April 1, 2013-June 30, 2013 (Q2)
Program: KVPR/KPRX's Valley Edition
Hosts: Juanita Stevenson/Joe Moore

04/02/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Education, Social, Political, Parks & Recreation, Environmental

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take the listener to one of the many strawberry stands that dot the San Joaquin Valley's rural roads. But how often do these vine-ripened strawberries reach school menus? FM 89's Rebecca Plevin explores the first partnership ever to exist between Fresno Unified School District and a Reedley farmer to bring local berries to cafeterias.

Segment 2: Just a few days before opening day at Chuckchansi Park in Fresno, high school students from a local charter school are rushing to build and plant what they call a community garden. In an effort to maintain their mantra "Farm Grown" the Fresno Grizzlies have partnered with ACEL Charter School to build a garden behind the scoreboard at the stadium. The group hopes to raise awareness of farm to fork in the region.

Segment 3: Also on this week's program we turn to Fresno State communication professor Diane Blair for a discussion surrounding the proper role of the first lady in contemporary society. The conversation stems from the criticism that erupted from Hollywood and the beltway after First Lady Michelle Obama took the stage at this year's Academy Awards. Blair says that when it comes to public praise or criticism, it often tells us more about society as a whole than about the first lady herself.

Segment 4: We turn to a one on one between Valley Public Radio Reporter Rebecca Plevin and Yosemite National Park's Kathleen Morris to learn more about changes that might be in store for park visitors. Features like Half Dome and Yosemite Falls are some of the most iconic images of the Golden State. But with those crowds come problems, and the age old debate of how best to balance nature with public access. A new project from the National Parks Service aims to chart a course for the management of the park, and the river which runs through it.

Segment 5: Lastly, Valley Edition explores the age old rivalry between two Valley cities — Bakersfield and Fresno. Residents from either city at one point in time have turned their nose up to the other. In fact most Fresnoans and Bakersfielders are familiar with the term, "At least we're not Bakersfield" or "At least we're not Fresno." Valley Edition Host Juanita Stevenson explores the rivalry with local experts from both communities. Together they try to get down to the root of the rivalry and come up with ideas about how the two communities can come together.

04/09/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Immigration, Social, Transportation, Education, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at how the Associated Press's decision to no longer use the term illegal immigrant in reference to those who relocate to the United States illegally will affect the region. What does the change of language mean for local media outlets that cover immigration regularly? Valley Edition host Juanita Stevenson leads a conversation around the subject with NPR Ombudsman Edward Schumacher-Matos, Juan Esparza the Editor in Chief of the local Spanish newspaper Vida En El Valle and Sabina Gonzalez the regional director for Communities for a New California.

Segment 2: Also on the program, Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero reports on a major traffic flow change in Fresno. Earlier this month the New York Times touted Los Angeles for being the first major city in the world to synchronize every one of its 4,500 traffic signals. In Fresno, a similar project is already, which could make commutes on Shaw Avenue quicker by the end of April.

Segment3: In this piece, we discuss the change to come to standard of education across the nation come this next school year. Common Core State Standards are supposed to provide a clear understanding of what students are expected to learn, so teachers and parents know what they need to do to help them. We discuss the varying opinions about the standards and the possibility of a new chapter in education for California schools. Chiming in on the conversation are Camilla Sutherland, the School Improvement Coordinator for the Fresno County Office of Education and Jonathan Dueck, the STEM Coordinator for the Fresno County Office of Education.

Segment 4: We end the show with a conversation about a local film festival. The ninth annual Fresno Film Festival hosted by Fresno Filmworks will feature seven programs with 21 movies from 12 different countries over three days in Fresno's Tower District. John Moses, Fresno Filmworks president, joins Stevenson with a dialogue about the festival.

04/16/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Healthcare, Poor, Government, Agriculture, Children & Youth, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we step into the doors of a Merced health clinic that serves the homeless. The City of Merced was hit hard by the economic crash and foreclosure crisis in the past decade. In an already poor and medically under-served region, the recession created a new group of homeless people who have very limited access to medical care. But one determined doctor, aided by Golden Valley Health Centers staff and student volunteers from UC Merced, is striving to ensure these people don't fall through the cracks.

