H.I.S. Bridgebuilders is a movement of God uniting Christians across cities to restore urban communities. The mission is strongly centered around Hope in Salvation. It began in Dallas over two decades ago and branched out to San Antonio over 10 years ago. They provide education, healthcare, spiritual development and employment, while connecting communities together. Today, H.I.S. Bridgebuilders has served over 60,000 people. San Antonio Housing Authority has evaluated the ministry's annual worth to the neighborhood as over $250,000 based on the work they are doing and the supplies they are sharing. Megan Legacy is joined by Melvin Fechner, Executive Director of H.I.S. Bridgebuilders in San Antonio. H.I.S. Bridgebuilders has made a major impact on the lives of people they have served. They provide bible studies, evangelism, monthly neighborhood-wide events, vacation bible school and more in the communities where they serve. They offer character building and life skills training classes for adult and younger women to help them establish decision-making skills. They also have a group specifically designed for girls called Charis Girls. The work they do is supported by several churches and volunteers who provide supplies and services. They exist to bring the body of Christ together and build up God's kingdom.

Choose to Change Foundation ministers inside prison walls to inspire men to change the course of their lives. The ministry was founded by Evangelist Orlando Salinas who was spiraling down a dark path that almost cost him his family. He has experienced drug addiction, crime and served 13 years in prison before discovering ministry. Choose to Change Foundation serves as a source for paroles who are on their way out of prison to learn about God and discover a new way of life. Orlando says our society is being devastated through drugs/opioids, alcohol addiction, child abuse, and more. The mission challenges and equips men to become more effective fathers, husband and leaders in their communities. They offer weekly personal development classes, mentoring, and rehabilitation. They help men get involved in a church, so they will develop a community of support. Now, Orlando is taking his ministry into schools. He doesn't want to wait for adolescents to end up behind bars, he wants to guide them away from prison before they begin going down that path.

Host Jasmine Douglas introduces the organization, Glory House. Susette Anazardo, Case Manager at Glory House, shares that human trafficking is extremely common. The people you least expect have been victims and become survivors of human trafficking. Betty Lara, Executive Director, shares the 2011 vision to open Glory House to provide a home for adult survivors of human trafficking where they could come to be healed and restored. Today, Glory House is a residential program for 12 to 18 months where women receive help with inner healing. As a faith-based organization, the main purpose is their relationship with God because only He can do the full restoration and healing in their hearts. Glory House provides for their basic needs, as well as medical services, legal assistance, and connects them with various providers throughout the city. Non-resident survivors, as well as ladies ready to leave the life, can receive services at the drop-in center. A safe house is important because usually these women have never had a healthy homelife. Many have been abused or even sold by their parents. They have been coerced or drugged and they need a safe place from their traffickers. They need a safe place to live where they can begin their healing and restoration; a safe place that they can call home. Saray, a Glory House resident, shares her story. Susette shares success stories of survivors. Betty shares that every woman has a purpose and a destiny. Her heart rejoices when she sees that purpose and destiny fulfilled in each of these women. To her, when you see the transformation of a woman who has been incarcerated in her mind for years and now she moves into freedom, that is the greatest gift.

Children of prisoners are 7 times more likely to become incarcerated themselves. They are at critical risk of dropping out of school, getting involved in violence, and teen pregnancy, due to the fact that most of them are living in poverty-stricken, high crime areas with few or no positive adult role models. Wings For LIFE International ministry springs from the passion of caring people and the deep concern they have to help families of prisoners who have been largely shunned or ignored by our society. In our society where children are all at risk in one way or another, children whose parent(s) are in prison, face even more challenges. Ann Edenfield, Executive Director and Founder of Wings for LIFE International ministry discusses with us how not only inmates are arrested, but their families are arrested as well. Wings For LIFE International hosts three community Family Days a year: a Christmas, Easter, and a Back-To-School Party, hoping to reach families at important times throughout the year. The Family Days are held in sponsoring congregations in different parts of the city and in different denominations. All participants in Wings, whether they are inmate's family members or church volunteers, enjoy the interaction of volunteers working together from many different denominations. Wings For LIFE International strives to build quality relationships and strong values in participants. Wings provides an arena for effective ways to rebuild assets in the lives of our young people, which can greatly reduce or prevent their involvement in at-risk behaviors. Ann Edenfield, Exec. Dir. and Founder of Wings For LIFE International is here to tell us how they minister to the needs of the children and families of those that are incarcerated.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Pastor Kevin Brown of Side-By-Side Church International of Orange County, California to discuss the growing crime of sex trafficking. Pastor Brown explains that human trafficking comes in many forms. The most common that we hear about in the United States is sex trafficking. Other forms of human trafficking are labor, indigent and, in other countries, child soldiers. All of it is modern- day slavery. There are more slaves today throughout the world than at any time in the history of mankind. In Pastor Brown’s experience, the victims of sex trafficking have a tremendous lack of trust which makes it very difficult for them to decide to exit “the life.” In Santa Ana, there is a three quarters of a mile section called a track. A track or a blade is where sex victims, sex slaves, are forced, through coercion, to go out and walk around. Anyone can be vulnerable to becoming a victim of sex trafficking. However, the most prevalent they have come across have been runaways or those who have come out of foster care. Pastor Brown shares that Lives Worth Saving Human Trafficking was implemented to bring awareness to the forefront for Christian organizations, non-profits, and grass roots organizations. When his ministry began, although there were and are many good organizations, doing excellent work to help bring awareness, prevention, and help for victims to get out of the life, he did not see a unified effort. Hence the ministry name “Side-By-Side” which is trying to bring more collaboration with churches getting involved and working side-by-side to impact the problem of sex trafficking in America, because we know we must work side-by-side with other like-minded people to bring transformation to an injustice. They’ve even created a curriculum about safety. The church, as a community, can become more proactive by collaborating with other organizations already doing the work. One thing we don’t see are groups of Christians going out into communities where the tracks are at, or where we know the hotels have a lot of human trafficking activity. We don’t see groups of Christians going there and praying. Not protesting but praying; going there and changing the spirit. Going there and letting the captives be set free because you brought the light to that darkness. Pastor Brown has seen, first hand, God perform these transformations because people went and prayed, and stood their ground, and it brought light to darkness. Sierra Swift shares her story how she became involved in sex trafficking and how Jesus Christ has changed her life.

