10/6/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Labor, Health, Business, Environmental, Arts & Entertainment

On this week's program FM89's Ezra David Romero reports on a new raisin variety that could severely decrease the labor needed to grow and harvest the crop. Also KVPR's Diana Aguilera reports on how farmworkers are impacted by STDs in the Central California town of Mendota.

Later in the program VE Host Joe Moore interviews American Businessmen and Author Bill George about an upcoming visit to Fresno Pacific University. We also hear from KPCC Partner Station Reporter Sanden Totten about how California's relationship to water is likely to change in the hotter, more populous state of the year 2040. Ending Valley Edition we speak with Shannon Jones with the Taft Oildorado Festival taking place October 9 -18.

10/13/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Labor, Poverty, Politics, Technology, Government

This week on Valley Edition we take a look at the notion of whether Fresno can be poverty free. VE Host Joe Moore was joined by Assistant Professor at UC Davis M. Anne Visser, Zocalo Public Square's Joe Matthews and Sher Moua with Fresno Building Healthy Communities.

Also on the program we hear from the Fresno Bee's Bill McEwen. KVPR's Diana Aguilera reports on a new pill that's helping UC Davis researchers tackle heat related illnesses among agricultural workers. FM89's Jeffrey Hess explores whether technology is killing California's Public Records Law.

10/20/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Agriculture, Homelessness, Arts & Entertainment

This week on Valley Edition we hear from Ben Bergman, with partner station KPCC in Pasadena, in a series called "The Future of Water." Bergman reports from Madera where he speaks with farmers about where water will come from 25 years from now.

Later in the program, Fresno City Council member Clint Olivier joins VE Host Joe Moore for a conversation about Clint's recent Fresno Bee column addressing vagrancy.

Ending the program we hear about the photo of Billy the Kid bought at a Fresno thrift shop for $2. Jeff Aiello joins Moore for a conversation about the photo. Aiello is the executive director of the new documentary "Billy the Kid - New Evidence."

10/27/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Discrimination, Housing, Government, Technology

This week on Valley Edition our reporting staff takes a look at West Fresno and the issues faced there. FM89's Diana Aguilera looks into West Fresno's troubling and often overlooked history of segregation. While KVPR's Jeffrey Hess reports on the possible future development of the area. Later Fresno City Councilman Oliver Baines joins the conversation.

Also on the program Andie Apple, with the Kern County Library, discusses improvements coming to book borrowing system.

Ending the show Jake Soberal, CEO of Bitwise Industries, discusses tech in the Valley and the grand opening of the Bitwise South Stadium in Downtown Fresno.

11/3/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Environmental, Parks & Recreation, Healthcare, Arts

On this week's Valley Edition: Governor Brown has declared a new state of emergency in California. But it's not involving a wildfire or a mudslide – it's actually about the massive die-off trees in the Sierra. We'll find out what local forestry officials are doing scrambling to keep visitors safe. Later in the show we'll talk about a new opinion piece in the New York Times that suggests California's best days are behind it. Is the California dream turning dark, or is the state about to reinvent itself once again? We'll also learn why StoryCorps is working with Fresno's Hinds Hospice to document and preserve the stories of valley residents who are in hospice care, and their families. Plus we'll get a preview of an event that brings local audiences a sustainable look at the world of fashion – it's the return of Trashique at the Fresno Art Museum this weekend.

11/10/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Housing, Transportation, Arts & Entertainment

This week on Valley Edition Reporter Ezra David Romero explores why Tulare County is considering red tagging drought stricken rental homes. Later we speak with Eric Eidlin on how German high speed rail compares to plans for California High Speed Rail. Eidlin is a regional policy fellow of the German Marshall Fund and works for the Federal Transit Administration. He is joined by Joe Matthews from Zocalo Public Square.

Evan Onstot with KSEE 24 joins the program to talk about his recent stories on California High Speed Rail as well as his news show.

Ending the program Jefferson Beavers with Fresno Filmworks joins the program to speak about the Fresno Film Festival held November 13-15.

