	Noticias al Minuto	8/13/2015	6:09 pm	:30	Topic: NEW GALLUP POLL REGARDING US CITIZENS IN FAVOR OF IMMIGRATION REFORM TO ALLOW UNDOCUMENTED IMMIGRANTS TO STAY IN THIS COUNTRY. Two in three U.S. adults favor a plan to allow immigrants who are living illegally in the U.S. to remain in the country and become citizens if they meet certain requirements over time. Far fewer support allowing those immigrants to remain in the U.S. to work for a limited period of time (14%), or to deport all of these immigrants back to their home countries (19%). U.S. adults' views have been largely stable over the past decade. The latest update comes from Gallup's 2015 Minority Rights and Relations poll, conducted June 15-July 10. The poll included larger samples of blacks and Hispanics. Immigration is of special significance to Hispanics, about half of whom are immigrants themselves, according to the poll. Hispanics (77%) are more likely than non-Hispanic whites (62%) or non-Hispanic blacks (70%) to favor a path to citizenship for immigrants who are in the U.S. illegally. One in five whites, compared with 14% of blacks and 8% of Hispanics, prefer deporting undocumented immigrants back to their home countries. Hispanics are slightly less likely now than in 2006 (86%) to favor a path to citizenship for immigrants. The 2006 survey was the last time Gallup asked the question in a poll that included an expanded sample of Hispanics. Whites' and blacks' views are largely unchanged since then.

	Noticias al Minuto	7/29/2015	11;30 pm	:30	Topic: WHAT TO DO IF POLICE STOPS YOU? WHAT ARE YOUR RIGHTS? What are you supposed to do if a police car is following you with its siren blaring or emergency lights flashing? The advice is to pull over to the side of the road safely and quickly. Pull over in a way that will be most likely to calm down an angry or annoyed traffic officer. Use your turn signal to indicate any lane changes from left to right, and slow down fairly quickly, but not so quickly that the officer will have to brake to avoid hitting you. Pull over as far to the right as possible so that, when the officer comes up to your widow, he or she won't have to worry about being clipped by vehicles in the right lane. By stopping as soon as you can, you'll have a better chance of figuring out exactly where the officer says you committed a violation. You may want to return to that area later to make sure the officer was telling the truth about how he or she judged your speed, saw your turn, or witnessed any other violation.

A performance gap on the ACT college entrance exam persisted this year between California's Latino and white high school students, according to new test results Readiness for College...Latinos struggle to close gap with whites in California ACT scores...A performance gap on the ACT college entrance exam persisted this year between California's Latino and white high school students, according to new test results. Educators and experts find this trend particularly concerning. They had hoped for better results from the relatively small segment of test takers who are largely a self-selected group of students who are motivated to get to college. "I find it really disturbing," said Mark Schneider, a vice president at American Institutes for Research who previously directed the federal government's education research arm. Across the country, the class of 2015 stagnated, with 40% of the 1.9 million test takers showing what the organization calls "strong readiness," according to results released Wednesday. In California, 30% of the class of 2015 took the test. California students overall outperformed their peers nationally. While 28% of students across the country met all four ACT targets, intended to represent college success, 37% of California's test takers did so. California's test takers had an average overall score of 22.5, compared to 21 nationally. A maximum score is 36.

	Noticias al Minuto	7/26/2015	6;21 pm	:30	Topic: RESULTS OF CNN/ORC POLL ON TRUMP, REPUBLICANS AND HILLARY. In the first national telephone poll since Donald Trump earned rebukes from Republican leaders over his comments about Senator John McCain's military service, the real estate mogul has increased his support among GOP voters and now stands atop the race for the party's nomination. The new CNN/ORC Poll finds Trump at 18% support among Republicans, with former Florida governor Jeb Bush just behind at 15%, within the poll's margin of error. They are joined at the top of the pack by Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker, with 10% support among Republicans and Republican-leaning independents that are registered to vote. Trump's backing has climbed 6 points since a late-June poll, while support for Bush and Walker has not changed significantly. None of the other 14 candidates tested in the new CNN/ORC survey earned double-digit support. When tested in hypothetical general election matchups against top Democrats, he trails both frontrunner Hillary Clinton and upstart Senator Bernie Sanders by wide margins. Bush and Walker run just behind Clinton and about even with Sanders. Trump's un-favorability rating is sky high. Overall, 59% of all registered voters have an unfavorable opinion of Trump, though that dips to 42% among GOP voters. None of the other Republicans landing near the top of the field have such a negative image nationwide, though many remain little known.