Mike Huckabee talks about his experience as Governor and the changes needed in the criminal justice system. A couple of decades ago, a popular policy was ‘Three Strikes You’re Out.’ That meant a life sentence for three thefts of $400. It costs more money to put a person in prison for a year than to put a person in college and pay full tuition, room and board, buy books, and even provide spending money. It also costs more than it would to provide mental health needs for many people who are locked up without any treatment for what landed them there in the first place. We don’t have a crime problem, we have a drug and alcohol problem. Eighty-eight percent of the inmates in the Arkansas system were there for a drug or alcohol-related crime. Some of those folks absolutely are dangerous and they need to be imprisoned. But many would do better to be in treatment centers and community restitution centers which address the root problem, and often cost as little as ten percent of the cost of a full-blown lockup. Without addressing why people end up in prison, our correction system is mostly a place where greater criminal skills are learned and, upon release, the inmate who can’t find a job ends up committing more elaborate crimes. While the government can’t force people into faith-based programs, his experience was that only the faith-based programs had long-term success rates. Programs like InnerChange and Prison Fellowship had a less than twenty percent recidivism rate compared to the more than eighty percent recidivism of traditional approaches. Angola Prison in Louisiana was once considered the most violent and hopeless institution in all of America. Now, it is a model of changing inmate behavior by changing the inmate from the inside out through a process that is all about repentance, forgiveness, restitution, and redemption by faith in God. Some inmates will never get out because of what they did, but while their bodies may not be freed, their souls have been.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzi, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shows us the life of a former prostitute and how she found hope. Prostitution has been around for thousands of years damaging the lives of many women. Recent statistics tell us that the average prostitute begins selling her body between the ages of 12 and 14. Many of these women face physical dangers from assaults and rape. Some are even murdered in the streets. The great percentage of these women go on to contract sexually transmitted diseases and psychological disorders. To many, this seems like a hopeless situation, but we believe that nothing is hopeless when God enters the picture. No matter what you've done, no matter where you've been, God is able to change your life and turn your life around and give you a new direction, give you new purpose, and heal your broken heart. His love is able to change your life.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzi, Founder of Victory Outreach International, takes us into the lives of women locked up behind prison bars. The life of a woman prisoner is very dangerous. Many of these women will never adapt to so-called normal life because of the traumatic experience they face behind those prison walls. There's a tremendous amount of tension, violence, and fear that women face daily. The percentage of women going to prison has sky rocketed over the last 30 years by 646%, rising from about 15,000 women to over 110,000 women. So many of these women experience physical and sexual abuse while imprisoned. More than one million women are a part of the criminal justice system whether it is through incarceration, probation or parole. Many of these women are mothers or mothers to be at the time of their imprisonment, and 62% of these women have children under the age of 18. These incarcerated women find themselves in a place of regret, depression, physical harm, and sometimes with suicidal thoughts. But the bars of a prison cell are not strong enough to hold back God's grace, love and forgiveness. These are the stories of a few women who were once locked in a prison.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzi, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shares the testimony of a former madame. Prostitution has been an epidemic for thousands of years. In fact, it is considered the world's oldest profession. The lives of those who are prostitutes are greatly affected not only physically but emotionally and mentally. There is another side to the prostitution business. Along with prostitution comes sex trafficking. Typically, we see men referred to as pimps that handle this side of the business, but on rare occasions, women have decided to step into the business as well. These women pimps, or madams as they are called, handle the money. They transport the call girls and at times get violent to protect their women. This is a problem that is taking place in inner cities around the world. Victory Outreach has seen firsthand the lives of so many who have come out of that lifestyle totally transformed. The message they give to them is that you shall know the truth, the Bible says, and the truth shall set you free. And he who the Son sets free is free indeed.

TBN KTAJ got the chance to interview Major Abe Tamayo, Corps Officer for The Salvation Army in St. Joseph, MO. The Salvation Army began in 1865 under the leadership of William Booth, with a calling to help those who were poverty stricken. In 1880, The Salvation Army came to New York City and in 1886 opened Its doors in St. Joseph, MO. The mission of The Salvation Army is to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ and meet human needs in His name without discrimination. The reason they do what they do takes its premises from the founder William Booth, who was an evangelist preaching the Gospel. He said "how can a man hear the Gospel over the grumbling of his own stomach," and this birthed the social service aspect of The Salvation Army. Today they serve in more than 127 countries around the world. Some of the more critical needs in the St. Joseph community are homelessness, poverty, and food necessity. They offer the Booth Center for the homeless community, which provides 24/7 housing and meals. They also provide good quality case management through the center. Major Abe Tamayo shared the many reasons why people end up homeless such as, mental health issues and alcohol addiction. However, the typical person they see today isn't your "typical stereotype" that people see in movies. He says, "They're everyday mental healthy people and they just need a help up to get them back on their feet and to move forward. Major Abe Tamayo also shared that financial support and the community's support as a whole is needed to keep The Salvation Army functioning and to help those in need. With mat sa10, Major Abe Tamayo told viewers "they are in absolute need of volunteers" to come in and help out and share the Gospel. They have a Family Thrift store where they receive donated goods and sell them back to the community at a discounted price. The money that's raised from the Thrift Store goes back into the funding for their programs and support services. Major Abe Tamayo and his wife are the Pastors for the Sunday service at 10:45am. In the winter months they'll turn the church into a warming center.