11/17/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Healthcare, Violence, Environmental, Politics, Sports

This week on Valley Edition Reporter Jeffrey Hess takes a look at a health care showdown between two Valley medical giants. We are also joined by Frédéric Martin, President of Alliance Francaise de Fresno, to speak about the region's response to the attacks in Paris.

Later in the program KVPR Reporter Ezra David Romero visits the homeland of the extinct California Grizzly Bear to find out if another subspecies of grizzlies should be introduced back into the state. The Fresno Bee's John Ellis joins the program as well to speak about Fresno mayoral candidates and other local politics.

Ending the show, FM89's Ezra David Romero interviews world-renowned free climber Alex Honnold about his climbing history and his new book Alone on the Wall.

11/24/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Poverty, Business, Politics, Transportation

This week on Valley Edition we talk about the issue of hunger in the valley. A new survey of high poverty neighborhoods known as Fresno Hunger Count aims to give leaders a better idea of the state of food insecurity. Philip Erro of the group joins us, as well as Andy Souza of the Community Food Bank. We also talk about the changing retail scene in Hanford with Mike Eiman of the Hanford Sentinel. Mike has reported on city efforts to breathe new life into that city's downtown, as well as big new developments on the edge of town, and new hotels coming to Hanford. We also hear a fact check story from PolitiFact California about high speed rail, a first-person story about life in the valley, and reports about politics and dyslexia.

12/1/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Minorities, Poverty, Energy, Environmental, Elderly, Transportation, Politics

This week on Valley Edition we take an in depth look at the issues of life without heat for the residents of one Fresno based apartment complex. KVPR Reporter Diana Aguilera visits the complex and finds families in need. Fresno City Director of Communications and Public Affairs Mark Standriff joins the conversation as well as Faith in Communities Andy Levine.

Later, KVPR Reporter Ezra David Romero brings a first person story about an elderly couple grappling with household water issues in Madera County. We also learn about developments along the High Speed Rail Line. Ending the program, Fresno Bee Editorial Page Editor Bill McEwen joins the program to talk local politics.

12/8/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Violence, Law Enforcement, Minorities, Housing, Development, Arts

This week on Valley Edition Host Joe Moore speaks with The Guardian's Jon Swaine about the paper's series "The County" looking at police violence in Kern County. Also on the program KVPR's Diana Aguilera reports on the history of housing in Fresno County and how some people groups weren't allowed to buy in certain areas of Fresno.

Later in the program, FM89's Jeffrey Hess reports on the future on Fresno's Fulton Mall. Ending the program Moore speaks Robert Price of the Bakersfield Californian about his new book "The Bakersfield Sound."

12/15/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Terrorism, Minorities, Politics, Education, Parks & Recreation

This week on Valley Edition Reporter Ezra David Romero takes a look into whether cannabis cultivation will become big agriculture if marijuana is legalized on all fronts in California. Also on the program we talk about local Muslim response to Islamophobia, Donald Trump, terrorism and more. Joining the conversation are Islamic Cultural Center Fresno Imam Seyed Ali Ghazvini and UC Irvine professor of Middle Eastern History Mark Andrew Le Vine.

Ending the program Fresno Unified School Board President Luis Chavez talks about leadership corruption, school politics, parks and more.

12/22/15 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Transportation, Government, Politics, Law Enforcement, Business, Housing, Education

This week on Valley Edition Reporter Jeffrey Hess takes a look at how construction from California High Speed Rail will change Fresno. Later, VE Host Joe Moore interviews Rep. Jim Costa about the urgency to get Calif. water legislation passed. Ending the program, Moore talks about the top news stories of 2015 in Central California. He is joined by KSEE 24 Host Evan Onstot and Bakersfield Californian Editor Robert Price.

