The Black History of the Banjo. 2/24/24 at 1pm. Afropop Worldwide traces the history of this most American of instruments from its ancestors in West Africa through the Caribbean and American South and into the present, as a new generation of Black women artists reclaim the banjo as their own. Rhiannon Giddens, Bassekou Kouyate, Bela Fleck and more talk claw-hammers, trad jazz, Appalachian folk, African ancestors, and the on-going story of American music, which would be woefully incomplete without a Black history of the banjo. Produced by Ben Richmond.

International Women's Day: Friday 3/8/24 from 9am to 1pm featured music by women composers exclusively, as part of our International Women's Day observance.

Her Music/Her Story: 3/8/24 at 2p PST. Women at the top of the field in classical music pay tribute to the women who have inspired them. Luminaries like multiple Grammy Award winner JoAnn Falletta, BBC Proms soloist Jamie Barton, The Marvels composer Laura Karpman, and many more introduce music by composers like Florence Price, Clara Schumann, Lucija Garuta, as well as performances from Isatah Kanneh-Mason, Marian Anderson, and even Ella Fitzgerald.

Illuminating Invisible Women with Historian Carolyn Zola: Friday 3/22/24 at 7pm. The stories we tell about ourselves have long focused on men's experiences. The story of the United States is no exception: American women, especially working women, have not been included in our history the way that men have. Carolyn Zola is one of the budding historians working to rectify the invisibility of American women in the stories we tell. Carolyn's particular interest is in the history of working women in cities. In the histories we read, we are led to believe that women stayed home and were taken care of by the men in their lives. That was only true for the well-off and the married middle class. For the poor and for women who lost their male "head of household," work was a necessity. But these women weren't recorded in most of the documents that survive today. Many were not literate. If they wrote letters, they were not viewed as important enough to keep. Their diaries, if they had time to write them, were not preserved as a vital part of history. These women are invisible.

News:

All Presidential special Live coverage was carried on this service.

"Fresh Air" items listed in "NPR" category only aired on the NWPB News Service.

On the NWPB News Service, every Sunday at 10:00AM, we air an episode of Unreserved. Host Rosanna Deerchild takes you straight into Indigenous communities across North America and offers real talk from the people behind the headlines, with a soundtrack from the best in Indigenous music.

BBC Witness: Black History Month Friday 2/16 at 7pm. A special hour-long edition of Witness History from the BBC World Service, bringing together some incredible interviews looking at the African-American experience. Told by people who were there, we hear stories that are fascinating, harrowing, and inspiring.

BBC Witness History: Women's History Month 2024 Friday 3/29/24 at 7pm PST. An all-new collection of stories from the BBC's Witness History program, telling extraordinary stories of women in history. We hear about the female poet who defied a regime, meet the Australian politician who made a ground-breaking attack on misogyny, and hear the story of a woman who was arrested in Sudan – for wearing trousers.