Anne Ferrell Tata, from WTPC-Virginia Beach meets with Pastor Janeen McBath, First Lady of Calvary Revival Church in Norfolk, Virginia. Pastor Janeen, also known as Lady J, is the President & CEO of the House of Esther Organization (HOEO). She also is the First Lady of Calvary Revival Church where she coordinates the prayer and women's ministries. Pastor Janeen McBath also lends valuable support to her husband, Bishop Courtney McBath. Lady J started the non-profit House of Esther Organization when she saw that single mothers needed a place to stay when they became pregnant. She gave her own house to the ministry and started a transitional home where young mothers and children could come and live, while getting their feet back under them. She said that she saw young mothers living in cars and had no place to go once they were pregnant. The home is designed to provide support, love and care for the women and their unborn babies. Later, Lady J added the City Center, an educational component to the House of Esther outreach. Young mothers and now fathers can attend the House of Esther's city center program to earn their GED. Certified teachers teach the young parents science, English, math and social studies to prepare for the GED test. Also, City Center attendees are supported with transportation, food, and resource classes that cover topics such as finances, starting your own business, how to get into the medical field and more. There is a time for attendees to talk through what is occurring in their life. The House of Esther throws a full graduation complete with a valedictorian to celebrate their achievements with friends and family. While their parents are at the city center, the children have complementary daycare onsite, otherwise day care is expensive and is often keeping someone back from pursuing their education. An educated woman will pass this legacy onto their children, says Pastor Janeen McBath. The program also works to create partnerships for community college and other higher education opportunities. You are giving them a vision of what they can be, comments Anne Ferrell.

Mike Huckabee interviews Cabot Philips, Media Director for Campus Reform, to discuss bias and abuse on the nation's college campuses. Many of our college students do not understand the basics of what it means to be an American, to be an adult, or to have a debate about the issues and not just who is proposing them. All it takes for not being popular on campus is not being a liberal. Presenting ideas to try to get people to think outside the box gets people angry. They try to shut you down. Around the country, many colleges have begun to replace the required history and literature courses with new social justice initiatives. If we're going to fix the problem on our college campuses, it's going to have to start with educating people on the history of our country, the constitution, the first amendment, and how it applies and protects ideas. There is a systematic problem that needs to be addressed. If no one knows what is going on, then no one's doing to care enough to want to fix it. Much of the media doesn't want to cover it because it would acknowledge that it's their own side being intolerant. It's not a partisan issue. The future of our country is something everyone should be concerned with. We should work together across the aisle to defend free speech, to defend ideas, to defend our future.

Mike Huckabee interviews Everett Piper, President of Oklahoma Wesleyan University and Author of "Not a Daycare," to explain "generation snowflake." Piper shares his response to a student's complaint of discomfort after hearing a message on I Corinthians 13, a chapter in the Bible about love is patient and love is kind, which went viral. Our culture is hungry for somebody to confront this nonsense. Oklahoma Wesleyan University is a bold and unapologetic Christian university. So many of our colleges have lost the standard of truth, which used to be the objective of the academy. A degree shouldn't be about opinions. A degree should be about learning what's true. When we abandon truth as the objective, we get chaos, vengeance, and victimization, rather than virtue and veritas; Latin for truth. That's where we are as an academic enterprise today.

On this episode of Somebody's Gotta Do It, Host, Mike Rowe, takes us inside the national competition for Skills USA to find out how they are creating thousands of great careers while keeping the American Dream alive. Skills USA has filled in the gap that was created when Vo-tech vanished from high schools, by establishing a partnership between education and industry. Every year this organization trains over 300,000 students in dozens of skilled trades; welding, baking, and broadcasting, to name a few. At this competition, every competing student has already won a competition at the state level, and now they are competing for scholarships. Each competition lays out specific tasks to be completed within a certain amount of time with the opportunity to be awarded gold, silver, and bronze medallions. We're looking at a shortage of over 250,000 workers in the next ten years of retiring age. Our entire infrastructure is held together by welds, and the people who know how to make them. Right now, a good welder who is willing to go where the work is could pretty much write his or her own ticket. The baking industry is also struggling to find qualified people. While students are coming out of college mired in debt with no guarantee for a job in their field, the students who participate at Skills USA are gaining valuable training that makes them ready for the workforce as soon as they graduate.

CBN Reporter Heather Sells Reports: National ministries serving college students have faced some bleak prospects in recent years. After decades of work, just four in ten campuses have been reached and on many of those campuses, university administrators are seeking to push ministries out. Greg Jao, director of external relations for InterVarsity Christian Fellowship/USA, watched the shift come after a pivotal Supreme Court case in 2010. In Christian Legal Society v. Martinez, the court ruled that despite the First Amendment, the University of California’s Hastings College of Law could deny recognition to the Christian Legal Society organization on campus because it requires its members to adhere to a statement of beliefs. At the same time, ministries like InterVarsity and Cru, formerly Campus Crusade for Christ, have taken a hard look at the number of campuses they’ve been able to reach simply because of resources. Of the estimated 3,000 college campuses in the US, just 1,174 have an organized Gospel witness. Shannon Compere, executive director of leadership development at Cru, says one of the challenges has been the relatively slow pipeline employed to place staff. It involves years of planning, training, and fund-raising. It’s one reason that Cru and InterVarsity have begun to collaborate to reach more campuses. In fact, they’ve named their new movement #EveryCampus(<http://everycampus.us/>) in a bold attempt to cast a new vision. Tom Allen serves as InterVarsity’s regional director for southern California and has spent decades working on creative strategies to reach college students. For years, he said, InterVarsity organized ministry around campus pastors that stayed at one location. Then it moved to a team model where multiple staff served on one campus. Now, both InterVarsity and Cru are shifting to partner with other Christian groups, local churches and individual believers in communities that want to reach their campuses for Christ. Those campuses include community colleges, historically black colleges and online schools and programs. The new paradigm is still emerging in southern California but student leaders Jerry Requena and Tami Chipeco are living out what could be a model. Under the mentorship of InterVarsity staff, Requena and Chipeco have begun to approach students and lead Bible studies at Santa Ana College, an unreached community college in Orange County. Often, they’ll simply study the Word with students sitting on benches surrounded by classmates coming and going. Requena, who maintains a demanding work schedule, says when InterVarsity staff first asked him to lead, he hesitated to jump into the new ministry. Then, as he went and observed InterVarsity communities on other campuses and its commitment to Bible study, he became convinced that God was calling him. Chipeco drives about 30 minutes to Santa Ana from her campus and admits to culture shock as an Asian-American serving mainly Latino students at Santa Ana. She also admits that the #Everycampus movement is bold, but says she’s driven by a desire to see others know the Lord. Meanwhile, Jao is working on strategies to engage with campus administrators and help them see the value of faith-based groups on campuses. The hope is that more robust relationships will prevent college deans and staff from using non-discrimination policies to de-recognize Christian groups. Often, these policies are used against Christian clubs by claiming that their statements of belief discriminate against students with other beliefs. When Christian clubs lose their recognition on campus, they also lose the ability to reserve room space and recruit members at student activity fairs. Plus, there’s a social cost, says Jao. Jao says the long-term consequences of such shifts in campus thinking concern him the most. Ultimately, Jao believes that Christian students involved in derecognized groups are learning deep lessons about discipleship and the cost of following Christ. His advice to them and Christian student organizations, in general, is to develop relationships with campus administrators. For cases in which groups have already been derecognized, it often can turn the situation around. He also advocates Christian groups highlighting their service projects on behalf of the campus and community and asking administrators how they can help them. Jao says one university president, when asked if he would like prayer, started to weep.

