MAKING IT GROW

April

Please join us April 7 at 7pm on SCETV for a special “Making It Grow” when we bring you news from several of our partners about how they are safely serving the citizens of South Carolina during these extraordinary times. Anthony Padgett, President and CEO of SCETV, assures us that his agency will continue to bring on-line educational learning and fact-based up to the minute information. Hugh Weathers, SC Commissioner of Agriculture, explains that all businesses related to agriculture, from actual farming to food preparation, are essential industries and that our food supply remains safe and reliable. Although Clemson Extension employees are following all mandated requirements for safe work environments, we’re still busy helping clients with questions about gardening, insects, food safety, 4H activities, rural health initiatives, and more. You can even submit soil samples and plant problems by mail. To learn more about these resources offered by Clemson Extension, we talk with Horticulture Program Team Director Cory Tanner, 4-H Agent Patricia A. Whitener and Director of Nutrition and Health Extension Programs Michelle Parisi, PhD, RD. We’ll also have a quick chat about what insects to keep your eye on in the garden this week with Horticulture Agent Vicky Bertagnolli and SC Master Gardener Coordinator Terasa Lott will also share “gardens of the week” pictures sent in by viewers. The show will also stream live on Facebook for anyone to ask gardening or other questions. We are all here for you!

Please join us April 14 at 7pm on SCETV for “Making It Grow” as we show segments highlighting the local produce that will soon be at our markets. Gaie McLeod of McLeod Farms shares two of her favorite recipes with us – the famous peach enchiladas with the secret soft drink ingredient and also a peachy pizza. Clemson’s Health and Nutrition Agent Angela Forbes visited Sumter with ideas of adding more fresh produce and color to our meals. Since the age of two, Emery Tumbleston of Champney’s Blueberry Farm has been harvesting blueberries and she makes her mother’s cobbler with us. And let’s not forget watermelons – our Watermelon Queen pays us a visit with ideas and news while we wrap up with a fascinating story about the once believed lost Bradford watermelon which now is quite the rage.

Please join us April 21 at 7pm on SCETV for “Making It Grow” as we show segments highlighting the beauty and creativity of Private Gardens. We’re showing four remarkable gardens that we visited in the past and one new one. Beginning on top of Paris Mountain, the Bradshaws explain the imaginative concepts behind their remarkable, diverse home landscape, and thanks to Davis Sanders from South Pleasantburg Nursery for introducing us. Danny Howard took us to Bob Smith, his brother-in-law, who has created an Asian themed backyard complete with a beautiful koi pond near Greenville. Inspirational is the only word for the Calhoun County garden of Earline Wiles, who in her early 90’s is still gardening every day. We sneak behind the gates, thanks to Amy Dabbs, to the Charleston Garden of Bill Lyddan to see his green and white garden. We end these visits with our new segment that Laura Lee Rose took us to - an oasis for wildlife and children in downtown Beaufort created over the years by Linda Peters.

Please join us April 28 at 7pm on SCETV for our “Making It Grow Spring Special”. We are back this week with another show via Zoom giving advice on a variety of topics from turfgrass, insects, trees, to research at the Coastal Research and Education Center. We also talk about how Clemson Extension is helping the citizens of SC during these unique times. Joining host Amanda McNulty for these discussions are fellow agents Terasa Lott, Cory Tanner, Zack Snipes, Adam Gore, Chase Smoak, Vicky Bertagnolli and Tony Melton.

May

Please join us May 5 at 7pm on SCETV for our “Making It Grow!” once again via Zoom. Clemson Extension Agent and Host Amanda McNulty answers gardening questions with SC Master Gardener Program State Coordinator Terasa Lott, Statewide School and Community Gardening Coordinator Amy Dabbs, Horticulture Program Team Director Cory Tanner, Agriculture/Horticulture Extension Agent Adam Gore, and Senior Extension Agent Tony Melton. We also talk with Extension Entomologist Dr. Eric Benson as he shares important information all about termites. Also joining the show is SC Botanical Garden Education Program Coordinator Allison Jones who shows us a botanical craft decorating eggs from what you find in your yard. All this and more on the next “Making It Grow”.