Poll Shows Support for Potential 2016 Tax Measures

California voters have a long history of being skeptical about raising taxes. But a new statewide poll suggests there are some taxes that could win on the ballot next year. A poll from the Public Policy Institute of California finds strong support for raising the state's tobacco tax. Voters polled also supported extending the Prop. 30 tax increases by a slim margin. Reporter: John Myers

Drought Leads to Influx of Large Roaches

Are creepy-crawlers like ants or large roaches making their way into your home? Bug experts say, get used to it. It seems the ongoing drought is leaving the bug population thirsty and hungry, so they're leaving their homes and crawling into yours. Reporter: Tena Rubio

Parts of Calif. Could Struggle to Meet New Ozone Standards

The federal Environmental Protection Agency is adopting new ozone standards aimed at cutting down on smog and improving public health. Some parts of California could have a hard time complying with the new rules. Reporter: Jed Kim

What a McCarthy-Pelosi House Leadership Could Mean for California

If Rep. Kevin McCarthy wins the vote next Thursday to succeed John Boehner as speaker of the house, it will mark another historical first for California. It would be the first time a house speaker and a minority leader -- currently Nancy Pelosi -- will represent the same state. We talk with Noah Bierman, who covers Congress for the LA Times.

After the Fires: Taking Stock in Lake County

For the residents of Lake County, this summer has been a series of devastating wildfires: the Rocky Fire in July, the Jerusalem Fire in August and of course, the Valley Fire, which as of today is 97 percent contained after burning more than 76,000 acres and leaving about 3,000 people homeless. We talk with KQED's Alex Emslie, who visited Lake County this week and talked with residents there about what's next for their communities.

'Senior Villages' Struggle With Call to Diversify

Many older people fear losing their independence. They worry about being a burden on their families or being forced out of their homes. One solution is senior villages: nonprofit neighborhood associations created by and for elderly residents, so they can stay at home as they age. But this decade-old social movement is starting to confront some growing pains. Reporter: April Dembosky

Water Savers vs. Million-Gallon Households in Bel Air

Californians are hearing the water conservation message. The latest figures, released this week, show that savings have exceeded Gov. Brown's mandate for the third month in a row. But not everyone thinks the governor's mandate applies to them. We talk with KQED Science editor and drought czar, Craig Miller.

Drought-Weakened Trees Could Pose Danger This Winter

The forecasts of a strong El Nino this winter mean California could go from drought to floods. But that doesn't mean damage hasn't already been done. For example, millions of trees have been starving for water and are now dead or dying. These weakened trees may not make it through a wet winter -- and could be a totally separate hazard. Reporter: Lindsey Hoshaw

My Spot: Pacifica's Linda Mar Beach

As part of our occasional series called "My Spot," celebrating personal experiences with special places around the state, we meet a new grandfather who's found a place that feels like home: a beach in Pacifica, just south of San Francisco. Laura Klivans spoke with Joseph Herrera Sr. Reporter: Laura Klivans

The California Report Turns 20

Twenty years ago this week, the California Report made its statewide debut. That first show featured a discussion about race, an interview with an outsider who shook up presidential politics -- remember Ross Perot? -- and a look at border issues and immigration. They're all topics that, two decades later, we're still covering in one way or another

Gov. Brown Signs Physician-Assisted Suicide Bill Into Law

California will become the fifth state to allow terminally ill patients to legally end their lives, after Gov. Jerry Brown signed a controversial physician-assisted suicide bill on Monday. The new law will most likely take effect in January. In this special presentation, we'll examine the bill and analyze what legalizing physician-assisted suicide will mean for California.

Study Examines Economic Impact of Latino Health Issues

A report from the Health Initiative of the Americas at UC Berkeley finds that many Latino immigrants consume less healthy foods after they arrive in the U.S. That contributes to obesity, a risk factor for diabetes. One in three adult Mexican immigrants diagnosed with diabetes lacks health insurance. Reporter: Farida Jhabvala Romero

Could Israeli Ingenuity (and Seawater) Help California Slake Its Thirst?

