CEO of Sunbeam Family Services, Jim Priest and host David Edwards, discuss the steps of forgiveness. One thing we need to remember is that when one member of the family is hurt it can affect the entire family. We teach our children to say I'm sorry, but there is more that needs to be done. We need to ask the person we have offended for forgiveness. Forgiveness is not instant, it is a process. Sunbeam offers counseling services for all ages. God has given us physicians for healing our bodies and counselors for our minds. Just as Peter did we try to put a number and how many times we should forgive. However, our example is our Lord and He never stops forgiving us when we ask.

Pam Timmons with Good Shepherd Ministries and Terry Bates bring attention to a very important ministry. Good Shepherd ministry began in 1977 when one doctor offered his services free of charge at the 1st Baptist church. The ministry has now grown into its own clinic. They offer three different services all free of charge: medical, dental and pharmaceutical. To participate the patient must be low income with no insurance. Not only do doctors and nurses volunteer their time, over 1000 students volunteer as well. Pharmaceutical companies donate medications. The clinic also works with some pilot programs such as the new Hep-C medications. Just these medications alone can cost $1000 a day, so would otherwise not be available to these patients.

Jeremiah Braudick from Crossings Community Center and host, Dolly Velazquez discuss the community center and services. Crossings Community Church opened the community center in an area that needed help. The mission of the center is to proclaim the name of Jesus, while meeting community needs. The church listened to the residents to determine the type of needs in the community. The center found that families in the area had a huge need to bring together the family unit. The center offers recreational activities they families can do together. The offer life skills, mentorship, Bible studies, even a cooking class on how to prepare a meal under $1.73 per serving. They also work with nearby schools by giving supplies, cleaning grounds, along with after school programs.

Vicky Robinson, Ministry of Jesus, talks with host David Edwards about substance abuse and the family. Addiction is a family disease and it affects every member, emotionally, physically and financially. Addiction does not happen in just one area of society, it is in low income to the wealthiest. Addicts and families both will face denial. Denial is the body's shock absorber to handle coping with reality. The first and most important step to recovery is breaking denial and asking for help. The most powerful prayer we can pray is 'Help Me.'. Many churches offer recovery programs including Celebrate Recovery, which is based only on the 12 steps found in the book of James. We cannot just say 'stop it' the addict and the family need help.

Addictions and solutions are the issues discussed by Chuck Robinson and David Edwards. It is estimated that 20.8 million Americans have an addiction of some kind. Addictions come in many forms: alcohol, drugs, gambling, and sex are common ones. However the word says all have fallen short of the glory of God and we are all sinners saved by grace, so we are all recovering from something. The answer of course is Jesus Christ. But if someone came for prayer for a medical condition we would pray for healing and then suggest a medical doctor. When dealing with an addiction we should pray and refer to a counselor or program to help in the healing. Recovery is a process, it is a constant effort that takes time.