We don't understand how dependent we are on space and there are fundamental questions that we don't have answers to. Is there life in the universe beyond planet Earth? Families with disabilities have with many different struggles including therapy and medical appointments, IE P's, and hospitalizations. These issues can drain them financially, spiritually, and emotionally. When Michelle Hamilton's son Blake was diagnosed with special needs her main goal was that Blake was included into society and had a relationship with Christ. Families have had to deal with the stresses of the disabilities and stigma that surrounds them. This has led them to feelings of abandonment and isolation. Over 600 million people are affected by disabilities around the world. This people group is one of the most unreached population. In Arizona about 12% (800,000) of the population has disabilities. Families don't feel like they belong. Joni and Friends is based on Luke 14:13 mandate. They train churches on how to reach out to people with disabilities and create accessible facilities. Their program, Wheels for the World, allows Joni and Friends to provide people with restored wheelchairs and the gospel. They partner with a restoration site at the Kingman Prison where inmates learn job skills by restoring the wheelchairs. One of Joni and Friends main outreaches is their Family Retreat held at Bison Ranch Retreat Center in Overgaard, AZ. They invite the entire family, including parents and siblings, to come out for a week and participate. This offers freedom to these families who suffer though the isolation and the stresses of their day to day lives. Joni and Friend's office is located in The Ability 360 Building. This building opened in 2007 and houses 12 disability related agencies. Joni and Friends was invited in as a faith based component.

Host Tori Stamoulis introduces the topic of food insecurity and poverty in Chester, Pennsylvania. Hunger affects nearly 900,000 people in the Delaware valley, especially children and the elderly. CityTeam believes there is a way to help people respectfully, preserving their dignity. Their purpose is to serve the way Jesus did; filled with compassion, serving humbly and giving opportunity to share hope with people in the mist of painful circumstances. What began as a once weekly community meal has grown into a full kitchen serving three meals a day, 365 days a year. Nancy Craskey, Development Officer, at City Team Chester, explains that breakfast and lunch is served to the men on staff and dinner is served to anyone in the public who needs a meal. On Saturday nights, Hope Café provides a restaurant experience with entrée options like five-star meals. Food is served restaurant style on real china with settings that include tablecloths, center pieces, and menus. Groups such as churches, corporations, or families, come and serve as waiters, waitresses, bus boys, hosts, hostesses, and dishwashers. The goal is to serve guests with dignity, respect, and love. Following dinner, all are welcome to enjoy music and a time of teaching. All volunteers are asked to complete an application, a criminal background check, as well as child abuse clearance. There are a variety of programs such as the Food Program, Mother Baby, and the Adult Clothing Program. Volunteers are encouraged to serve in a program that interests them. City Team Chester serves the homeless community, the working poor, seniors, veterans, families, people with a handicap or illness, or people who are temporarily unemployed, or anyone in a crisis or struggling. Anyone is welcome without explanation and everyone is valued. Through partnerships with local markets, City Team's food pantry has evolved into a grocery store experience with fresh produce. They also distribute food to people without access to grocery stores. Their Second Chance Program provides shelter as well as recovery therapy. Another outreach serves approximately 1,000 families during Christmas, Thanksgiving, and Easter, by delivering food boxes with everything needed to prepare a meal at home, and is paired with a turkey at Christmas and a ham at Easter.

Today on Joy in Our Town, Host, Taylor Murray, introduces the topic of poverty in New York City and a video about The Legacy Center. Jordan Durso, Executive Director of The Legacy Center, shares his passion behind founding this organization. He discusses the homeless and poverty in New York City and explains that it is often the result of bad decisions, mental illness, drug and alcohol abuse. The Legacy Center is a place of hope for those who have a seemingly hopeless situation. Following the example of Jesus, their goal is to provide tangible resources to help individuals make better decisions to get out of their current situation permanently. Lee, the Marketplace Coordinator, discusses her role in the organization and how The Marketplace prepares for their guests to receive food on Fridays. Each guest is valued and treated with Christ-like compassion and excellence. Other programs at The Legacy Center include Legacy Lunch Dates, Feed Somebody Mondays, tutoring for kids, ELO classes, GED classes, and resume training. They are currently working on job readiness programs and financial training.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzi, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear gripping true stories from mothers who have lost a child without notice to a senseless murder. There's little that is more tragic than the death of a child. The sad fact is that lives are lost every day. Every day, 33 Americans are murdered with guns, and seven of those are children. When the horror of losing a child becomes a reality, the pain can be overwhelming. Not one person grieves the same. Everyone mother grieves differently. These mothers have overcome tragedy and have become overcomers in Christ. Jesus Christ is the answer.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzi, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear stories of mothers who have had to live with the harsh reality that their child is sentenced to many years in prison. This topic has affected families from different backgrounds and social status. Every parent has hopes and dreams for their children. When you see them going in the wrong direction and headed for tragedy, most parents can feel helpless. One wrong decision can change a life forever. As a parent, you never dream or even image a son or daughter would be sentenced like a caged animal alone in a 5x8 foot cell or having to deal with the pain that your child has little or no hope of being free again. When your child is locked up in a cold prison cell, the pain can be devastating to a mother. But even in the midst of this horrific situation, God has given peace to many of these mothers. A peace that surpasses all understanding. God has been an anchor to these mothers during their time of hardship and turned their pain into hope.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzi, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear from a woman who was rescued from a life of gangs, violence and crime. The life of a gang member can be very violent and dangerous at times. From drugs and alcohol to fights and shootouts, gang members constantly risk their lives to defend their neighborhood. We often think of gang members as dangerous men with violent tempers, but they aren't the only ones defending their streets. Over the years, many women have also joined gangs. Many of them join in hopes of finding a sense of belonging, others for protection, and still others just want to be respected. They fight for their gang no matter the cost. These women are very violent and very dangerous. Through a Bible study women's lives have been changed. God has forgiven them, and he who is forgiven much, loveth much.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, takes us into the perilous world of some biker clubs. Over the years, biker gangs have taken on a different persona. They've gone from hanging out on the front porch and handling drugs to now traveling the nation for Multi-Million Dollar drug deals. These bikers can be seen riding their Harley Davidson bikes dressed in leather jackets, but there is more to their lifestyle than meets the eye. The reality is it's a nightmare. They've seen violence, lost friends and family members, and some have even lost their own lives. The life of a biker gang member is very dangerous and unpredictable. To those in law enforcement, these motorcycle clubs are considered organized crime organizations. Motorcycle clubs don't have to be violent and treacherous in their way of life. In fact, a motorcycle club can be a way of sharing the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Riders Out of Darkness Motorcycle Club is full of people who once lived the biker lifestyle but have now been transformed by the power of Jesus Christ. They use their testimonies to impact the lives of those still living that dangerous lifestyle.

