The Covid pandemic is effecting the market. 6.6 million workers file first-time unemployment claims, double last week's numbers.

April 8, 2020 6:15 5 Mins

It was a big up day on Wall St yesterday. What to do with your stimulus check if and when it comes. The coronavirus has officially been declared a pandemic by the World Health Organization, bringing instability to the U.S. economy. The stock market is hitting lows not seen since the 1987 market crash and hard-hit industries are beginning to lay off workers. People across the U.S. are already stocking up on basic supplies in the event that they need to stay home from work for a prolonged period. Others are canceling trips and foregoing conferences and sporting events. How to cope with financial stress and anxiety during the coronavirus pandemic.

April 9 2020 7:15 5 Mins

Another 300k+ applied for unemployment in New York State as the coronavirus pandemic continues. Consumer confidence drops.

April 15, 2020 7:45 5 Mins

A Capital Region woman and her family made sure people in nursing homes knew they're not alone during the pandemic. They've spread some happiness to them through "The Tulip Project", which grew out of a similar effort "the 518 Rainbow Hunt." Members of The Tulip Project reached out to a Guilderland nursing home and found out there were more than 100 residents pretty much shut into their rooms with few or no visitors and they figured people would get some joy through a few cards or maybe a letter. They spread the word, then came the avalanche from people who wanted to help. The group is now working on its second project -- gathering items for the volunteer firefighters home, run by the fireman's association of New York, which is in Hudson.

April 16, 2020 7:15 5 Mins