Quinnipiac University's national poll, released Thursday, finds that Clinton remains the Democratic frontrunner with 45 percent, but her lead over Bernie Sanders has slipped by 10 percentage points. Sanders has 22 percent, and Biden comes in third with 18 percent. On the Republican side, Donald Trump broadened his lead -- he's now at 28 percent, with Ben Carson trailing at 12 percent and Jeb Bush slipping back into a three-way tie for third with Ted Cruz and Marco Rubio (they each have 7 percent). But Trump is also the candidate with the highest percentage of GOP voters (26 percent) who say there's "no way" they would support him. Eleven percent of Democrats would say "no way" to Clinton.

	Noticias al Minuto	7/22/2015	4:27 PM	:30	Topic: SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY FUND CAN RUN OUT BY 2016 The 11 million Americans who receive Social Security disability face steep benefit cuts next year. The trustees who oversee Social Security and Medicare said the disability trust fund will run out of money in late 2016. That would trigger an automatic 19 percent cut in benefits, unless Congress acts. The average monthly benefit for disabled workers and their families is $1,017. The typical beneficiary would see a reduction of $193 a month. In more bad news for beneficiaries, the trustee's project there will be no cost-of-living increase in benefits at the end of the year. It would mark only the third year without an increase since automatic adjustments were adopted in 1975. Separately, about 7 million Medicare beneficiaries could face a monthly premium increase of at least $54 for outpatient coverage. That works out to an increase of more than 50 percent. The annual report card on the financial health of Social Security and Medicare shows that the federal government's largest benefit programs are feeling the strain of aging baby boomers as they both approach milestone anniversaries.

Immigration	Noticias al Minuto	7/7/2015	11:26 PM	:30	Topic: "COME OUT" CAMPAIGN FOR UNDOCUMENTED IMMIGRANTS Undocumented immigrants are going Hollywood. In an effort to get more Americans to understand their stories and push Washington to pass an immigration law, advocates kick off a campaign Tuesday to get undocumented immigrants to "come out." Rather than conceal their identities and hide from law enforcement officials, those who came to the U.S. illegally are being asked to share their stories through videos on a website to help show what they do for the country. And the campaign is getting help from some heavy hitters in Hollywood. "The biggest risk already happened when you crossed the border," said Cesar Millan, who illegally entered from Mexico long before he became known as the "Dog Whisperer" on the National Geographic Channel. "You might not have any papers yet, but you're already a member of this pack, you're already a person who produces and helps the economy of America." The push is the latest step in a slowly developing strategy by undocumented immigrants to go public as a way to push for action from Washington and to use the publicity to protect themselves from deportation.

	Noticias al Minuto	7/27/2015	6;13 pm	:30	Topic: JUDGE ORDERS RELEASE OF IMMIGRANT CHILDREN DETAINED BY U.S. A federal ruling criticized the conditions in which children who crossed the border from Mexico are held. A federal judge in California has ruled that the Obama administration's detention of children and their mothers who were caught crossing the border illegally is a serious violation of a longstanding court settlement, and that the families should be released as quickly as possible. In a decision late Friday roundly rejecting the administration's arguments for holding the families, Judge Dolly M. Gee of Federal District Court for the Central District of California found that two detention centers in Texas that the administration opened last summer fail to meet minimum legal requirements of the 1997 settlement for facilities housing children. Judge Gee also found that migrant children had been held in "widespread deplorable conditions" in Border Patrol stations after they were first caught, and she said the authorities had "wholly failed" to provide the "safe and sanitary" conditions required for children even in temporary cells. The opinion was a significant legal blow to detention policies ordered by Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson in response to an influx of children and parents, mostly from Central America, across the border in South Texas last summer.

The Karnes County Residential Center is operated by GEO Group-the second largest private prison company in the country that has faced numerous accusations of atrocities and civil rights violations. It is also the site of recent-and repeated-hunger strikes led by mothers incarcerated with their children, in protest of their conditions, detentions, and in many cases, their looming deportations. Social worker Oliva López corroborated the accounts of people on the inside when she conducted an exclusive interview with McClatchy DC, published Monday, in which she countered federal and local authorities' narratives which cast the detention center as a safe and tolerable place for families to reside during asylum application processes. López said that, in fact, Karnes is a prison, and its atrocities include: A five-year-old girl who survived sexual assault during her migration was falsely declared fit for discharge by a prison psychologist despite numerous warning signs, including the fact that she was suffering from nightmares, losing weight, and had reverted to wearing a diaper.

Thursday marked three months since the death of inmate Jose de Jesus Deniz Sahagun, who federal officials say committed suicide. Deniz was the 14th person to die at Eloy Detention Center since 2003, making it the deadliest immigrant-detention facility in the country. Former Eloy detainees and employees of Puente Arizona, a grassroots migrants-right organization, gathered around 11 a.m. holding signs that read, "Justice for Jose de Jesus" and "If I die in ICE custody, don't believe their lies." Puente Arizona maintains that there are discrepancies in the official accounts of the deaths of detainees at Eloy.