Our host Cheri Duckworth introduces the segment. She tosses to Pastor Adam Z Cousin who introduces the first Roll-in for the San Antonio Christian Dental Clinic segment. Roll-in 1 is an overview of how San Antonio Christian Dental Clinic is serving their community. Next, Pastor Adam Z introduces Gloria Canseco, the Executive Director of San Antonio Christian Dental Clinic. She explains, dental care is critical because of the extent of the pain and the lack of funding there is for people without resources. Not only are people who are struggling or low-income underserved, but so are the typical working class or middle class families. If unaddressed, it can cause major physical problems. Failure to take care of dental problems can cause other major health problems. It can spread up to the brain or down to the rest of the body and make a person very ill. Especially if the person has other medical complications like diabetes or hypertension. At San Antonio Christian Dental Clinic they are addressing these issues by providing free dental procedures such as cleanings, fillings and even full dental replacements. They serve anybody in Bexar County who's an adult and who is low income. There are many success stories of people who have gone through the training and before they even graduated they were already positioned in well-paying jobs. In the next Roll-in Valerie tells her story. She explains how she went from being homeless and hopeless to hearing about the Dental Assistant Training program offered by San Antonio Christian Dental Clinic. She went through the program and immediately gained employment at the clinic. Dental care isn't on the forefront of most people's mind. A lot of the patients visits when it hurts. San Antonio Christian Dental Clinic is a Christian healing ministry serving two very important needs in the community, health and economic sustainment. All are welcome. At the heart of their ministry is "Love Thy Neighbor". They will offer to pray with the patients if that's what the patients need. The final Roll-in is of patients testimonials. They talk about how comforting it was to step into the doors of the clinic. They give details on some of the services they received. Valerie, an employee, explains that the volunteers are what keeps the clinic running. They provide free basic dental care for all of Bexar County, not just the homeless. The goal is for their model to become replicable. They are willing to share how they got started and would love to see this type of ministry spread throughout the state and the country. They are willing to give insight to anyone looking to get started. Pastor Z thanks our guest for allowing us to visit. Cheri closes the show.

Pam Phillips, Senior Vice President of Mission for Bon Secours Hampton Roads Health Systems tells TBN viewers about the faith based not-for-profit. Mrs. Phillips tells us about the Bon Secours Care-A-Van, a free medical service that provides general medical care to uninsured adults and children in Hampton Roads communities. Anything that can be done by a primary care physician in an office can be done on the mobile Care-A-Van Health Clinic, Pam Phillips tells viewers. Bon Secours Hampton Roads' goal is to provide compassionate care to the whole person, while focusing on bringing God's compassion and spiritual wellbeing to those that are in need. 'What makes us difference is that we are faith based and this is a ministry of the church,' says Phillips. She continues with telling us how faith is infused in every aspect of the health offices, hospitals and other facilities. Bon Secours originated in Paris, France and came to Baltimore, Maryland in 1881. They made their way to Hampton Roads area of Virginia. The Care-A-Van serves underserved populations all over Hampton Roads and partners with area churches for facilities, parking lot space and to be a community partner. Clients can receive care for sports or work physicals, immunizations, OBGYN visits, sick visits, sprains and more on the Care-A-Van. Mrs. Phillips says that ministering to mind, body and spirit is very important as you can't take care of your physical self, if your spiritual needs are broken. Bon Secours believes that the caring and serving they do, is God's work which is a great privilege.

Mike Huckabee interviews Dr. Richard Furman, Vascular Surgeon, Author, and Co-Founder of World Medical Mission, the medical arm of Samaritan's Purse, to discuss defeating dementia. There are three stages of Alzheimer's Disease. During stage one a protein develops in the brain twenty years before symptoms appear. Many Americans age 55 to 60 have this protein and don't even know it. Stage two is when symptoms occur. 10 to 20 percent of Americans age 65 have symptoms of Alzheimer's. That rises to 50 percent when you're 85. During stage three one is dependent on others, confined to a wheelchair or bedridden. Modifiable risk factors are exercise, food, and weight.