CBN News Reporter Abigail Robertson Reports: A street drug called "molly" is gaining popularity with high school and college kids. Many think it's a harmless, non-addictive party drug, so they don't think twice about taking a little molly before a night out with friends. But one mother's tragic story shows how that way of thinking can have deadly consequences. Two years ago, Dede Goldsmith awoke to a call in the middle of the night telling her that her daughter was dying in a hospital hours after she had collapsed inside a concert venue. Nineteen-year-old Shelley Goldsmith, a high school valedictorian and college honor scholar, had taken the drug known as MDMA, commonly called molly, on her way to a concert. Elyse Eilerman was a friend of Shelley's who was with her the night she passed away. The same weekend Shelley died, MDMA claimed the lives of two other young adults attending a music festival in New York. Molly, short for "molecule," is a stimulant that takes users on a six- to eight-hour euphoric high. It is thought to be a pure form of its parent drug ecstasy, but in reality, there is hardly anything pure about it. Recent studies show that only 15 percent of molly drugs sold are really what they claim to be. A third sold under that name contained substances such as cocaine, bath salts, and baking soda, while more than half contained no MDMA at all. Many people think only the tainted molly carries fatal consequences, but even the purest form can be lethal. So why is this drug so appealing to college kids around the country? Eilerman believes it's because people focus more on the high and less on the danger. Dr. William Strudwick, director of the Emergency Center at Washington's Providence Hospital, says users take molly for the sense of euphoria the drug gives them, but they don't consider the negative consequences it can have on the body. These other problems include seizures, heart attacks, severe dehydration, and hyperthermia. Doctors ruled Shelley Goldsmith's cause of death as hyperthermia because her body temperature rose to fatal levels. Her autopsy revealed MDMA was the only substance in her system at the time of death, proving the drug's deadly potential. Eilerman said that taking molly in a crowded, hot venue puts you at an even greater risk of fatal reactions to the drug. Since Shelley's death, many people close to her are raising awareness about the dangers of this so-called harmless drug. Her mom is urging lawmakers to amend the 2003 Rave Act, an act that was put in place to shut down underground raves where promoters encourage illicit drug use. The current law discourages organizers from using commonsense safety measures to protect their patrons. Goldsmith said venue operators won't implement small safety measures like free water, cool down spaces, and appropriate number of medical personnel to deal with emergencies because they fear it could be seen as encouraging drug use and subject them to criminal prosecution. She believes if Shelley had known more about molly and its risks, she would be alive today. This would have been Shelley's senior year at the University of Virginia. After her death, Eilerman helped start the Shooting Star Foundation, to spread the word around the university community about the dangers of drug use. Each year on the anniversary of Shelley's death, they commemorate her life and share with students lifesaving information that could help others. Eilerman and the members of the Shooting Star Foundation have been working hard to encourage their peers to think twice about the risks of taking molly in hopes of preventing other tragedies like the death of Shelley Goldsmith.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: The goal of any nation is to extend the life span of its population. Here in America, that number has grown regularly with the average life expectancy close to 79 years. Last year, however, the U.S. saw its first decline in more than two decades. A major reason behind that drop can be traced to what's happening in rural areas. Instead of falling, death rates are actually rising, especially for middle-aged white women. Doctors point to obesity and smoking as causes, but there are others. Small towns across the country are dealing with an alarming increase in deaths from accidental opioid overdoses. Opioids are a type of narcotic that include prescription pain killers as well as heroin. Other reasons for the increased death rate are alcohol abuse and suicide. In recent years, death rates rose a reported 30 percent among middle-aged, white females living in rural areas, according to research from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention analyzed by "The Washington Post." Alane Vance grew up in a small coal-mining town. She almost became one of those statistics. Hers is an all too common story. It begins with taking prescription pain medication and developing an addiction that ultimately leads to heroin. Like many, she switched to heroin because it was cheaper and more powerful than prescription pain medication. At first, getting high helped escape painful emotions. . . in Alane's case, from divorce and poverty. Soon after, the drugs took control of her life. In rural America, many opioid addictions begin rather innocently, starting with an injury from a car crash or an on-the-job accident that prompt doctors to prescribe painkillers to these patients. Lynn Eldridge is the director of Clinical Services at Process Strategies, a drug treatment facility. In the more than 20 years she's been serving rural West Virginians, she said the current opioid abuse explosion is like nothing she's ever seen. She says the scenarios often sound similar. Eldridge says compared to the city, buying, selling and even taking drugs in the country is not hard at all. Despite the growing death toll, people can break free. Eldridge says the first step is detox. She said after detox, a 28-day inpatient treatment or three-month intensive outpatient treatment followed by outpatient therapy is often an effective strategy. Eldridge says that might include the medication naltrexone, also known as Vivitrol. While Alane credits her recovery to detox and a 12-step program, she gives most of her victory to God. Alane went to One Voice, a Christian outreach center with locations serving rural West Virginians. They offer addicts and their families treatment referrals, food, clothing, friendship and most importantly, the Gospel. Prayer is crucial to the process. In fact, most people who walk through the front door of a One Voice center don't leave before first visiting the prayer room. Alane said the blessings she received from One Voice inspired her to bless others. Davis says all Christians are responsible for fighting the war on drugs. She points out that you don't have to be a recovering addict or even a trained professional to make a difference. So while substance abuse is cutting short the lives of far too many, particularly in America's heartland, it's not a lost cause. Awareness and treatment, powered by the Holy Spirit, are making a positive difference.

Tonya Ratcliff from Peppers Ranch shares her heart with host David Edwards about foster children. Peppers Ranch is a residential community with 300 acres of land, 13 families, and 110 children including 27 sets of siblings. Currently in Oklahoma there are 11500 children in DHS custody. Each year more foster homes are needed. These children are from every age, race and economic background. Reasons range from drug, poverty, abuse, homelessness and many other causes for the need. Every child has a story, every child needs to know they are important. There is a cycle that many foster children end up having children in foster care. These children need to know they can break that cycle. The church is instructed to help orphans and widows, but we have somehow turned this responsibility over to the state. If every church would assist with two or three foster homes the need would be met.

