Time Aired: 10:15 – 10:30 p.m.

Summary: There's a reason that Steve Jobs wouldn't let his children use the products he developed for sale to consumers around the world. Addiction to the omnipresent small screens can be an actual handicap, says economics scholar and international speaker John Horvat, author of "Return to Order" (www.returntoorder.org). Discouraging overexposure to technology might actually be an advantage in today's hyper-connected world

Subject: Hemp

Guest: Chris Boucher

Length: 12:30

Date Aired: 3/22/15

Time Aired: 10:45 – 11:00 p.m.

Summary: It's been a historic week for America. Bipartisan legislation was introduced in the U.S. Senate proposing to curb federal regulation on medical marijuana with The CARERS Act: The Compassionate Access, Research Expansion, and Respect States Act. According to an article on Huffington Post (<http://t.co/zbOWI2Goh3>), "the drug's well-established safety profile and broad use in treatment should reassure lawmakers that it does not belong in the same category as cocaine and methamphetamine, but even placing cannabis in Schedule II could launch an exciting new era in American medical research."