The secret to alleviating California's drought may be found in one of the driest places on earth: Israel. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu inked an agreement with Gov. Jerry Brown last year to encourage the two states to work together on water issues. But Israeli ingenuity in the field of water management and conservation is already sprinkling into Southern California. Reporter: Steven Cuevas

Lawmakers Focus on Easing Working Women's Burdens After Gov. Signs Landmark Law

A day after Gov. Jerry Brown signed landmark legislation aimed at closing the gender pay gap in California, state legislators are continuing to examine the challenges working women face. At a state Senate hearing Wednesday in San Francisco, lawmakers will hear from speakers on a range of topics, all aimed at eliminating the barriers and challenges for working women in California. Reporter: Sukey Lewis

Investigation Looks Into California's Biggest Water Guzzlers

Earlier this year, Gov. Jerry Brown ordered the state's first mandatory water restrictions. Californians have had to cut their water use by an average of 25 percent, and we've done better than that for three straight months. But not everyone is on the conservation bandwagon. Host Queena Kim discussed it with Lance Williams, who investigated the water hogs for "Reveal," a radio show produced by The Center for Investigative Reporting. Reporter: Lance Williams

California Republicans React to Kevin McCarthy's Withdrawal from Speaker Race

There are political aftershocks being felt this morning in California from the quake that erupted when Congressman Kevin McCarthy took himself out of the running for speaker of the House of Representatives. McCarthy's colleagues and Republican watchers say the decision by the Bakersfield politician is a real loss for the Golden State. Reporter: John Myers.

How California Industries Could Fare Under New Pacific Trade Deal

A host of industries stand to reap big rewards from a trade pact reached this week by the U.S., Japan and 10 other Pacific Rim countries. The Trans-Pacific Partnership, as it's known, aims to lower trade barriers, loosen intellectual property laws and also promises tougher labor standards among other things. The pact still needs the endorsement of Congress before it takes effect. To help us unravel what the TPP could mean for California business and for its workers we're joined by KPCC business reporter Ben Bergman. Reporter: Ben Bergman

Unpredictable Brown Signs Flurry of Bills

It's that time of year in Sacramento, as Gov. Jerry Brown wields his pen and either signs bills into law or sweeps them into the dustbin with a big fat veto. We talk with Marisa Lagos, reporter for KQED's politics and government desk, about some of the legislation that received the governor's signature and also what he's squashed.

Rehab Centers Scramble to Keep Up as Drought Exacts Toll on Wildlife

We recently reported on large cockroaches moving indoors in search of water. But California's ongoing drought is also leading to other wildlife spending more time out in the open, searching for sustenance. Weak, emaciated animals are being found near hiking trails and roads, or even stuck in irrigation canals -- and it's putting a strain on wildlife rehab centers. Reporter: Alice Daniel

Story of an Execution Becomes Art in 'Last Day of Freedom'

In the documentary "Last Day of Freedom," Bill Babbitt tells the story of his brother Manny, who struggled with mental illness after an accident and two tours in Vietnam. Back from the war, he ended up on the streets and diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia. His brother Bill tried to protect him and took him in until he learned Manny had murdered an elderly woman in Sacramento. Bill wrestled with what to do. He decided to put his trust in the criminal justice system and turned him in. San Francisco Filmmakers Dee Hibbert-Jones and Nomi Talisman created an animated documentary that uses only one voice along with spare drawing to tell the deeply affecting story.

In a 100-Year-Old Car, It's All About the Journey

We call them cars now, but they were once called "horseless carriages." You know, the kind of car Henry Ford built 100 years ago. And you won't just see them in museums or parades. Laura Klivans caught up with a group of vivacious Bay Area seniors who bring these relics back to life.

The Blues, Alive and Well in a South Central LA Garage

On a sun-baked residential street in South Central Los Angeles, you hear the constant ebb and flow of jets cruising toward L.A. International Airport. Unless you're in Franklin Bell's garage, where you hear the sound of the blues. As Peter Gilstrap explains, a vital strain of American music is alive and well here. It's a small scene with a big heart, where age is venerated and experience translates to a soundtrack of African-American life.

