Leah Lizarondo, CEO of 412 Food Rescue

412 Food Rescue: Driven by the belief that good food belongs to people, not landfills, 412 Food Rescue launched in March 2015 to redirect healthy food from the waste stream to nonprofits that serve food insecure populations. In the United States, 40% of food produced is wasted while 1 in 9 people goes hungry. Focusing on the logistics challenges of retail food recovery, 412 Food Rescue addresses both problems through technology-coordinated, community-powered networks. The only organization in Allegheny County focused on food that would otherwise be discarded, 412 Food Rescue develops innovative solutions to eradicate food waste in the region and is now expanding its model to cities around the country.

The sudden and severe interruption to the national and international economy has affected countless households, leading to unemployment, furloughs, and business closures. Without the regular income, even with a portion available through unemployment insurance, these households have likewise fallen behind on paying bills, submitting loan payments, and staying up on regular expenses.

It comes as no surprise to anyone that the pandemic has left many families in financial shambles. We discuss consumer options of either avoiding bankruptcy or filing for bankruptcy.