Executive Director of Peppers Ranch, Tonya Ratcliff and host David Edwards discuss issues of children in foster homes. Tonya not only works with foster and adoptive children, her own family consists of ten children: born from her body, born from her heart and some temporary. She says there are no bad children, there are good children from bad situations. They act out of survival. These children come from many back grounds: abuse, drugs, homelessness, and neglect are just a few. They may be more comfortable sleeping on the floor because they never had a bed or they may feel they have to hide food, so they know they will have something to eat later. Peppers Ranch offers many modes of healing from: art, culinary, horseback riding, and dance. They have 13 families currently living on the ranch with 110 kids. Each family chooses their educational method, public or home school. These children need time and help to heal and to be shown they are loved.

Pastor of Faith Church, Terry Bates, and host Dolly Velasquez discuss a ministry outreach called Feeding 5000 and more. Faith Church is approaching 100 years. While praying for a new way to reach people in need, the Holy Spirit laid on Pastor Bate's heart the number 5000. From that was birthed the ministry in which 3000 backpacks and school supplies are given to school age children and 5000 meals to children and parents. However, not only are their physical needs met, each person is feed the gospel. There are 5 presentations presented to each person. The programs have a popular theme relevant to today, with a spiritual message. Some of the presentations include: Star Wars, Minions, Super Heroes, Monsters Inc. and a celebrity look a likes. Meals could be given at Thanksgiving, Christmas or anytime, but statistics show that 85% to 90% of people incarcerated cannot read above a third grade level. So the ministry addresses feeding the body and spirit and aiding in education. On average over 3000 people raise their hands for salvation.

Pastor Terry Bates and Dolly Velasquez continue their discussion of the Feeding 5000 ministry of OKC Faith church. The ministry is in its 15th year. The first year Pastor Bates preached a sermon, a sermon about the boy who gave his lunch, titled 'A Boy with No Name.' Shortly after that message a man came to the church from a small town about 60 miles from the city. He offered to donate all the beef needed for the feeding 5000 people. The name of his ranch was No Name Ranch. He has supplied the beef every year. The event requires hundreds of volunteers for teams such as cook teams, parking lot, crowd control, greeters, stage production, handing out backpacks and food. The main purpose is to reach lost souls for the Kingdom, not build Faith Church. People accepting Jesus are told to attend a church where they have family or friends, as they will be more likely to stay in church. If they don't have anyone, they are welcome to come back to Faith. Approximately 100 pastors call Pastor Bates each year to say someone came to their church because of Feeding 5000.

Cole Phillips and Samantha Moser talk with host Dolly Velasquez about ministry they call 'City Reach'. The Gate Church is taking the gospel outside the four walls of the church, offering resources and services to the community around them. Some of the things they do include gathering coats and taking them to people on the street and supplying Christmas gifts. In 2013 when the tornado hit Moore, Oklahoma, killing several people, the City Reach group took food and water immediately. They set up a relief tent that same evening and even had volunteers help people go through rubble searching for sentimental items. They go into neighborhoods and hold block parties, sometimes they take food trucks and offer free food. There are several schools that allow them to come before school and bring donuts and offer bible study.

The area where they are located has the highest rate of state custody for children and the most 911 calls for domestic violence. It is a poverty stricken area. A person living in poverty is a person living in isolation. One of the goals of both the church and the Dream Center is to break the cycle. They offer a resource center where they assist residents in making resumes, filling out paper work for housing and other programs that can help them change their conditions.

