Located in the historic fishing village of Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, St. Michael the Archangel Church boasts a rich mosaic of customs and cultures. As the parish grows, the diversity of our parish will continue to flourish. In October 2006, an earthquake damaged the original Church building, and in 2007 the Church was vacated because it was considered "a dangerous building." Demolished in 2011, parishioners raised funds to cover the cost of building a new Church with a similar to the original St. Michael's. Fund raising efforts continue to this day. Construction is now complete and we are happy to welcome you to the new St. Michael the Archangel.

Founded on July 5, 1840 by the priests of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary and dedicated in 1855, St. Michael's Church was the largest structure in its day. Built of lava rock and coral-sand mortar, the floor was simple hard packed dirt. A small second floor was used as living quarters for the priest, a bell from France tolled to the faithful in Kailua-Kona. The Church was not only a historical site, but also served as our community gathering place.

Program: Community Matters Topic: Kailua-Kona Hula Festival Aired: 3/21, 3/24, 3/28, 3/31 Time: 11:30 a.m., 7:00 p.m.

Duration: 28:30

Organized by Hawaii County's Elderly Activities Division-Special Programs, the festival is the longest running kupuna hula festival in the world. It was started in 1982 by the late hula master George Naope and former Department of Parks and Recreation director George Yoshida. The goal was to bring together the multiple senior groups with the intent to perpetuate the art of hula and offer an opportunity to perform and compete.

There are halau coming all the way from Okinawa, Japan, to participate. There's also a group coming from California this year. Across the island we have halau from Kauai, Molokai, Maui, Oahu, and of course the Big Island. It's a good mix of everything — it's not just Kona halau or Big Island halau that are coming to participate. That makes it exciting because you get to see groups that come year after year from far away, knowing that they're all bringing their A-game to come and participate.
