St. Clair County Commissioners are asking for the public's patience as they work on a permanent solution to the foul odor coming from the Smiths Creek Landfill. Commission Chairman Jeff Bohm says the county has spent over a half million dollars to address the issue and that measures taken to limit the odor at the Smiths Creek Landfill are working according to plan. Last year, the landfill's bio reactor system began producing more methane gas than it could use to create electricity. Commission chairman Jeff Bohm says a temporary flare is now up and running and is burning off the excess gas. Bohm adds there has been ongoing air and water monitoring at the landfill and so far there's been no indication of a threat to public health.

St. Clair County commissioners have extended a rental agreement for a temporary landfill flair to help deal with the odor complaints around the Smiths Creek Landfill. The new agreement lasts through May or until a newly purchased permanent flare can be installed at the site. County Commission Chairman Jeff Bohm says the source of that additional gas has been pinpointed to a waste stream received by the landfill from the now closed Domtar Paper Mill. He says discussions with DTE Energy are ongoing as to what should be done with the additional gas moving forward.

Over $700,000 is headed to a new county park near Algonac. The new North Channel County Park has been named the recipient of three matching grants from three state agencies totaling $720,000 dollars. The funds will be used for everything from building a parking lot to a canoe and kayak launch. Parks Director Dennis Delor says the footprint for the park has already expanded, with the county purchasing a neighboring property that was razed and will make room for additional amenities. Delor's comments were echoed by 7th District Commissioner Dave Vandenbossche, who called it a "win-win" not just for his district, but for the entire county. The North Channel Park is located on Pointe Tremble Road on the border of Algonac and Clay Township.

Voters in May will be asked whether or not to approve a new millage in the Port Huron Area School District. During January's meeting of the Board of Education, members okayed language for a sinking tax fund. Superintendent Theo Kerhoulas says the 2.62-mil sinking fund would be used specifically for things such as building repairs and maintenance. It cannot be used for teacher or administrator salaries. Kerhoulas adds that if the sinking fund is approved May 7th, Port Huron Schools' property tax rate will still be below the average rate in St. Clair County.

Port Huron's mayor as well as three city council members are up for election this November. Although candidates still have plenty of time to decide whether or not to seek re-election, Mayor Pauline Repp was asked if she's given any thought to another two year term. Mayor Repp says she's leaning towards running for re-election but has not fully made up her mind. The candidate filing deadline for mayor and city council is in July.

2024 is shaping up to be a busy year for local elections officials. Not only will there be four elections this year, starting with this month's Presidential Primary, but new election laws also go into effect which create a period of in person early voting for the first time in Michigan. Cyndee Jonseck is the Port Huron City Clerk and says early voting begins Saturday February 17th and continues up until election day Tuesday, February, 27th.

Election Day in Michigan is Tuesday, February, 27th but early, in-person voting is now underway. Fort Gratiot Township Clerk, Bob Buechler, says you can come into his office during normal business hours to cast your ballot in person. You can also request an absentee ballot that will be mailed to you and you can visit one of the township's three polling places on election day. Buechler reminds voters that the presidential primary on Tuesday will be different from other elections in that there are separate ballots to choose from for both Republicans and Democrats and that choosing one or the other does not register you with that party's affiliation.

A double dose of construction is slated for the Port Huron area. The Michigan Department of Transportation is planning to rebuild Huron Avenue from the Military Street Bridge to Glenwood in 2026. That's in addition to the Blue Water Bridge Plaza Expansion project that's been decades in the works, with the first phases to begin this year. Port Huron City Manager James Freed says he's concerned about the impact the pair of projects will have to local businesses. He has since established a roundtable group consisting of residents and stakeholders to put forth suggestions to city council and MDOT. Freed suggests the amount of traffic crossing the Blue Water Bridge has been on the decline for years and with the planned opening of the Gordie Howe International Bridge in the Fall of next year, Freed wonders if a Blue Water Bridge expansion will be needed at all.

After decades of planning, the first phase of the Blue Water Bridge Expansion Project is set to begin this year. Some evidence of the project can already be seen right now as crews remove trees and relocate utilities in the area of Pine Grove and 10th Avenue. MDOT Senior Project Manager, Carrie Warren says a reconfiguration of the 10th and Pine Grove intersection is likely to take place this summer. Along with the intersection, other work includes work to the Scott Avenue neighborhood, erecting a sound barrier and relocating the I-94 exit ramp.