Segment 2: Also on Valley Edition, we take a look at legislation that would require anyone with evidence of animal abuse in slaughterhouses and farms to report within in five days of finding out. For the past few decades journalists and activists have gone undercover in order to document cases of animal abuse at slaughterhouses and dairies across the nation. That's led the livestock industry to push for legislation in several states that would make producing those videos a crime. In California, one Valley lawmaker is pushing for a different approach, but not without controversy.

Segment 3: We talk about how child abuse can be prevented in schools. Esther Franco, the executive director of the Fresno Council of Child Abuse Prevention, joins host Juanita Stevenson in a discussion about early reporting, child abuse prevention in schools and educating community members about the issue. The segment is in honor of Child Abuse Prevention Month.

Segment 4: We end the show with a conversation about a scavenger hunt that will take place in downtown Fresno on May 11. The Great Historic Fresno Scavenger Hunt is part of the National Historic Preservation Week celebrations in Fresno. The hunt starts at Warnor's Center for the Arts, Downtown Fresno. Teams/Individuals may register at <http://historicfresnoscavenger.eventbrite.com/>

Issues: Local, Government, Health, Minorities, Agriculture, Business, Transportation

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look across the region at health issues, innovation, the future of high-speed rail in California and more. More than 100 languages are spoken in the San Joaquin Valley. In area hospitals and doctors' offices, that creates a need for medical interpreters who can bridge the communication and culture gap between providers and patients. And that need is only expected to increase next year when the Affordable Care Act is implemented. A new bill would provide additional funding and support to the Medi-Cal program to provide interpreter services to patients who speak limited English. But could it also help break down the medical and cultural barriers that can lead to health problems? FM 89's Rebecca Plevin reports on the issue.

Segment 2: Plevin also brings a report on a regional disease that has long been perceived as a neglected. But this week, a Central Valley Congressman brought valley fever to the attention of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Plevin reports on Congressman Kevin McCarthy's meeting with the CDC, and his short-term and long-term goals for valley fever.

Segment 3: The next segment of the program focuses on a group that has a goal to create a culture of innovation in the region. The San Joaquin Valley is known for its agriculture exploits and groundbreaking farming techniques but in Fresno a new sort of innovation is developing. The Fresno Grizzlies along with Fresno Ideaworks held the first ever Mini Maker Faire in Fresno on April 21. Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero reports on the event and the budding culture of innovation in the region.

Segment 4: Also on Valley Edition, a commentary about food culture and the economy in the region. Earlier this Spring the Fresno Food Expo brought together valley food businesses with regional and national buyers, as well as hundreds of ordinary local residents. But Del Rey farmer and guest commentator Nikiko Masumoto says all the buzz about food products, left her dreaming of something more meaningful, a focus on local food culture.

Segment 5: We end the program with a journalist-to-journalist interview between Valley Edition host Juanita Stevenson and Fresno Bee reporter Tim Sheehan. Tim has been on the high-speed rail beat since 2010. He provides insight into the future of the rail and what it has been like as a journalist documenting high-speed rail.

04/30/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Energy, Health, Healthcare, Education, Agriculture

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we explore issues that may impact the region as a whole. Our reporting team tackles regional issues that include advocacy for potable water in rural communities, hydraulic fracking and restorative justice in Valley schools. As well as a festival celebrating honey in the region. Earlier this year the California water board drafted recommendations to address nitrate pollution in groundwater and presented them to the legislature. One of the main recommendations is to create a new funding source to provide safe drinking water to poor, disadvantaged communities. Now, growers, affected community members, and legislators are debating where that funding should come from. FM 89's Rebecca Plevin has the story.

Segment 2: Also on the show, could California be on the verge of a new gold rush? That's the finding of a new study from USC about petroleum deposits that lie deep beneath the Central Valley known as the Monterey Shale. But extracting that oil isn't easy, and it would require the use of a number of advanced techniques, including hydraulic fracturing. And that's attracted concerns from environmental groups and state regulators. Valley Public Radio's Joe Moore reports on some recent developments in the fracking debate.

Segment 3: Joe Moore also reports on the dramatic rise in cases of Valley Fever in recent years and how that is causing big problems in California's prison system. Moore reports on why the federal office that runs health care in the state's prisons is ordering some prisoners out of the valley.

Segment 4: Next the show focuses on Fresno Unified School District's new approach to discipline known as restorative justice. Valley Edition Host Juanita Stevenson discusses the topic with Ambra Dorsey, the Executive Director of the Dept. of Prevention & Intervention for Fresno Unified.

