Pacific Islanders in Hawaii, excluding Native Hawaiians, make up just 4% of the state's population.

But they compose 13% of coronavirus cases in the state.

That's according to new data from the Hawaii Department of Health released Friday that provides the most detailed breakdown yet about how COVID-19 is affecting diverse communities in Hawaii. The latest analysis eliminates the "mixed race" group and calculates population sizes slightly differently from typical census categories.

The state's second-worst COVID-19 disparity is affecting the Filipino community. Filipinos make up 16% percent of Hawaii's population but make up 21% of the state's coronavirus cases.

Hawaii's white community is also experiencing a smaller disparity — they make up 28% of cases but just 25% of the population.

Duration: 5 minutes

In the decade before federal investigators charged five permitting employees for bribery, the Honolulu Ethics Commission warned the Department of Planning and Permitting about questionable behavior by staff and lax oversight that could lead to abuses of power.

The city watchdog agency investigated the department several times after it received numerous complaints about a pay-to-play culture, documents show. Commission attorneys raised concerns about “actual or apparent special treatment” given to certain customers, according to a confidential memo the commission sent to DPP in 2012.