CBN Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Living in the country may have some advantages, but not if you need a doctor. Shortages in rural areas mean some 90 million Americans can't count on adequate medical care. That's because physicians simply choose to live and work closer to cities. In order to fight that trend, one California county is undertaking a unique plan to attract more doctors. If successful, it could serve as a model for other communities. Compared to patients in big cities, a diagnosis of cancer, heart disease, diabetes and other illnesses can be much worse for people living in rural communities, largely because of doctor shortages there. New doctors typically settle down near the medical school where they completed their residency, the years after getting their M.D. when they train in their chose field of medicine. Those medical schools are usually located in big cities. That's not the case in Riverside County, California, thanks to a community-based medical school. The University of California Riverside Medical School answered prayers when it opened five years ago because up until that time, the shortage of doctors forced people to either go without medical care or drive all the way to Los Angeles for it. That's why the medical school's primary purpose is to plant doctors in underserved Riverside County. Dr. Lyons believes its new crop of 110 resident physicians will go a long way toward meeting that goal. In addition to location, money is a strong factor in deciding where to put down roots. Many new doctors feel the need to land a high-paying job to pay off their crushing student loan debt, which often tops $2 million. They find higher salaries in big cities. UCR Medical School eliminates that burden by offering free tuition to medical students who stay in the area after completing their training, like student Madeline Sevetre. After growing up in Riverside County, Madeline knows all too well the pain of not having access to medical care. Unlike many medical schools, UCR Medical School doesn't bother with a big, expensive teaching hospital. Resident physicians instead train at already existing health care facilities that are smaller and scattered across the country. Obstetrics resident Dr. Trina Mansour already sees her presence in Riverside County making a difference. Research shows most doctors would like to set up shop near their extended family, if possible. UCR Medical School's admission process takes advantage of that desire. Dr. Douglas Grover, a Riverside County native, graduated from UCR Medical School last year and is currently serving as a resident physician there. As a resident in psychiatry, he feels good about providing mental health services to the area. Another big difference at UCR Medical School compared to others is students start seeing patients in their first year, rather than waiting until their third year. The UCR Medical School students even opened a free clinic for people who otherwise might not have ever seen a doctor. So while medical care disappears in many rural areas, Riverside County, California, may have discovered the antidote: open a medical school, admit locals with a heart for the underserved and pay for the education. . . provided they don't take their talents elsewhere.

CBN Reporter Amber Strong Reports: From parents overdosing in parking lots, to the deaths of the nation's biggest pop stars like Prince and Tom Petty, the fallout from the country's opioid epidemic hits all levels of society. According to the Department of Health and Human Services, overdose deaths, including prescription drugs and heroin, have increased by more than five times since 1999. A killer addiction affecting more than 42,000 people in 2016 alone, which is approximately 116 deaths a day. All reasons President Trump has vowed to break the stranglehold of opioids. Just steps away from the White House stood a memorial of 20,000 faces and lives cut short by opioids. Adams, the new surgeon general, leads a major part of the administration's fight, specifically reducing supply, protecting the border and saving lives. Given his vision of, 'Better Health Through Better Partnerships,' the anesthesiologist is looking beyond the beltway for help. That's because he sees the church playing a major part in the fight. So, the Department of Health and Human Services put out toolkits for churches, encouraging them to open their doors to programs like Narcotics Anonymous and Celebrate Recovery while also pushing the power of prayer. <https://www.hhs.gov/about/agencies/iea/partnerships/opioid-toolkit/index...> Adams, a Maryland native who studied medicine in Indiana, California, and Zimbabwe, believes those experiences help him see the difference between individual communities. Adams made headlines when he issued the first surgeon general advisory in 13 years, a controversial plan to put the overdose-reversing drug Naloxone in the hands of everyday citizens. Critics claim it promotes addiction. Adams says access to Naloxone enables life, not addiction. It's not the first time he's made a tough call. In 2015, an opioid-induced HIV epidemic ripped through Scott County, Indiana. Addicts there were using dirty needles. The end result, 181 confirmed cases due to what many called a slow response from the state. Despite pushback, Adams, as health commissioner at the time, called for a clean needle exchange to curtail the outbreak. Each act showing the belief of this husband and father of three that life has value. The team here at the Surgeon General's office know the battle is more than just a job and that for Dr. Adams, it's personal. Adams believes sharing his own testimony can help others. As the son of two teachers, Adams says his parents always taught him to serve others, now he gets that chance, as the top doctor to a nation in need of a cure.

CBN Medical Reporter Lorie Johnson Reports: Hippocrates, the father of medicine, once said, "All disease begins in the gut." Now, 2000 years later, that belief still rings true. Some of our latest medical breakthroughs focus on what's happening in our intestinal system. Bacteria, also known as bugs or germs, we assume they're all bad, right? Not so fast. Scientists recently discovered much, if not most, of the bacteria in our body is good for us. The key to good health depends on having enough of the right kind. We all have trillions of bacteria living in our intestines—hundreds of different species, each with different functions. Scientists call it our "gut flora." Neurologist Dr. David Perlmutter (<http://www.drperlmutter.com/>), author of "Brain Maker," is one of many physicians warning again disrupting this fragile ecosystem. Dr. Vincent Pedre (<http://www.pedremd.com/>), author of "Happy Gut," agrees. Unfortunately, when it comes to good gut bacteria, many of us are sorely lacking. After all, antibiotics kill bacteria – bad and good alike. Perlmutter says most people have no idea how severely antibiotics damage our gut flora. In addition to antibiotics, processed food can also disrupt the gut biome. Perlmutter says processed foods contain heavy doses of the wrong kinds of fat, like heated oils such as soybean, corn and vegetable oils. He also advises against consuming hydrogenated oils, also known as trans fats, which are common in processed foods. However, he points out not all fat is bad. Even babies delivered by Caesarian section can miss out on getting enough good bacteria. So while our lifestyle choices really do a number on the gut bacteria that's so critical to our health, the good news is we can improve it with probiotics and prebiotics. Probiotics are the good bacteria we need and often lack. You can find these living, microscopic organisms in supplements as well as in cultured and fermented foods like kimchi, sauerkraut, yogurt, kefir and kombucha. Prebiotics are the food for the probiotics – they keep probiotics living and growing as they should. Just like good soil, they create a nurturing environment in your gut so your bacteria can thrive. You can get prebiotics in supplement form as well as in foods, like asparagus, onions, leeks, garlic and dandelion greens. Perlmutter says many people are only aware of the benefits of probiotics, but he stresses prebiotics are equally important. Not only can it help your mood – Perlmutter says even serious brain disorders, like attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, autism, even Alzheimer's disease can improve by increasing good bacteria. That's because they help make neurotransmitters and vitamins while at the same time aid in reducing harmful inflammation. And not just the brain. Scientists are now identifying specific strains of good bacteria that treat all kinds of problems, from skin rashes to the flu. That means a targeted probiotic could take the place of a prescribed drug. Pedre says that opens the door to a wide range of natural treatments. So if you want to boost your health, doctors say improve your gut flora. That means avoiding processed foods, even antibacterial cleansers and antibiotics when advisable. Then add good bacteria with probiotics and boost them with prebiotics, also available as supplements or in certain foods.