Segment 5: We end the program with a conversation about a Valley staple: honey. Felix Muzquiz, the executive director of the Vineyard Farmers Market Association in Fresno, talks with host Juanita Stevenson about the significance of honey bees in the region and about a honey festival that will take place Saturday, May 4 from 10 AM to 12 PM at a local farmers market.

05/07/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Education, Government, Politics, Healthcare, Health, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we cover the high number of suspensions and expulsion of Fresno Unified students has school board members exploring the district's discipline policies. The board recently voted to adopt an alternative form of punishing students called restorative justice. It encourages young people to take responsibility for their wrong doing and make amends to their victims. Valley Edition host Juanita Stevenson reports on a Fresno middle school that is ahead of the curve when it comes to implementing new disciplinary policies. Ed Gomes, the principal of Yosemite Middle School in Fresno, sits down with Stevenson to discuss the school's success.

Segment 2: Also on the show, there's a paradox in many of the reactions to Governor Jerry Brown's proposal to give California schools more flexibility on how they spend their state tax dollars. There's general support around the Capitol for breaking down the funding walls surrounding several dozen programs. But as Capitol Public Radio's Ben Adler reports from Sacramento, everyone seems to have a favorite program they want to protect.

Segment 3: Capitol Public Radio's Health Care Reporter Pauline Bartolone reports on a possible help to solve a looming doctor shortage in California. And with millions more people in the state expected to get health coverage next year, lawmakers are proposing ways to make sure basic care is available in areas that need it. One bill would allow nurse practitioners to treat patients without consulting a physician.

Segment 4: Valley Public Radio's Rebecca Plevin brings an update on the regional disease valley fever. In early May, the federal receiver overseeing health care in California's prisons ordered the state to remove inmates at high risk of contracting valley fever from two Central Valley prisons. On Monday May 6, the state Department of Corrections replied to that directive.

Segment 5: We end the show with a discussion about the 27th Annual Bakersfield Jazz Festival. FM89's Joe Moore speaks with the festival director Doug Davis about Valley talent as well as big names to grace the CSU Bakersfield amphitheater.

05/14/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Education, Health, Government, Minorities, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we discuss the future of one of Central California's educational centers. A search committee is on the lookout for a new Fresno State President, but not all are happy about the way the committee is handling the search. Valley Edition Host Juanita Stevenson leads a discussion with a California State University trustee, a professor, a local citizen and a student about the search for a new president at Fresno State. This is Dr. John D. Welty's last semester as president of the college.

Segment 2: Also on Valley Edition, FM89's Rebecca Plevin has covered the disease known as Valley Fever for nearly four years. Plevin's reporting gained national attention when NPR's Morning Edition featured a piece on Valley Fever. In this week's Valley Edition we learn more about one Central California winemaker featured in that story, and how his life has been upended by this sometimes deadly disease.

Segment 3: Capitol Public Radio's Health Care Reporter Pauline Bartolone reports on what California lawmakers are considering a measure that would tax sugary drinks a penny per fluid ounce. The proposal is intended to cap soda consumption in order to reduce obesity rates. Bartolone has found a range of opinions on the soda tax.

Segment 4: Rebecca Plevin interviews one of 10 grassroots immigrant leaders showcased in the "No Longer Strangers" performance that is part of Tamjevi. The collaborative hopes to give a voice to underreported people groups in the region and a goal to restore cultural heritage among Valley immigrants.

Segment 5: We end the show with a discussion about a local film festival with a twist. In an age where top grossing box office films dominate the big screen, a local festival known as SwedeFest celebrates the very same films in a new way. A phone with a video camera is all you need. Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero interviews SwedeFest's organizers Bryan Harley and Roque Rodriguez about how to create your own short film based on your favorite movie of the past, or present.

05/21/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Transportation, Agriculture, Law Enforcement, Youth, Arts & Entertainment, Education

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look into stories and issues across the region including water, possibly reducing the the legal limit for blood alcohol content for drivers, an update surrounding a Bakersfield man who was beaten to death by law enforcement and more. This weekend the stage of the Saroyan Theatre will be filled with hundreds of young musicians, with hundreds more in the audience. It's all part of an en effort by a Fresno composer to break down the boundaries between classical music and mariachi, and to bring young audiences into the world of music, in a fun, interactive way. FM89's Rebecca Plevin reports the story.