Extra Funding for Cal State at Center of Labor Strife

California's annual budget is a game of winners and losers, and one of the perceived winners this year was the Cal State Universities. The system got an additional $97 million thanks in part to intense lobbying by students and faculty members. But the extra money has brought on a labor dispute with the faculty union, which is seeking a 5% raise. Management is offering a 2% raise. Reporter: Ana Tintocalis.

Vital Signs: Pomo Indian Teens Take on Substance Abuse Through Sports

Substance abuse has ravaged Native American communities for generations. For our series Vital Signs, we traveled to Lake County and met two Pomo Indian teenagers who want to change that through sports. They won a national essay competition about how addiction impacts their families. We caught up with them at the tail end of their football practice at Clear Lake High in Lakeport. Reporter: Farida Jhabvala Romero.

Help May Be Coming for Renters Without Water in Drought-Stricken Tulare County

Last month, we reported on how local and state governments have been slow to help rural Californians who've run out of water, and how renters in particular have been ignored. But help is on the way in Tulare County in the Central Valley, where close to 1,900 household wells have gone dry. Reporter: Sasha Khokha.

In Sacramento, Limits Are Few on Revolving Door Between Government and Private Jobs

We all know when you change jobs, you don't necessarily change your circle of contacts. In fact, the Rolodex is what makes so many people valuable to new employers. But what happens when that Rolodex was filled on the taxpayer's dime? Our series "California Political Muscle" continues with a close look at how lawmakers, lobbyists and others all take their influence with them when they travel through the revolving doors in Sacramento. ### "Behested Payments" Let Private Groups Curry Favor with Politicians; New Law Will Limit Disclosure

A little bit of government transparency was erased this month when Governor Jerry Brown signed a law that will make it harder for the public to know who's getting favors from elected officials. Lawmakers will no longer have to file disclosure documents when they ask a state agency to award taxpayer funded grants to private businesses. Those requests are part of a murky world of money that doesn't go to a lawmaker's political campaign, but rather to some cause or effort that's a pet project of the lawmaker. We take a look at behested payments in our special series, "California Political Muscle." Reporter: Marisa Lagos.

Google Fiber is fast, way faster than the Internet and TV service that AT&T or Comcast provides most customers these days. Which city will be the first in California to get it? Several are vying for the opportunity, including Palo Alto, Sunnyvale, Santa Clara, Mountain View, San Diego and Irvine. Reporter: Rachael Myrow.

Tree-Falling Danger Prompts Trail Closure in Giant Sequoia National Monument

One of the most popular and accessible trails in the Giant Sequoia National Monument in the Sierra Nevada is temporarily closed thanks to the drought. The U.S. Forest Service says it's too dangerous to let visitors walk where dead and dying ponderosa pine trees could potentially fall. Reporter: Alice Daniel.

Vital Signs: In Central Valley, Car Washes Raise Money for Memorials

As expensive as medical care can be, the cost of dying can also carry a hefty price tag. And when people can't afford services for loved ones, they get creative. In the Central Valley, that often means car washes, with kids holding up brightly colored posters about the people they've lost. As part of our community health series "Vital Signs," we head to a gas station in Central Fresno. Reporter: Kerry Klein.

Drought Survey: Jobs Drying Up for Indigenous Farmworkers

Hurricane Patricia today barreled toward Mexico, and all that rain may soon cause floods in Texas. But it'll do nothing to help California's punishing drought, now in its fourth year. The lack of rain here means fewer hands are needed for the harvest in Central Valley farm country, where growers are leaving some fields fallow, or planting crops like almonds, that require less labor. A new survey underscores how indigenous farmworkers from Mexico are paying an especially high price for the drought. Reporter: Sasha Khokha

Violence and Healing at Napa State Hospital: A Tale of 2 Families

California has five state psychiatric hospitals. Its patients are mostly criminal defendants found not guilty by reason of insanity, or incompetent to stand trial. It was five years ago this week that a staff member was murdered by a patient at Napa State Hospital. It's rare for the media to get into Napa State Hospital. The administration cites patient privacy and security for strictly limiting access. But Frank and Barbara Brackin recently invited host Scott Shafer to join them on a visit to their son, Shawn. #### Reflecting on San Bernardino

San Bernardino is nestled below a mountain range, and sits just off the I-10 freeway. It's the sort of place Southern Californians zoom by on their way to Palm Springs or Las Vegas. But this week's mass shootings have put a spotlight on the city. In the 1990s, it was known as a "murder capital," and gun violence remains stubbornly high. It's struggled with high rates of poverty and in 2012, the city filed for bankruptcy. Our Los Angeles Bureau Chief Steven Cuevas lived in the region for years, and has been covering the events of this week. We talk with him about how residents there are feeling.

