ASCERTAINMENT STATEMENT

WSRV FM/97.1 The River develops on air programming to address issues of importance to Gainesville, Atlanta and surrounding communities.

WSRV-FM also produces two community affairs talk shows, which address a variety of topics and issues of concern including politics, education, health, business, lifestyle issues and civic and social issues. The Dr. Joe Show and Perspectives air every Sunday morning.

Issues on the program are ascertained through interviews with community leaders, including representatives of charitable and civic/social/civil rights organizations and others who make a difference in the communities in which we serve. WSRV-FM also solicits community input via the website.

Perspectives: How a Near Death Experience changed one woman's life and inspired her to help others

We first met Carmen Hope Thomas several years ago when we talked about her book, "Why Marry a Man You Don't Need." Fast forward to 2022 when we learn Thomas one night went to sleep with a headache and fatigue and woke up completely blind the next morning. She found out her blindness was due to a brain tumor, and she was rushed to emergency surgery. After surgery, Carmen lost her hair and found research reports stating that chemicals in her preferred type of hair products could cause her brain tumor to return. So Carmen launched her own line of natural hair and skincare products brand, made from products from Jamaica where she's relocated with her family to enjoy a slower paced life.

Perspectives: Treating Structural Racism to Heal America

Black men have the lowest life expectancy of any major demographic group in the United States, as CDC figures affirm. Based on Census Bureau projections, the life expectancy for a Black American male born in 2020 is 74 years, nearly five years less than the life expectancy for a white newborn male. In JUST HEALTH: Treating Structural Racism to Heal America author Dayna Bowen Matthew makes a strong, evidence-based case that Black, and Brown Americans are disproportionately dying young because of structural inequality and racism.

Perspectives: The Bean Pie: A remembering of one Family’s Faith, Fortitude and Forgiveness

To know where we’re going, we first need to know where we’ve been. In her new book, The Bean Pie: A Remembering of our Family’s Faith, Fortitude, & Forgiveness, entrepreneur Tiffany Green-Abdullah explores this concept to analyze her ancestral past with her own family. The Bean Pie follows four generations of women in Tiffany’s family: Tiffany, her mother, her 2nd great aunt, and her grandmother. Green-Abdullah shares the lessons she and her family have learned by following the original bean pie recipe created by her 2nd great aunt Daisy—a recipe that has stood the test of time to become a celebrated staple in the homes of Black American Muslims. Green-Abdullah found that she has much in common with her ancestors despite growing up decades apart. She was intrigued by the fact that many of her ancestors went through similar trials and tribulations yet always found their way through.

Perspectives: Explore the benefits of summer reading with your kids When I was a child, one of my favorite things about summer was the summer reading club. If I read a certain number of books, I'd get tickets to an Atlanta braves game. This was back in the day when it was much easier for the club to give away tickets to kids – long before we became world champions. I say that to say this – if there is something your kids are doing this summer – in addition to sports, time at the pool and play dates with friends, they should be reading, and now is a great time for kids to read books with characters who look and live like we all do. Olugbemisola Rhuday-Perkovich, is one of the authors of the young readers book, The Sun Does Shine: An Innocent Man, A Wrongful Conviction And The Long Path To Justice and Tracy Baptiste who tackles the origins of black icons with her book African Icons: Ten People who Shaped History.

Perspectives: Redefining GEEK and a conversation with award-winning actor Courtney B. Vance

Why are some people so good with technology? In the prevailing view, the answer is “natural ability”—and the lion’s share of those gifted just happen to be affluent white and Asian males. Beyond popular opinion, this assumption dominates education and the workplace, which not only puts women and other racial and ethnic groups at a disadvantage but also makes it harder to fight against inequities in tech. In REDEFINING GEEK: Bias and the Five Hidden Habits of Tech-Savvy Teens, Cassidy Puckett, assistant professor of sociology at Emory University, offers a fresh and surprising assessment of what it means to be good with technology. Then, a real treat - a conversation with Tony and Emmy Award-winning actor Courtney B. Vance. He reunites on screen with Aunjanue Ellis in 61st Street, a limited-run, eight episode series Sundays on AMC. Ellis, you'll recall earned an Academy Award nomination for her role in King Richard with Will Smith.

Perspectives: The Many Lives of Ambassador Andrew Young: Celebrating 90 with author Ernie Suggs

Ambassador Andrew Young recently celebrated his 90th birthday with a weeklong celebration across the city. To mark the milestone, Young collaborated with AJC race and culture reporter Ernie Suggs and longtime friend Don Bermudez to write "The Many Lives of Andrew Young" available where you find books today. Suggs talks about the urgency in writing this book now with the recent passing of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Lowery, Dr. C.T. Vivian and Congressman John Lewis. What Young likes about this book is the fact that his grandchildren will enjoy reading it. Ernie and I also talk race and culture and the Oscars, and the slap seen around the globe in defense of Will Smith's wife, Jada Pinkett Smith over her battle with alopecia. That means hair loss and board-certified dermatologist Dr. Chyna Steele Johnson joins me to discuss the problem and why it can be so devastating for Black women.
