, we hear from 83-year-old Phyllis Donner Wolf about what it takes to live a life of grace in a nursing home. Last spring she had to give up her apartment after she fell and broke her neck. The fall left her paralyzed and today she's in a care facility called the Jewish Home.

Forget the Lakers, Here Come the Triquis

From the asphalt of Venice Beach to the hardwood of the Staples Center, L.A. lives and breathes basketball. So perhaps it should come as no surprise Oaxacan immigrants in L.A. operate a children's basketball league, with dozens of teams. Over the holidays, a team from Southern Mexico called the Triquis came up to play. Reporter: Caitlin Esch.

Vast Shortage of Black and Hispanics in Physician Workforce

Health care providers across the state are bracing for a surge of low-income patients moving into Medi-Cal. They've had roughly three years to prepare for the influx, but it's difficult to change the workforce in the time they've had to prepare for the ACA. Reporter: April Dembosky.

Family Values: Immigrant Households More Likely to Include Grandparents

In recent years, there's been a lot of talk about young adults living with their parents. Staggering under huge college debt loads, slaving away in poorly paid jobs thanks to the Great Recession, many 20-somethings just don't have what it takes to set up an independent life. A few months ago, Jed Kolko is chief economist for Trulia, the online real estate marketplace wondered aloud: what about the flip side?