CBN News Reporter Mark Martin Reports: Author and activist Erin Merryn is on a mission to protect children from being sexually abused. With millions of victims in the United States alone, the Illinois woman is taking her fight to all 50 states and beyond. People magazine named her one of 15 women changing the world. With a bubbly baby girl, supportive husband, and infectious personality, you'd never guess Erin Merryn has endured tragic, unimaginable acts. This vibrant 30-year-old is a survivor of sexual abuse. Merryn said it started when she was just 6 years old at her first sleep-over. She said the uncle of her best friend sexually abused her during the night. The first time. Merryn never told anyone, and she says until she turned 8 and a half, when her family moved from the area, the man repeatedly sexually abused her. He even brutally raped her just weeks shy of her seventh birthday. She said he continued to threaten her to keep quiet, and she complied. Even after she and her family moved to a new neighborhood, sexual abuse continued. Merryn said this time the perpetrator was an older cousin, someone she had viewed as a brother figure. Merryn wrote about her despair in her childhood diary. Merryn finally broke her silence when her younger sister told her that she, too, was being sexually abused by the same cousin. The two told their parents who believed them 100 percent. The next step was telling their story to a forensic investigator at The Children's Advocacy Center of North and Northwest Cook County. More than 900 of these non-profit centers exist around the country. The room where Merryn found her voice has a two-way mirror. As she shared her story with a trained therapist, behind that mirror investigators listened, collecting information to build a case against a perpetrator. Merryn said her cousin confessed to the crime, was sentenced to seven years probation, and put in a sex offender treatment program instead of receiving jail time. However, her early childhood abuser was never prosecuted. What Merryn and her sister went through is by no means isolated. Merryn eventually went on to become a social worker at a counseling agency. But God had different plans for her to help children and teens on a national and international level. He used her childhood diary to spark a new idea. At that, Erin's Law was born. The law requires age-appropriate personal body safety and sexual abuse prevention curriculum for pre-kindergarten through 12th grade students in public schools. It educates kids on safe touch, unsafe touch; safe secrets, unsafe secrets; how to get away and tell. Merryn is on a mission to find either a state senator or representative in each state to sponsor the bill, draft it, and introduce it to lawmakers for an eventual vote. Erin's Law is spreading like wildfire, even drawing the attention of celebrities like Oprah and Katie Couric, and magazines like People and Glamour. In a little more than four years it's passed in 21 states and pending in 22, with seven to go. It's a legacy she'll leave for her baby girl and millions of other children who, because of a law, will be protected from the grip of sexual abuse.

Larry Bross speaks with host Terry Bates regarding the homeless and affordable housing issues. City Care Ministry began 16 years ago. They serve about 8500 meals a month. The chronically homeless cost taxpayers thousands of dollars each year between medical, feeding, housing and incarcerations each year. City Care offers a program called Journey Home that provides shelter, medical attention, and other needs without demanding the person be drug and alcohol free. In 2 years this program has helped 475 veterans, and 280 chronically homeless with 92% of those are still in housing, saving thousands of taxpayer dollars. Overtime they are shown that someone cares, namely Jesus. In Oklahoma City it takes a person 72 hours working at McDonalds to afford a one bedroom apartment. City Care is working to provide affordable housing in OKC.

Adam Jones and Dolly Velasquez talk about how City Rescue Missions has changed over the years and how they help change lives and destinies. City Rescue Mission is the state's largest homeless shelter and also the state's largest free rehab program. In 1960 some business men noticed men eating out of trash cans. They began the mission as basically soup kitchen, it has now grown into a beautiful two block facility. They raise the level of dignity and offer a positive atmosphere. No condemnation, just a hand up in every realm of human needs: food, housing, clothing, education, and work skills. They are changing lives today and for the next generation.

Pastor Sam Walker is the missions/outreach pastor at Crossroads Church. He and host Terry Bates discuss one outreach program that occurs each Tuesday evening, the feeding and clothing of the homeless. They feed them physically and spiritually. One difference in this ministry is that the people can give a request for needed items such as sleeping bags, socks, whatever is needed. Then the next Tuesday they can pick up the item. There are anywhere from 80 to 100+ coming for a meal each week. Not only homeless, but also some who live in the neighborhood but need assistance.

Deborah Burke and Chase Parsons shares with Terry Bates the outreaching of Inner City Church and Dream Center. Inner City began in 2003 serving homeless children, then about a year later they began a full service church reaching out to the entire family. Some of the programs include food pantries and clothing. They focus on at-risk kids not only providing during the school year, but also a summer feeding program for children 18 and under. After the meal there they offer enrichment programs such as arts and dance. A wrestling program called Warriors Wrestling is provided. They have volunteer coaches and this past week two of their boys won first and third places in a state tournament.

