It was stolen land. And it's being rightfully returned.

Those were the sentiments expressed by Margaret Anderson Kelliher, the former commissioner for the Minnesota Department of Transportation, during a public event Friday, Nov. 18 at the Grand Portage Lodge. The former commissioner spoke within eyesight of the rugged coastline of Lake Superior. At the event, tribal leaders, local and state officials, and community members witnessed a historic land conveyance from the state to the Grand Portage Band of Lake Superior Chippewa. According to MnDOT officials, this is the first time in state history MnDOT transferred publicly-held land to a tribal nation off of reservation lands in Minnesota.
