At Issue FCC Report

2nd Quarter – April-June 2017

Sunday, April 2 - There has been a flurry of activity at the Capitol as we get into the thick of budget negotiations. The Senate passed a REAL ID bill this week on its second try. Minnesota Congressman Tim Walz is making it official - he will run for governor in 2018.

Sunday, April 9 - President Donald Trump defended his most dramatic military actions to date since taking office. He said it was necessary to respond after the Syrian government killed innocent people. The U.S. Senate voted to confirm President Trump's Supreme Court nominee, Neil Gorsuch. State lawmakers will be taking a break from the Capitol this week to celebrate Easter and Passover.

Sunday, April 16 - Budget negotiations will kick into high gear at the Capitol this week when lawmakers return from Easter-Passover break. But members of Governor Dayton's administration got a head start on criticizing proposed cuts by the House and Senate. The chair of the Metropolitan Council joins us to discuss proposed cuts to light rail and metro transit bus services. The commissioner of the Department of Administration also joins us to discuss the near completion of the State Capitol restoration project.

Sunday, April 23 - There is officially less than one month to go in the legislative session. And in that time, lawmakers must agree on a two-year budget plan. Congressman Jason Lewis joins Tom Hauser in studio to discuss the major issues playing out on Capitol Hill, including a revisit of the efforts to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act.

Sunday, April 30 - With just about three weeks to go in the legislative session, all eyes are on whether lawmakers and Governor Dayton will reach a budget deal in time. On Friday, House and Senate Republicans released their joint budget targets - the next big step in negotiations. House Republicans say they plan to release their bonding bill proposal early this week and that it won't be nearly as much as the $1.5 billion proposed by Governor Dayton.

Sunday, May 7 - Tomorrow marks two weeks until the end of the 2017 legislative session. and there are still a lot of unresolved issues - the biggest of which remains a two-year budget deal. The chairs of the State GOP and DFL party join Tom Hauser in studio.

Sunday, May 14 - State lawmakers are down to eight days to balance a nearly $46 billion budget before the legislative deadline. Talks stalled late last week. meaning all parties need to make major progress quickly to avoid a special session or government shutdown. Two lawmakers are here to share their own personal connections to the opioid epidemic sweeping the country and how they're working to turn that around.

Sunday, May 21 – It's the third week in May. That means state lawmakers are pushing up against a deadline with less than two days to pass a two-year budget. But it's looking possible, maybe even likely, they won't make that deadline. That means we could be headed for another special session.

NO SHOW SUNDAY, MAY 28

Sunday, June 4 – Republicans in the House and Senate have taken their first steps to challenge Governor Dayton in court. This comes after a bizarre chain of events that resulted in Governor Dayton vetoing funding for the legislative operations for the next four years.

Sunday, June 11 - It still appears Governor Dayton and Republican lawmakers are headed for a constitutional showdown. Dayton plans to meet with legislative leaders this week to discuss coming back into special session. Republican leaders say they will not renegotiate and are planning to sue the Governor over his line-item vetoes. Controversy is growing over the failure by lawmakers and the Governor to pass and sign into law a bill to reform the Minnesota Sports Facilities Authority. Republicans blame the Dayton administration for standing in the way. The governor calls that a "scurrilous lie."

Sunday, June 18 - The constitutional battle between republican lawmakers and Governor Dayton goes to court at the end of the month. Lawmakers filed suit against the Governor this week. They say his line-item vetoes of funding for the House and Senate are unconstitutional. Both sides have now hired powerful legal teams to represent them in court. The legal contracts show this battle could get expensive.

Sunday, June 25 - A showdown between Governor Dayton and Republican lawmakers is set for tomorrow. They're suing over the Governor's decision to line-item veto most funding for legislative operations. Both sides entered court filings Thursday in Ramsey County court ahead of tomorrow's hearing. For the first time this week the public got to see the dash cam video that shows former officer Jeronimo Yanez shooting and killing Philando Castile during a traffic stop last July.