Segment 2: Also on Valley Edition, host Juanita Stevenson discusses with state and national leaders about the National Transportation Safety Board's recent proposal to decrease the DUI alcohol blood level form .08 to .05. Joining Stevenson are Deborah Hersman, chairman for the National Transportation Safety Board, and Chris Cochran, assistant director of Marketing and Public Affairs for the California Office of Traffic Safety.

Segment 3: Next, Steven Mayer, a Bakersfield Californian reporter, brings an update from Kern County concerning the Bakersfield man who beaten by Kern County Sheriff's deputies.

Segment 4: Ending the show, Valley Public Radio's Joe Moore interviews Fresno State President John Welty who will retire this summer.

05/28/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Crime & Punishment, Transportation, Social, Minorities

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we explore some of the issues that matter to the residents of Central California, including the expansion of Highway 99, a Fresno based garbage debate and more. But first, reducing overcrowding at California prisons is not easy. Generally, inmates must either be released or given more space, which is expensive. But there is a third option. Inmates can be sent to fire camps. That's a cornerstone of Governor Jerry Brown's plan to reduce prison overcrowding in response to a federal court order. State Government Reporter Katie Orr takes a closer look at what these camps entail.

Segment 2: Whether you're a motorist in Bakersfield, Fresno, Merced or the towns in between, Drivers in the Central Valley know how rough it is to be stuck in traffic on Highway 99. But a series of highway widening projects on the route may eventually alleviate congestion issues. Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero asks Caltrans spokeswoman Gloria Rodriguez about when Valley residents will notice a difference.

Segment 3: Also on the program, Fresno's Serbian community is throwing a one day festival where Serbian and Russian culture will be celebrated. Valley Edition Host Juanita Stevenson interviews Father George Gligich of Saint Peter Serbian Orthodox Church in Fresno to discuss the annual Serbian Food Festival to be held on June 1.

Segment 4: The last story focuses on an issue that has proved to be important to Fresno County residents. The issue trash collection, represented by Measure G in an upcoming local special election to be held June 4. Stevenson questions members from both sides of the issue, starting with Former Fresno County Supervisor Dough Vagim who opposes Measure G. In the last 15 minutes of the show Fresno Mayor Ashley Swearengin chimes in on her support of privatizing the regions waste collection.

06/04/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Business, Education, Social, Minorities, Transportation, Law Enforcement

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we talk about ice cream in the Valley, Fresno State's new president, the dispute over bike lanes in Fresno and police brutality in the region. The Central Valley gets hot, really hot. And everyone likes to cool down with a frozen treat. We all have fond memories of ice cream, whether it's a hand-dipped cone from California-favorite Fosters Freeze, a tropical-tasting paleta, or a couple scoops from your local ice cream parlor. FM89's series "Summer Scoop" digs into the Valley's ice cream history, its role as a major ice cream producing region, and what ice cream means in rural communities today. For generations, residents of small towns in the San Joaquin Valley have gathered at Foster's Freeze. Sure, people love Foster's soft-serve ice cream, especially once it's dipped in chocolate. But why has this chain withstood the test of time in rural communities and continues to be the place people flock to celebrate after the big football game or graduation night? To kick off our new series Summer Scoop, Valley Public Radio's Rebecca Plevin examines the role of this ice cream shop in the Valley's small towns.

Segment 2: Also on Valley Edition, host Joe Moore interviews Fresno State's new president. Joseph Castro speaks about what he hopes to bring to the campus and the region. Castro is the first Fresno State President from the Valley and is the first Latino president in the university's history.

Segment 3: Joe Moore leads a conversation about Fresno's master bike plan? He attempts to answer whether the plan is dead or in still in the works. He is joined by Byron Watkins from I Bike Fresno and Bryan Jones the Deputy Transportation Director for the City of Carlsbad. Jones helped implement the plan when he was the division manager/city traffic engineer for the City of Fresno.

Segment 4: Ending the program, Joe Moore explores the emerging issue of police violence in Central California. With the Sal Silva case just behind the City of Bakersfield, Moore questions how police brutality is dealt with across the Valley. He is joined by Camila Chavez, the executive director of the Dolores Huerta Foundation, and Rick Rasmussen an Independent Reviewer for the City of Fresno.