Homeless

CBN News Reporter Talia Wise Reports: More than half-a-million Americans are currently homeless, and many of them are military veterans. As thousands of US troops make their way home from Afghanistan and Iraq in the next couple of years, that number could increase. It's a predicament facing too many veterans, like Nakisha and Gary King and their family. Nakisha and Gary are military veterans who fell on tough times after serving in Afghanistan and Guam. When they couldn't keep up with their rent, they lost their home. Nakisha told their five-year-old son, Christian, that even though they had no place to live, he still had to be a "big boy." He asked her, "Mommy, what does it mean to be a big boy?" It was a question that became the start of his book, "Being 5: My Mommy Says I'm a Big Boy," that is now being sold on Amazon. Nakisha suffers from Lupus, a disease that forced her to undergo several surgeries and blood transfusions. Gary, a 12-year Air Force veteran, was left as the sole provider. When Gary couldn't bring in enough money on his own, the family eventually lost their home and began living in their car. Veterans are all too familiar with the difficulties that come after leaving the military. They often fight invisible enemies of addiction, post-traumatic stress, and financial hardships. Dr. Priscilla Hankins, a specialist with Veterans Affairs Office of Hampton, Virginia, told CBN News that unemployment often affects a veteran's ability to find and keep a home. Gary said he felt embarrassed, scared and hopeless. It was just as hard for their three boys. Statistics show that vets make up 17% of our country's homeless population. In 2010, numbers reached as high as 76,000 on the streets. While today's estimates are closer to 40,000, there could be a major increase as thousands of troops prepare to leave Iraq and Afghanistan. It's a potential crisis driving the VA to be more strategic. Its goal is to place a veteran in permanent housing within 90 days of their discharge, but finding a home for a family is twice as difficult. Hankins said community and faith-based organizations are stepping up to help. Gary and Nakisha believe God used Operation Homefront and the VA's Office of Human Affairs to provide for them. They moved into a new home after a year of living in a car. Gary and Nakisha now both work at the Hampton, Virginia Veterans Administration office. They want to pay it forward by helping other homeless veterans get back on their feet. As for her son Christian, he's enjoying this new chapter in life: being six.

Jim Priest with Sunbeam Family Services shares great insight with host David Edwards regarding Grandparents raising Grandkids. Sunbeam Family Services began 100 years ago when a woman began helping neglected and abandoned children during the land rush. They now offer early childhood programs, counseling, foster care placement and senior care. They have the only homeless shelter for seniors in Oklahoma. Their grandparents raising grandchildren began in 2003, helping equip, support and encourage. Raising ones grandchildren is not raising your own children again. Raising grandchildren brings a 2nd generation gap. These children live in a different world with technology impacting their lives. The church and people in general can help by recognizing the need, then not just encouraging with words but with help, perhaps keeping the children for an afternoon to give the grandparent a break. When raising grandchildren it affects the grandparent emotionally, physically and financially. Mr. Priest's final thought is important in every area of our lives: Persistence not Perfection.

Continuing their topic of City Rescue Mission, Adam Jones and Dolly Velasquez talk about the program 'Bridge to Life'. City Rescue Mission opened in 1960 and since that time they have served over 2 million meals, over 17,000 emergency meals and given shelter to almost 5000 individuals. There are different types and causes for homelessness, some are chronically homeless while some are the result of life changes. Being laid off of their jobs, divorce with no income, and addictions are just a few. Addictions are not only drugs and alcohol, it can be not knowing how to cope with life situations, such as abuse, or anger. Bridge for Life offers help in recovering from these and more. They teach that things can change, beginning with Faith as an anchor, with God's help things can change.

Pastors Sam Walker and Terry Bates discuss another outreach of Crossroads Church; reaching out to public schools across the state showing appreciation and support. They take items to the schools like paper supplies, snacks, drinks and other items. The teachers can use these things to help motivate the children. The church has also prepared bags for the students to take home. One school shared the fact that their budget has been cut from $14,000 to $2,400, so this additional support goes a long way. This program has helped the gospel to come alive for teachers, students and parents.

Missy Blumley shares information with Dolly Velasquez regarding Crossings Church's Clinic. In Oklahoma it is estimated that 1 in 6 have no insurance and around 50 % are under insured. In 2005 Crossings Church opened a free clinic. Services include medical needs, eye care, dental (on occasion), medications, prenatal care, emotional care and also spiritual needs. Patients are shown the love of Jesus. The clinic currently is in a 19,000 sq ft building and it does not look like a typical free clinic. When each patient arrives they are offered prayer. Currently the clinic has 8 employees and the rest are volunteers. Volunteers have several areas ranging from administration, to prayer teams. While they are there to bless the patient, they are blessed in return.

