Description:
The Tampa Bay area has a large military presence with a major air force base and 2 large VA hospitals, plus many retired military personnel in the area. With such a transient community, it's difficult for the spouses of military to acclimate themselves to the area and community both socially and spiritually. Katie Camario talks with two leaders in the Military Council of Catholic Women, who held a worldwide gathering in Tampa. These ladies shared about the importance of the organization and local catholic military communities that can help each other in times of need or spiritual assistance. The organization was formed in Europe after World War 2 when families were separated and the women need support while their husbands were stationed abroad.