06/11/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Agriculture, Politics, Government, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a journey across the region to highlight what matters to the those who live in Central California. Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero reports on how the region is a major player when it comes to ice cream production.

Segment 2: Valley Edition host Joe Moore interviews Jeff Cummings from Fresno State about Fresno's Measure G.

Segment 3: Moore also speaks with Fresno's new poet laureate, and a director from the Kern County Nut Festival.

06/18/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Education, Agriculture, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a look at the end of the school year and the start of summer. Valley Public Radio's Rebecca Plevin reports on how one Valley school's restorative justice program outshines many in the region.

Segment 2: Valley Edition host Joe Moore interviews Mas, Marcy and Nikiko Masumoto about their new book 'The Perfect Peach.'

Segment 3: Later in the program FM89 reporter Rebecca Plevin talks with Joe Moore about Valley Public Radio's new book club 'Homegrown.'

06/25/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Healthcare, Crime & Punishment, Government, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: On this weeks show, Valley Public Radio's Rebecca Plevin reports that within 90 days all inmates at risk of catching valley fever in Central California prisons must be relocated.

Segment 2: Also on Valley Edition, host Joe Moore chats with Fresno Bee Editorial Page Editor Bill McEwen about local and state politics.

Segment 3: Moore also interviews the executive producer of Fresno's Woodward Shakespeare Festival about summer shows. Ending the program local musician Karen Marguth talks about her current success as a jazz musician. She performs two songs from her latest CD.

L.A. Voters Will Choose New Mayor Tuesday

May is a month not usually associated with elections. But on Tuesday, Angelenos will choose a successor to Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa, who is termed out. Two local politicians, City Councilman Eric Garcetti and City Controller Wendy Gruel, are vying to replace Villaraigosa in next week's runoff. Scott Shafer spoke with Raphael Sonenshein, executive director of the Pat Brown Institute for Public Affairs at Cal State Los Angeles.

A Mascot Brings Smiles to Homeless Kids on Skid Row

The next mayor of Los Angeles will have plenty of nitty-gritty issues to tackle -- including homelessness. Some 2,500 people are living on the streets on the infamous Skid Row. It's not the kind of place you'd expect to find clowns or balloon artists. But now a new group of volunteers is throwing birthday parties for homeless kids. As part of our occasional series "What's Your Story," Caitlin Esch introduces us to Mary Davis, who moonlights as the mascot "Skiddy Cat." Reporter: Caitlin Esch

Young Immigration Activist Struggles to Balance Courage with Fear

Comprehensive immigration reform inched forward in Washington this week, when a bipartisan group in the House of Representatives reached agreement on how to address key issues like a path to citizenship. No one has more riding on the outcome than the 11 million undocumented immigrants living in the U.S. Many of them are young people -- students anxious about their futures. As part of our series "Graduation Day," Jasmin Lopez brings us the story of Marco Perez, a high school senior struggling to balance his courage and his fears. This story was produced in collaboration with the USC Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism. Reporter: Jasim Lopez

The Orange Peels Fly to the Sun and the Moon

The press release for "Sun Moon," the new album by veteran Bay Area band the Orange Peels, says that the quartet "finds itself navigating the confluence of post rock, indiepop, space rock, nouveau psychedelia, and prog rock, with melody as its only compass." And then it adds, with a bit of cheekiness, "That's probably what some critic will say anyway." Our critic, Steve Hochman, says that's about right. Reporter: Steve Hochman

Psychiatrists Testify of Preventable Deaths in Prisons

A ruling is expected soon in a decades-old lawsuit over the psychiatric care of California prisoners. At a recent hearing in Sacramento, a psychiatrist said the staff is too small to meet the needs of 6,000 severely ill patients in the prison system. A judge has said the ruling in the case will favor inmates, and he'll ask a court monitor to investigate staffing levels at the Department of State Hospital's psychiatric units. One of State's Two Car-Battery Recyclers Reopens

If you've ever had to swap out an old car battery, chances are good it wound up in Southern California. There are just two places in the state licensed to strip lead from old car batteries, both near Los Angeles. State regulators with the Department of Toxic Substances Control forced one of them to shut down in April. The company went to court, and got the go ahead from a judge to restart. After 40 Years, This Midwife Is Only Getting Busier

Nora McNeill never thought she'd be a midwife. But when a friend asked for assistance with a home birth, she said she would help. Almost 40 years later, McNeill has delivered more than 1,500 babies throughout rural Northern California. Lorraine Dechter of Northstate Public Radio interviewed Nora McNeill, as part of our "What's Your Story" series.