The Gate Church has opened a gym for the community. Cole Phillips and Samantha Moser share details with host Dolly Velasquez. The gym offers several free services to the community. On Tuesday, Friday and Saturday women's dance exercise classes are offered for all ages, and all physical levels. Monday evenings kids dance classes cover all types of dance: jazz, hip hop and ballet. There are also tumbling classes. The kids are exercising, and socializing in a Christian atmosphere. Another event the church hosted was a family friendly New Year's Eve event. They had praise and worship and a sermon to bring in the New Year. Then they offered an after service party with food. They expected 700 to 800, but they had 2500 come to participate. Of course, this presented the need to hurriedly send people out to obtain more food.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Our bodies use oxygen in a number of ways, including healing. Breathing alone provides about 20 percent of the oxygen our bodies need. But today, doctors can ramp up that amount to help people recover from the most debilitating injuries and illnesses with hyperbaric oxygen therapy. It's hard to believe Michael "Bean" Black survived his horrific car crash in 2011. He was thrown 40 feet from the vehicle and landed on his head. Black's grandmother, Mary Orr, said even the doctors had given up hope. When Black arrived home to Dallas he still suffered from severe injuries, including brain damage. But his condition improved after he started receiving hyperbaric oxygen therapy. Hyperbaric oxygen therapy involves breathing 100 percent pure oxygen inside a pressurized chamber for about an hour to 90 minutes per session. Dr. Alfred Johnson directs the Hyperbaric Centers of Texas in Richardson. Black said the therapy made a big difference. After the first 40 treatments, Black went back for 40 more a few months later. Costs vary depending on the provider from as little as $100 an hour on up. Insurance and Medicare sometimes offer coverage, depending on the condition being treated. Insurance companies can reimburse for hyperbaric oxygen therapy for the treatment of traumatic brain injuries, like Black's. Dallas businessman John Derrick said the therapy is easy and has helped him sharpen his focus. Consumers can purchase or rent portable hyperbaric oxygen chambers, but they typically deliver far less oxygen and pressure than industrial-grade ones. Conditions treated with Hyperbaric Oxygen Therapy include: Autism, Burns, Cerebral Palsy, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, Closed Head Injury, Fibromyalgia, Migraine Headaches, Multiple Sclerosis, Near Drowning, Parkinson's Syndrome, Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy, Rheumatoid Arthritis, Sports Injury, Stroke, and Traumatic Brain Injury. Johnson said stroke patients can have improved quality of life. He said he's witnessed progress for people with autism, as well. Hyperbaric oxygen therapy may not be for everyone. But today, Michael Black is in far better shape than he or his family ever dreamed possible since his near-fatal car accident. They believe this therapy has a lot to do with his recovery, so they plan to stick with it and hopefully see even more improvement.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Americans are increasingly getting fed up with the insurance-based medical systems. It often means long waits for appointments and doctors who seem to have one eye on the patient and the other eye on the clock. That's why many primary care doctors and patients are turning away from insurance and to what's known as concierge medicine. When it comes to healthcare, Johnny Guerry prefers old school, meaning just he and his doctor calls the shots without any input from an insurance company. With concierge medicine, patients pay their primary care physician an out-of-pocket monthly fee, sometimes an annual fee, in exchange for unlimited access, 24/7. Concierge medicine used to be something only for the rich and famous. But according to Dr. James Pinckney, known to his patients as "Dr. James," that's not the case any longer. Where he works at Diamond Physicians in Dallas, adults pay from $95 to $295 each month, based on age. That covers all acute procedures and medications. Sometimes patients have to pay extra for services outside the office, like a CT scan. But doctors negotiate cash rates with those third party vendors that are a fraction of what they bill insurance. The cost for children is even less than adults. Each child costs $45 a month for unlimited access to their doctor. Liza Schlitt says her two young boys usually need medical attention after hours. Doctors recently gave her son Griffin a breathing treatment, prescription and a nebulizer to take home, all covered by the monthly fee - and on a rainy Sunday afternoon. Perhaps the biggest difference between concierge medicine and insurance-based medicine is the time patients spend with their doctors. The Affordable Care Act flooded offices of already overloaded primary care physicians to the point where face-time with doctors can average as little as eight minutes per visit. Primary care doctors who accept insurance treat on average about 3,000 patients. This is known as a doctor's patient panel. The typical concierge physician has a patient panel of about 500 patients. At Diamond, the doctors promise their patients their patient panel will never exceed 600. This ensures each patient has their doctor's undivided attention. Although concierge medicine involves paying cash for day-to-day health expenses, doctors do recommend their patients buy health insurance, but with a high deductible. So as insurance-based healthcare complicated this crucial need, more patients and doctors are going old school, with a cash-only plan, similar to the way it was a half-century ago.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Cancer is a word no one wants to hear. Yet statistics show half of all men and a third of all women will receive the bad news. Churches should be a sanctuary for support. However, in many cases, people suffer in silence as they cope with their illness. Now the Cancer Treatment Centers of America is offering a free program to break down the wall of silence. After years of counseling cancer patients, Rev. Percy McCray knows they bear a burden unlike people fighting other illnesses. Thanks to his training, McCray knows the importance of encouragement. One conversation helped him realize others need to learn these skills, too. McCray said typically, churches deal with issues like addiction and marital problems very effectively. But it can fall short when it comes to meeting the needs of parishioners who are struggling with healthcare issues, particularly cancer. To bridge this gap, McCray and his associates at the Cancer Treatment Centers of America elected to offer complimentary cancer ministry training to representatives of churches across the country so they can better meet the needs of their brothers and sisters with cancer. It's called Our Journey of Hope. Cancer Treatment Centers of America offers free training for two people from a church who use what they learn to raise up cancer ministries in their home congregations. Participants learn the basics of the disease and treatments in order to focus on what it's like for the patient. An added incentive for a church is that the training is free of charge. That includes the two-day seminar, food, lodging, and materials. LaWanda Long attended the seminar years ago and now passes on what she learned to volunteers at Atlanta's Enon Baptist Church. Long teaches the volunteers one night a week for eight weeks. At that time they are ready to take on a cancer patient who has come forward requesting assistance. She said the extensive training ensured the patients will be cared for responsibly. She said so far the cancer ministry at Enon is a success. Lisa McDermott attends Enon. She remembers suffering through nearly five months of chemotherapy for breast cancer. She asked the cancer ministry to help her with daily needs. McDermott dealt with one main point person who recruited others to pitch in. The cancer ministry made such an impression that McDermott wanted to get the training. As Nefertiti Dixon's mother fought ovarian and colon cancer, the ministry stepped in. Although her mother lost her fight, the cancer ministry made those final days easier. They also helped Dixon with things like meals, which lifted a burden. As a working mom with two children, she became overwhelmed with the pressure of caring for her sick mother. So while cancer will likely continue to strike far too many, churches now can choose to help those within their midst who are dealing with the disease.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Hippocrates, the father of medicine, once said, "All disease begins in the gut." Now, 2,000 years later, that belief still rings true. Some of our latest medical breakthroughs focus on what's happening in our intestinal system. Bacteria, also known as bugs or germs, we assume they're all bad, right? Not so fast. Scientists recently discovered much, if not most, of the bacteria in our body is good for us. The key to good health depends on having enough of the right kind. We all have trillions of bacteria living in our intestines—hundreds of different species, each with different functions. Scientists call it our "gut flora." Neurologist Dr. David Perlmutter, author of "Brain Maker" is one of many physicians warning against disrupting this fragile ecosystem. Dr. Vincent Pedre, author of "Happy Gut," agrees. Unfortunately, when it comes to good gut bacteria, many of us are sorely lacking. After all, antibiotics kill bacteria--bad and good. Perlmutter says most people have no idea how severely antibiotics damage our gut flora. In addition to antibiotics, processed food can also disrupt the gut biome. Perlmutter says processed foods contain heavy doses of the wrong kinds of fat, like heated oils such as soybean, corn and vegetable oils. He also advises against consuming hydrogenated oils, also known as trans fats, which are common in processed foods. However, he points out not all fat is bad. Even babies delivered by Caesarian section can miss out on getting enough good bacteria. So while our lifestyle choices really do a number on the gut bacteria that's so critical to our health, the good news is we can improve it with probiotics and prebiotics. Probiotics are the good bacteria we need and often lack. You can find these living, microscopic organisms in supplements as well as in cultured and fermented foods like kim chee, sauerkraut, yogurt, kefir and kombucha. Prebiotics are the food for the probiotics - they keep probiotics living and growing as they should. Just like good soil, they create a nurturing environment in your gut so your bacteria can thrive. You can get prebiotics in supplement form as well as in foods, like asparagus, onions, leeks, garlic and dandelion greens. Perlmutter says many people are only aware of the benefits of probiotics, but he stresses prebiotics are equally important. Not only can it help your mood — Perlmutter says even serious brain disorders, like attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, autism, even Alzheimer's disease can improve by increasing good bacteria. That's because they help make neurotransmitters and vitamins while at the same time aid in reducing harmful inflammation. And not just the brain. Scientists are now identifying specific strains of good bacteria that treat all kinds of problems, from skin rashes to the flu. That means a targeted probiotic could take the place of a prescribed drug. Pedre says that opens the door to a wide range of natural treatments. So if you want to boost your health, doctors say improve your gut flora. That means avoiding processed foods, even antibacterial cleansers and antibiotics when advisable. Then add good bacteria with probiotics and boost them with prebiotics, also available as supplements or in certain foods.