If it were up to GOP presidential candidate Bobby Jindal, mayors of "sanctuary cities" would all be arrested and sued. In an interview with Boston Herald Radio on Monday, the Louisiana governor took a firm stance against those cities and counties that refuse to fully cooperate with Immigration and Customs Enforcement. "I would hold them as an accomplice, make them criminally culpable. I'd also make them civilly liable so that families -- victims' families -- could sue," Jindal said, alluding to a previously deported felon who was charged with the murder of Kathryn Steinle in San Francisco last month. The incident has been a major talking point among Republicans targeting immigration policy. "Especially if the prosecutors aren't taking action or the mayor's not changing their ways, I'd allow the families to go to court to sue them civilly as well to recover damages," he continued. Republican presidential candidate Jeb Bush also spoke out against sanctuary cities on Monday and called for police to become more involved in enforcing immigration laws. Joseph Curtatone, mayor of the sanctuary city Somerville, Massachusetts, joined Boston Herald Radio after Jindal's segment and brushed off the comments as an attention-seeking tactic. "You say something absurd, you fear monger, you play to the crowd, you try to create the crowd and the mob -- and we're smarter than that," Curtatone said. "We're better than that. To say a blanket statement that sanctuary cities in and of itself spur someone to commit a heinous crime is really offensive."

The new measure amends a law enacted in 1937 that said "aliens" should be hired on public works contracts only after citizens of the United States. Part of that law creating an order of hiring was repealed in 1970, but the term "alien" remains in the labor code. Brown also approved a new law allowing high school students who are legal permanent residents to serve as poll workers in California elections to help with the growing language issue of a more diverse voting population. And he signed a bill barring the consideration of a child's immigration status in civil actions involving liability. That measure, AB 560 by Assemblyman Jimmy Gomez (D-Los Angeles), is in response to a lawsuit by more than 80 elementary school children against the Los Angeles Unified School District over alleged sexual misconduct by a former teacher at Miramonte Elementary School.

Calling the government's latest arguments "repackaged and reheated", she found the US Department of Homeland Security (DHS) in breach of a longstanding legal agreement stipulating that immigrant children cannot be held in unlicensed secured facilities, and gave agency officials until 23 October to comply. DHS lawyers had asked the judge to reconsider her ruling, arguing that the agency was already doing its best to move families through detention quickly and that the facilities had been converted into short-term processing centers. The government poured millions of dollars into two large detention centers in Texas after tens of thousands of immigrant families, mostly mothers with children from Central America, crossed the Rio Grande into the US last summer. Many have petitioned for asylum after fleeing gang and domestic violence back home.

According to State Senator Bill Monning, it is a bill that will forever change the rights of persons with terminal illnesses. The case of 28 year-old Brittany Maynard is at the center of the bill. She asked to be administered a medication that will allow her to die and end her suffering, but was forced to seek assistance in another place. According to those who back the bill in the California Senate, there are options for the patient and his or her family. With a vote of 43 in favor and 34 against, the measure overcame tough obstacles. After the approval of euthanasia in the state of Oregon, there has been a 49% increase of assisted suicide among terminal patients, that is 41 percent over the national average. Religious groups reject the option which will allow the governor's signature in a 90 day period. Other states that have approved assisted suicide are: Oregon, Washington, Vermont, Montana and New México.

Minimum Wage	Noticias al Minuto	7/22/2015	3;22 pm	:30	Topic: NEW YORK TO INCREASE MINIMUM WAGE New York moved on Wednesday to raise the minimum wage for fast-food workers to $15 an hour by the end of 2018 in New York City and by mid-2021 in the rest of the state. The New York Wage Board voted unanimously for the increase, which would cover some 180,000 workers statewide and affect fast-food chains with 30 locations or more in the United States. The three-member board was formed at the behest of Governor Andrew Cuomo in May after the state legislature turned down his proposals for minimum wage increases for most workers. With the federal minimum wage at $7.25 an hour since 2009, labor and religious groups have pressed state and local governments to enact pay raises as their hopes dim for an increase by the Republican-controlled U.S. Congress. Last month, Los Angeles set its minimum wage to rise from $9 an hour to $15 by 2020, affecting some 600,000 workers. Seattle and San Francisco also have increased minimum wages in recent years. A statewide wage increase for fast-food workers as opposed to city-based would be a first, said the National Employment Law Project, a nonprofit advocacy group. The rise to $15 an hour marks a major step from New York's current minimum wage of $8.75.