Supreme Court Strikes Down DOMA, Vacates Prop. 8 Ruling

The U.S. Supreme Court has struck down the Defense of Marriage Act, ruling 5-4 that it is unconstitutional. It also vacated the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal's decision on Proposition 8. Scott Shafer and Rachael Myrow discuss the decisions, and what comes next for California.

Stanford Study Gives Charter Schools a Mixed Grade

A new study from Stanford is fueling the debate over whether charter schools do a better job of educating students than traditional public schools. The researchers found California students who attend charters get a boost in reading but fall behind in math.

Thousands Celebrate in Castro After Rulings

Thousands came to San Francisco's Castro neighborhood on Wednesday night to celebrate the Supreme Court rulings on the Defense of Marriage Act and Proposition 8. Reporter: Bryan Goebel

Happy Crowds Gather at City Hall, Where It Started Nine Years Ago

Hours before the Supreme Court issued its rulings, hundreds of people streamed into San Francisco City Hall -- where jumbo screens were set up to broadcast the news. Couples there say they look ahead to when the marriages can begin again. Reporter: Scott Shafer

Those Opposed to Gay Marriage Don't See Decision as Final

For those still opposed to same sex marriage, what happens next is an open question. Some worry that churches could be sued if they refuse to perform same-sex weddings, but legal experts agree that a church's refusal to perform same-sex marriages is soundly protected by the First Amendment. Reporter: Steven Cuevas

What Benefits Does Erasure of DOMA Bestow?

California's same-sex couples can now look forward to more than 1000 federal benefits: tax breaks, pensions and immigration rights tied to marriage. Reporter: Mina Kim

Issues: Local, Immigration, Women's Rights

It's no secret that farmworkers do some of the hardest jobs in California: sweltering under the summer sun, picking grapes or harvesting lettuce. But one secret about life in the fields is the problem of sexual harassment--verbal abuse, even assault and rape. Yet many immigrant farmworker women are afraid to report abuse. Same-Sex Couples Line Up to Get Married in San Francisco

Two days after the Supreme Court struck down California's Proposition 8, same-sex couples lined up to get married at San Francisco's City Hall. After word spread that the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has lifted its freeze on weddings, same-sex couples started taking out marriage licenses.

California Initiative Process Might Face New Scrutiny After Prop. 8 Ruling

Wednesday's Supreme Court ruling that the sponsors of Proposition 8 had no right to defend it in federal court leaves one major question: Who will represent the voters' intentions when state officials refuse to? As the California Report's Sacramento bureau chief Scott Detrow explains, the Supreme Court's decision could have implications for the state's initiative process. Reporter: Scott Detrow

Harvey Milk: An Archive of Hope

Prop. 8 wasn't the first ballot measure targeting the rights of gays and lesbians in California. In 1978, voters rejected Prop. 6, also known as the "Briggs Initiative," which would have banned gay teachers from classrooms across the state. One of the leading voices against Prop. 6 was San Francisco Supervisor Harvey Milk, the first openly gay elected official in the nation. Milk was assassinated three weeks later along with San Francisco Mayor George Moscone. To mark the 35th anniversary of his death, a compilation of Milk's writings, speeches and campaign memorabilia has been published.

Farmworker's Sexual Harassment Claim Leads to Trial, But Odds Are Long in Criminal Cases

Many supporters of immigration reform say without changes to their legal status, undocumented workers are vulnerable and exploited. That's especially true for the women who work in California's fields. Central Valley bureau chief Sasha Khokha introduces us to one of the few California farmworkers to testify against an alleged rapist in a criminal trial. Reporter: Sasha Khokha

Determined Farmworker Helps Others Confront Sexual Harassment in the Fields

Farm work is only one of Sandra Garcia's jobs. On many afternoons, she goes from a full day in the fields to a meeting of the organization she founded 25 years ago, Campesinas Unidas -- the United Women Farmworkers of the San Joaquin Valley. Reporter: Grace Rubenstein