CBN News Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Today the number of Americans dying of heart disease, the number one cause of death, is higher than health experts predicted it would be. 4 out of 10 Americans suffer from a heart-related health problem, and that number is expected to get even worse. In addition to the lives lost, the cost of treating heart disease is expected to reach one trillion dollars a year within the next 15 years. A growing number of doctors believe the root cause of heart disease is inflammation in our bodies, brought on by eating too much sugar and bread. Cardiologist Stephen Sinatra is one of those physicians who blame an inflammatory diet on the skyrocketing rates of deadly heart disease. Sinatra says to reduce inflammation, stay away from sugar and processed grains such as enriched flour, corn and rice found in bread, bagels, pasta, pizza dough, tortillas, muffins and cereal. He says as far as our health is concerned, these refined grains are very similar to sugar because our body responds to them in the same way. There are many types of sugar. Many of them end with "-ose." Sinatra says one of the worst is high fructose corn syrup, which food manufacturers began adding to soda and thousands of other foods and drinks in the past few decades, corresponding with the dramatic rise in heart disease, as well as obesity and diabetes. Nutritionist J.J. Virgin points out that was also the same time the low-fat craze kicked-in. That caused millions of Americans to replace fat with bread and sugar. In fact, some fat-free salad dressings are one-third sugar! Doctors advise checking nutrition facts labels on products, and only choose foods with no more than 2 grams of sugar per serving. When Dallas resident John Speanburg started following his doctor's recommendation to cut-back on sugar, Speanburg was surprised to discover many of the foods he thought were healthy actually contained too much sugar. When it comes to fruit, health experts say stick to the ones that are unprocessed, fresh or frozen, preferably berries, because they are lowest in sugar. However, stay away from processed fruit products like juices, jellies and snacks. They often contain super-concentrated natural sugar, fructose, accompanied by the misleading, "no sugar added" claim on the package. So to prevent heart disease, America's number one killer that's still on the rise, doctors say reduce inflammation by avoiding processed foods and drinks, and instead, embracing foods in their natural state, also known as "whole" foods. Especially load-up on a wide variety of colorful vegetables. Also choose healthy fats like olive oil, coconut oil, avocados and raw nuts. When it comes to beverages, health experts say just drink plain water, unsweetened coffee or unsweetened tea.

