Designated a National Recreation Trail in 2014, the 66-mile trail offers paddlers a captivating experience of floating through swampland that was once traversed by Patriots engaged in warfare against the Loyalists. These stretches offer more appeal to more than just history enthusiasts. Birders and ecologists appreciate the terrain's rich biodiversity as well. Coordinated through Florence CVB, the trail also features a series of short excursions and overnight rustic camping opportunities provided by local outfitters. Participants will paddle from Venters Landing to The Cut Landing. The cost is $5 if you bring your kayak and gear or $60 if you rent a kayak and gear. Paddlers must have enough experience to steer the kayak. This paddle will include lunch.

From 1 to 4 p.m., Dr. Scott Jones of Media Prehistorica will demonstrate a variety of indigenous skills and technologies, Sean Taylor of SC DNR will be knapping stone projectiles and demonstrating spear-throwing technology, and Bobby Southerlin of Archaeological Consultants of the Carolinas will be making pots using Native American technologies. AIPD Board Member Florence native Terry James will also be on hand to demonstrate and discuss the material culture and lifeways of enslaved African Americans in the Pee Dee. The excavations at the 18th century Cashaway Baptist Church in Marlboro County and the Copperhead Bluff pre-contact site in Florence County will both be the subject of presentations, as will the work on blood residue Paleo Indian stone tool, including a knife blade from Williamsburg County, that is shedding new light on the arrival of the first humans in what is now South Carolina more than 13,000 years ago.

As much as possible, the exhibition will incorporate historical artifacts recently recovered from archaeological sites associated with Marion's local military activities. Loans of available authentic primary source archival materials such as documents and maps will be explored to the extent that they would sustain the exhibition's objectives by adding meaningful support to the overall thesis.