Cheri Duckworth opens the show. Introduces the first segment. Tosses to Dolly Velasquez. Dolly Velasquez talks to Tom Jones, President/CEO of City Rescue Mission about poverty in America and specifically Oklahoma City. Tom Jones says, "43 million live below the poverty line right now in America." Instead of putting a band aid on the issue, City Rescue Mission works with people in the community to identify what it is going to take to help them become self-sufficient. City Rescue Mission offers help through a lot of different programs. Some people that visit the mission are recently unemployed. They offer a safe place to stay while helping them put their resumes together. This helps them save money until they can move out and feel strong again. Tom Jones says, "About 35% of our population have mental illness diagnosis. They're allowed to stay with us as long as it takes us to find them alternative places to go that are safe." Every person who walks through the door is assigned a case manager who walks the journey to end their homelessness with them. They have a school program and a state licensed daycare center. 97% of people that leave the mission find homes. Our host and guest visits the dining hall where people have just finished eating their meal. At City Rescue Mission, they believe that connecting with the people they serve is the most important component to what they do. They feed about 1100 meals a day. It's more than just food in their bellies, it gives them the opportunity to see that someone loves and cares for them. It then reflects back to God. They have services for addiction recovery, parenting and life skills, as well.

Cheri Duckworth opens the show. Introduces the second segment. Tosses to Pastor Z. Pastor Z and Navarra Williams, President/CEO of SAM Ministries discuss the issue of homelessness in San Antonio. Every year across the country, there is a count that's done by the major cities called "The Point in Time Count". This pass year, they counted 2743 homeless people. This number includes people who are already in shelters, transitional facilities, and/or found on the streets. SAM Ministries has been providing there services for over 35 years. To combat homelessness, they have programs to help keep families, seniors and veterans in their homes. The filming of this segment takes place in SAM Ministries "Transitional Living & Learning Center". Families get to stay in the facility for up to two years. They focus on work skills and education of the parents and children. Navarra Williams says homeless children tend to fall behind in school. They typically read below grade level. They also test lower in math and science. Navarra discusses how Jessica blossomed over her eighteen months stay with SAM Ministries. She went from being closed and shy to being on a panel for overcoming homelessness hosted by SAM Ministries. She studies at Texas A & M. Navarra Williams explains some of the misconceptions of homelessness. It affects everyone. His biggest hope is that the people they serve end up with sustainable housing. They don't want someone who goes through one of their programs to becoming homeless again. They have an effective rate of about 94% across all of their programs. Roxana discusses her past of an abusive marriage. Upon divorcing, she found herself struggling and unable to pay rent. She was referred to SAM Ministries and they came to her rescue at perfect timing, just as she was being evicted. Through Roxana's story and living situation, SAM Ministries learned that there may be others like her. Navarra says about 65% of homeless people have some kind of trauma. For this reason, they've changed how they help them. They now use a model called "Trauma Informed Care". Over 700 families have successfully transitioned out of the "Transitional Living & Learning" facility since its inception.

Host, Cheri Duckworth opens the show by introducing the first segment about feeding the homeless, then she tosses to Pastor Adam Z. Pastor Adam Z introduces Roll-in 1 for CAM Ministry. 39 years ago 9 downtown churches took a risk and a leap of faith to create CAM Ministry. CAM is almost completely volunteer run. They will help anyone who meets the criteria for needing assistance. Armando tells his story about being incarcerated for 2 years and losing everything, but finding a fresh start through CAM Ministry. He is now the owner of a plumbing company. Next, Pastor Z introduces Dawn Fosdick, Executive Director of CAM Ministry. Dawn tells us about the day to day operation of CAM Ministry. No one has to have an appointment or prove that they're worthy. CAM addresses the needs of short time and long term crisis'. People are coming in getting groceries, toiletry needs, clothing, and assistance with administrative needs of being a citizen such as I.D.'s, food stamps, social security cards, etc. Dawn says they see children who have been in the foster care system who have aged out and they don't know what to do. They see individuals who have escaped abusive situations, so they've had to leave those things behind. Cheri re-opens the show, then pitches to Roll-in 2. In this Roll-in, clients of CAM Ministry tell their stories. Dawn talks about how Christ's love shines through. CAM Ministry has over 80 churches that formally supports them. People bring donated clothing, they donate their time, and they also repair things. CAM has other nonprofits that partners with them. CAM helps with utility assistance, so their clients can focus on getting a job. In the final Roll-in Roy and Annie tell their stories. Pastor Z makes a point about how ministering to other people becomes ministering to ourselves. Dawn agrees, then tells a story about helping a sweet older lady with swollen feet down the stairs, but the lady responded to her questions despite her condition by saying "I'm just so blessed!"

Cheri Duckworth opens the show. She introduces the segment on GRACE, then pitches to roll-in 1. Roll-in 1 is a video of Michelle Cantrell's story. Michelle talks about being accepted into the GRACE program, then moving into a fully furnished apartment provided by GRACE. A huge weight was lifted off of her shoulders. She didn't have to stress about paying bills anymore. Now, she's self-sufficient with no government help. She has a great job and she's happier. Next, our host introduces Shonda Schaefer, Executive Director of GRACE. She explains how GRACE began. It was brought to them in the form of Matthew 25. 30 years ago they felt that it was their duty to serve their clients and families as if it was Jesus Christ showing up on their doorsteps. It was important that all of their basic needs were met in a dignified way. That was so important because these families are just like you and I. They work hard in our community and really want the same thing for their family as we want for ours. There's no separation there. It just happens that they've fallen on hard times. It's important to GRACE that they don't lose hope. Shonda is really proud of the way they work individually and thinks that's what sets GRACE apart from other social services. She says, there's not a cookie cutter program in our mist. Everything that we do is specifically tailored for the family. If there's a family that needs food, they're going to get food. It's not just a one stop shop. Not everyone that walks in gets the same program as the next person that walks in. Everything's very individualized with self-sufficiency in mind. She wants potential families facing emergency situations to know that they can come to a safe place. Whether you are inside of the community or outside of the community, what GRACE can provide, they absolutely will. They also do resource and referrals. If they get calls from people who are outside of their area or have a need that they can't meet directly, they have an entire network of other services to help them. It's a safe place and they want people to feel that way when they come to GRACE.