Please join us May 12 at 7pm on SCETV for “Making It Grow!” as we put the spotlight on the wide ranging research done by Clemson Agents and Specialists. First, we show TJ Savereno at the Sandhills Research and Education Center where they are conducting important work on selecting native plants for the understory of Longleaf Pines. Then, Paul Thompson gives us tips and demonstrates how to break up root balls in potted plants from nurseries and garden centers. Next, we take a trip to the Musser Fruit Research Center where Amanda tours a pawpaw patch with Dr. Gregory Reighard. Finally, we go back to the Sandhills REC and learn all about the importance of prescribed fires in forest management with Ryan Bean, Cody Bishop and Dr. Cory Heaton. All this and more on the next “Making It Grow”.

June

Please join us June 2 at 7pm on SCETV for “Making It Grow!” as we celebrate that June is National Rose Month. Clemson Extension Agent and Host Amanda McNulty recaps some of our favorite segments involving roses. First, we go to Laurens, SC and talk with co-owner Bill Patterson at Roses Unlimited about what it takes to operate a rose nursery that ships all over the world. Then we stay in Laurens and go to the home of Roses Unlimited other co-owner Pat Henry and see all the varieties she has in her landscape. Next, we go to the Pee Dee Research and Education Center where Clemson Extension Associate Jonathan Windham takes us through the process of propagating roses. For more in-depth information we visit the campus of Clemson University where Associate Professor Dr. Jim Faust uses roses to demonstrate the urban legends of preserving cut flowers in a vase, but then also shows the best way to do it. Speaking of preserving roses, our final stop is in Columbia, SC where Cristina Segarra and her staff at Flowers Forever transforms flowers from weddings or other special events into pressed works of art, jewelry or other keepsakes.

Please join us June 23 at 7pm on SCETV for “Making It Grow!”. Clemson Extension Agent and Host Amanda McNulty and SC Master Gardener Program Coordinator Terasa Lott guide us through a show featuring lots of different topics. After we see some “Gardens of the Week” from viewers, we visit Sol Flowers Sunflower Farm in Anderson, SC where they are getting ready for their yearly open house but with social distancing guidelines in place. Then we will visit 4-H Agents Mark Cathcart and Carol Hamilton as they show us how to make Dutch Oven beef stew and apple cobbler. Next, we’ll see how to make a mini-garden from LayLa Burgess, a Clemson Extension Agent from the Home and Garden Information Center team. After that, Amanda will talk with Clemson Extension Apiculture and Pollinator Specialist Ben Powell about the importance of pollinators. Continuing on, we visit the garden of Sumter resident Dr. J. Grady Locklear and see his hydrangeas in full bloom. Lastly, Amanda talks with South Carolina Specialty Food Association representative Suzy Ellison and Dave Mackey from Epworth Ice Cream as they have been making ice cream years to support the Epworth Children’s Home. Special thanks to Clemson PSA Video and Digital Media Producer Kayla Rutherford for helping with the 4-H and mini-garden segment. All this and more on the next “Making It Grow”. We’ll also be online to answer your questions through Facebook Live.

Join us for “Making It Grow” June 30 at 7pm on SCETV, Gaie McLeod of McLeod Farms shares two of her favorite recipes with us – the famous peach enchiladas with the secret soft drink ingredient and also a peachy pizza. Clemson’s Health and Nutrition Agent Angela Forbes visited Sumter with ideas of adding more fresh produce and color to our meals. Since the age of two, Emery Tumbleston of Champney’s Blueberry Farm has been harvesting blueberries and she makes her mother’s cobbler with us. And let’s not forget watermelons – our Watermelon Queen pays us a visit with ideas and news while we wrap up with a fascinating story about the once believed lost Bradford watermelon which now is quite the rage. We will also be answering your gardening questions on the Facebook stream of the show. All this and more on the next “Making It Grow”.