As 2015 draws to a close, The California Report's pop music critic Steve Hochman joins us to talk about some of his musical MVPs.

Ragtime Lives on at a Southern California Chinese Restaurant

In a small restaurant in Monrovia, a handful of faithful music fans meet once a month to try keep the genre they love alive. The group's members range in age from their teens to their 90s, all bound by a deep passion for ragtime. Peter Gilstrap has more.

New Health Laws to Take Effect Aimed at LGBT Californians

Several new laws aimed at improving the health of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people take effect January first. They include new regulations around sperm donors and the voluntary collection of health data. Reporter: April Dembosky

Interpreters Finally Coming to California's Civil Courts

There's no requirement that civil courts in California use interpreters, and that leaves non-English-speakers at a huge disadvantage in dealing with evictions, divorce or child custody, etc. Now the state judicial council has decided to offer free interpretation for all within two years. But where will the strapped state court system find the $92 million to do it? Reporter: Sukey Lewis

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Technology, Terrorism

Tree Gloves: The New Fashion in Citrus Country

Orange and lemon growers turn on giant wind machines during chilly nights this time of year to keep the fruit from freezing in the orchards. But those machines are expensive and take fuel to run. Now, citrus farmers are trying out a new, cheaper, technology, something you might notice if you drive through farm country. Reporter: Sasha Khoka

Keeping the Rose Bowl Parade Safe

Tens of thousands of people will pack the streets of Pasadena this Friday morning for the 127th parade and afternoon Rose Bowl game. But there's a few clouds gathered above the parade this year. In the aftermath of the San Bernardino shootings, the Rose celebration earned special status from the Department of Homeland

Security, placing it among the top potential targets for terrorism. Pasadena's chief of police Phillip Sanchez says that means access to more federal resources to insure public safety. Reporter: Steven Cuevas

Good News Expected from First Sierra Snowpack Survey

For drought watchers, the season's first official survey of the Sierra snowpack should offer some encouragement today. Remote sensing shows the statewide snowpack is about 10% above normal for this date. Reporter: Craig Miller

State to Roll Out New Prescription Drug Database

Next week, California will roll out an overhauled prescription drug database. The old one had been plagued with technical problems. The updated version will help doctors identify patients at risk for prescription drug abuse. Reporter: April Dembosky

Law Will Make It Easier for Crime Victims to Get Help

Big changes are coming Jan. 1 to how California treats victims of crime. A new law will go into effect aimed at making it easier for people to get services and treatment. Reporter: Marisa Lagos

Issues: Local, Government, Education, Technology, Energy, Labor

California Gets Exemption from Federal ID Law

California has been granted another reprieve from having to comply with a federal ID law. This is the third extension California has gotten to get into compliance with the REAL ID Act, a federal law created in response to 9-11. It requires states to more closely scrutinize the backgrounds of people before they get driver licenses and ID cards. Reporter: Katie Orr

Educators Hoping to Solve Tech Problems with Standardized Tests in New Year

Public school educators say they're stepping up their preparation for California's standardized tests in the spring by focusing on how to avoid last year's tech problems. Reporter: Adolfo Guzman-Lopez

2016 Brings New Laws on Climate Change and a Minimum Wage Boost

New laws taking effect on January 1st include mandates that California get half of its energy from renewable sources, and doubling energy efficiency requirements for existing buildings by 2030. The minimum wage will also move to $10.00 statewide. Reporter: Marisa Lagos