CBN News Reporter Mark Martin Reports: It's been called a "bar code on steroids." Radio Frequency Identification identifies people or things and transmits information through microchips. Is it all about convenience, or are there biblical implications? A banner at the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions Expo, or IAAPA as it is known, reads "Prepare to be thrilled!" And if you're into amusement parks, the expo is the place to be. Each year, theme park entertainment grows more exciting and cutting edge, like the Tru-Trackless Ride Systems. From trackless to cashless, the operators described the latest ways to make the park experience more convenient for customers and employees. That includes RFID. RFID uses radio waves to transmit information at a distance. A microchip in an RFID tag contains unique identification numbers. Tom Foster, who works for Precision Dynamics Corporation, said the organization pioneered the technology around the turn of the century. Companies like PDC, which produce RFID products, say the technology helps with areas such as access control, keyless entry, and cashless point of sale. Precision Dynamics developed the first kiosk that dispenses and encodes RFID wristbands for amusement park purchases. It's like a wallet on your wrist. It raises a number of questions, however, like what about privacy? And can the information on that wristband be stolen? Consumer privacy expert Dr. Katherine Albrecht is concerned about RFID technology in general and what the future holds. She said their goal is to track the consumer's habits. Beyond the privacy concerns, Albrecht said RFID technology carries biblical implications, with hobbyists embedding microchips into their flesh. Radio isn't the only way that she is getting her message out about the dangers of RFID technology and what it can lead to. She's also a best-selling author, writing books for both adults and children. Albrecht has devoted a decade to studying RFID. One result of her research is the book, "Spychips: How Major Corporations and Government Plan to Track Your Every Move with RFID." She especially wants to reach younger readers with her book "I Won't Take the Mark, a Bible Book and Contract for Children" to help kids understand the book of Revelation. Albrecht is working to change that, wanting people to think before blindly accepting new tracking technology.
