25.1	Health/COVID Restrictions	6:12:45pm	05/20/2021	1:11	WDVM NEWS @ 6	Many COVID-19 restrictions in D-C are lifting tomorrow (Friday) morning. And mask guidelines have been mostly lifted as well. This has the city buzzing with excitement. But there are also some fears of a rebound in cases. The vaccination rates in the city are leading to concern among some people. District data shows an estimated 49 percent of residents are partially vaccinated and only 35 percent are fully vaccinated to date. When you look at the data by ward: Wards 5, 7 and 8 are behind other wards by over 20 percent. This worries people because there will be unvaccinated people enjoying the restriction lift. And potentially the updated mask guidance as well. Which could lead to the COVID-19 metrics trending in the wrong direction.
