Kientpoos, Modoc Chief (better known as Captain Jack). In 1873 in Fort Klamath, Oregon, four Modoc Indians were hanged for war crimes. It was the only time American Indians would face that charge. The execution came at the end of the costliest American Indian war in U.S. history. The battle was over land. The Modoc Indians of Southern Oregon and Northern California signed a treaty agreeing to live on a reservation. All they asked was that the reservation be on six square miles of their native homeland. Instead the U.S. government moved the Modocs onto a reservation with their enemies, the Klamaths. Lead by Captain Jack, a band of less than 200 Modoc men, women and children fled the reservation and took refuge in along Tule Lake, at what is now Lava Beds National Monument. The area was a natural fortress. Over the next six months, fifty Modoc warriors held off over 600 U.S. soldiers, without a single Indian casualty. At the end of one battle a Modoc taunted the soldiers by calling out, "All you boys what ain't dead had better go on home. We don't want to kill you all in one day!" The war was widely reported in the national and international press, with many reporters sympathetic to the Modoc cause. Public opinion changed when Captain Jack ambushed a peace commission, resulting in the only death of a U.S. General during an Indian War. Eventually, Captain Jack and his immediate followers were captured and executed. The remaining Modocs were rounded up, separated and sent to different reservations, one in Oklahoma and the other with the Klamaths in Oregon.

"It's both technical and artistic," he says. We watch him create the original wax mold, made from measurements of the patient's eye. From that mold, he makes a white acrylic eyeball, then begins painting. Harwin believes the time he spends with the patient is an important part of the healing process. "They have lost something - I want to help make them whole again." Fueled by artistic passion and innate curiosity, Kindra Crick bases her work on scientific research. Using a confocal microscope, Crick and collaborator Dr. John Harkness capture photo images of neurons. Crick uses these images as the basis for her chalkboard series, exploring the biology of memory and encouraging her audience to ponder the mystery and awe of their existence. Furthermore, Crick's brain harbors special DNA. Her Grandfather, Francis Crick, is known for his discovery of the structure of the DNA double helix. Glass sculptor like you've never seen before! Eric Franklin creates full size human skeletons and skulls, then fills them with neon, argon, and other gasses, making them glow from within. Eclipse Highlights!

Thousands of people descend on the Garden to witness the eclipse of 2017, and experience not only the natural beauty, but see the permanent and temporary art installations in a brand-new way. William Hernandez paints wild, colorful scenes that highlight the surprising and the surreal. He studied classical painting at The National School of Fine Arts of Peru, one of the South America's most prestigious institutions. William moved to Oregon in 2009 but he keeps his connection to Peru alive through the vivid colors and characters in his paintings. He does no sketches or studies - instead, he attacks the canvas with paint, creating as he goes, often working on four or five paintings at a time. William's success continues to grow in the Northwest: he is now represented by galleries in both Portland and Seattle.

White spent the early part of his career in Portland, where he was hired by the Works Progress Administration in 1938 to photograph historic downtown buildings before they were demolished. This collection of WPA photographs reveals an era of beautiful architecture in the city, where classic cast iron buildings lined the streets of what is now Portland's waterfront area. Some buildings from this era remain downtown, but for dozens of these classic structures, White's photographs are the only remaining record. Our story explores White's photographic mastery and an era of classic Portland architecture. Art Beat visits Painter Robert "Bob" Schlegel in his Banks studio and as he sketches the Centennial Mills deconstruction from a riverside spot in NE Portland. Robert Adams Robert Adams has spent his life making photographs that document environmental changes. He's impacted both photography and environmental culture with his work. He lives in Astoria with his wife, who is also his creative collaborator.

Education	MLNH 012105	PBS NewsHour	NULL	60 minutes	11/24/17 7:00 PM	PBS	News (live news only)	1	0:06:59	The first all-female college in Rwanda is making strides in empowering women from all backgrounds to become the nation's next business leaders, part of an effort to leave behind an image of a violent country, wracked by genocide. At the Akilah Institute, students prepare for well-paying jobs and financial independence and learn gender equality. Special correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports.
Employment	AMEX 002802	Mine Wars: American Experience; The	NULL	120 minutes	11/24/17 9:00 PM	PBS	Documentary	1	2:00:00	Go inside the bitter battle to unionize coal miners at the dawn of the 20th century. The struggle over the power that fueled America led to the largest armed insurrection since the Civil War, and turned parts of West Virginia into a bloody war zone.
Energy	FRON 003516	Frontline	War on the EPA	60 minutes	10/11/17 10:00 PM	PBS	Other	1	0:00:00	See how Scott Pruitt went from fighting the EPA to running the agency and rolling back years of policy. An investigation into the conservative political forces and causes, like climate change skepticism, that propelled Pruitt's takeover of the EPA.
Energy	GCD 000000	Grand Coulee Dam: American Experience	NULL	90 minutes	12/26/17 9:00 PM	PBS	Documentary	1	0:00:00	Grand Coulee was more than a dam — it was a proclamation. In the wake of the Great Depression, America turned from private enterprise to public works — not simply to provide jobs, but to restore faith. The ultimate expression of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, Grand Coulee played a central role in transforming the Northwest; it was the largest hydroelectric power producing facility in the world when it was completed in March 1941. After WWII, a vast irrigation project made possible by the dam helped turn the barren deserts of central Washington into rich farmland. But the dam prevented access to one of the greatest salmon rivers in the world. Deprived of the salmon — their most important resource — the native people who lived along the Columbia witnessed a profound cultural decline. Featuring the men and women who lived and worked at Grand Coulee and the native people whose lives were changed, as well as historians and engineers, this film explores how the tension between technological achievement and environmental impact hangs over the project's legacy.