Seattle is #3 in the nation in terms of its homeless population. New York City is #1 and Los Angeles is #2. There are an estimated 11,000 homeless people in Seattle and King County. That number is troubling since Seattle is ranked just 15th nationwide in overall population. At the same time, Seattle's homeless population is increasing. Jeff has been working with the homeless in Seattle for eight years and says "this is the worst I have ever seen it." The leading causes of homelessness are addictions, particularly substance abuse; mental health; and criminal justice, with ex-convicts often unable to find jobs, families often unwilling to take them in, and the cost of housing among the highest in the nation. More young people are on the streets than ever before, more women, and more women with children. In some of the homeless encampments in Seattle, about 40% are women and women with children. This presents a new problem compared with the male dominated homelessness of the past since women are more vulnerable to abuse. A recent Baylor University study showed that faith-based programs were more effective in solving the issues of homelessness than secular programs. Faith-based programs recognize that homelessness is more of a spiritual problem, while secular programs focus on material needs. Jeff says, "The thing that works more than anything else is not throwing a lot of resources at this. It's working alongside the homeless, hearing their story, and helping them get their life back to where it should be." He adds that "a broken soul may be the core reason why somebody is where they are in life. Until we address the root causes, we're probably not going to see an end to homelessness." Seattle's Union Gospel Mission has over 50 sites throughout King County. The Mission provides all types of services to help the homeless get their lives back on track. These services include legal clinics, medical and dental clinics, addiction recovery programs, mental health counseling, transitional housing, job training, and educational programs.

Host Jasmine Douglas introduces the organization, United We All Can. Pastor Frank Diaz is the Director of United We All Can and United We All Can Community Services. He shares his story of alcohol and drug addiction and how God turned his life around and called him to the heart of Miami Beach where United We All Can (UWAC) began as a street ministry providing food for the homeless and sharing the Gospel because no one takes care of the homeless. Anibal Rodriguez, a volunteer, shares his experience working with UWAC. The homeless are encouraged to come into the UWAC programs where they are required to attend every meeting, attend every service, study the word of God, and participate in church. UWAC receives food that is distributed to the restoration centers, food banks, and portable pantry kitchens that do the same work as UWAC, feeding almost 5,500 people every month. Randall Wilson, now a crew member, shares his story of homelessness and how UWAC helped him. Tent City is an industrial area, away from the parks, apartment buildings, and schools, where a lot of sexual predators congregate. When they come out of prison for committing a sexual crime, they're not just homeless, they're sexual predators, and they feel like they're the worst of the worst and no one cares about them. UWAC goes there often to minister the word of God and to show them a lot of love. They've seen a lot of changes and miracles occurring there. Pastor Diaz explains that Jesus gave us a command; we all need to take care of the poor. A lot of people don't want to be uncomfortable or get dirty. UWAC trains warriors for Christ. Nothing compares to winning a soul for Jesus Christ. There is no price you can put on that.

Kingdom Covenant Connection was founded by Carrie Coats. The ministry has a global vision to bring the body of Christ together as one. Their mission is to promote "unity" and "oneness" by encouraging churches, faith-based organizations, and community nonprofits to work as collaborative teams to network and help bring solutions to problems that affect their communities. Today, the mission expands across five states. They have a praise parade. They also have a clean machine, which is a tractor trailer that has showers, washers, and dryers for the homeless to utilize. Volunteer barbers also come out to support the community through Kingdom Covenant Connection. The mission provides clothes, shoes, and other necessities, as well. They provide food such as snacks and a full course meal on Saturdays and Sundays. Approximately 1,000 people are replenished over the course of a weekend.

Pastor D. Robinson introduces Pastor Chuck Aragon of God's Warehouse in Albuquerque, New Mexico to discuss the increase in homelessness. There are many categories of homeless such as the mentally ill, those who have become addicted to drugs and alcohol, and those who have lost a job or lost their home, and they have no place to lay their head at night. Another type of homeless is a person who has no desire to get off the streets because that is their lifestyle. However, there are homeless that are seeking help and want to get off the streets. While the homeless find many places to stay, they are not the most comfortable places. Many homeless stay in parks, abandoned buildings, tent cities, and shelters. Today, with the financial burden on people who own homes and apartments that are rented, they are under stress when the rent is missed, so tenants must move on, which causes a lot of people to be on the street. The homeless that Pastor Aragon sees on the street range in age from 70-year-old grandmas to 15-year-old children. Some of the greatest challenges that the homeless face is not knowing what's going to happen tomorrow; laying in a place at night and hoping that you are safe tonight and will make it through the day; wondering where you are going to find your next meal, or clothes, or a place to take a shower, or even a place to use the facilities. Homelessness is a tough life. The numbers have been increasing every year and the unemployment rate in Albuquerque is at a standstill. Considered a safe haven for the homeless of Albuquerque, where they encounter the love of Jesus Christ, God's Warehouse provides a soup kitchen with homemade meals, clean clothes that have been donated, and the use of phones to reconcile with family members. They also work with other ministries, and Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous to help people function sober in life. Ninety-percent of the volunteers that cook, feed, clothe, pray, hold hands, and hug people, have come off the street themselves; recognizing that if somebody had not helped them they would not be where they are today, so they give back. The heart of God's Warehouse is that love never fails. They also provide the community with food boxes, toy drives, and feed thousands while providing music and entertainment.

Host Tori Stamoulis introduces the topic of homelessness and hunger. Pastor Diane Dunne, Founder of Hope for the Future Ministries, shares how she befriended a homeless woman, and after seeing the conditions she lived in, the Lord showed her that it was wrong if she did nothing, so she decided to do something about it. Starting from just meeting a need, she founded Hope for the Future Ministries. Imagine not being able to bathe, go to the bathroom, sleep peacefully, or have a decent meal. Pastor Diane believes if you can give provide the homeless with good nutrition, love, support, and help them get themselves back together, that's what Jesus would do. That is the heart of God. One of the hardships people face is the escalating cost of food. Even after working two and three jobs, often people simply cannot make ends meet. Providing a nice hot meal makes a difference. A lot of our children graduate from school totally illiterate. What kind of jobs are they going to get? We need to be able to facilitate people to give them job skills and to teach them how to get the interview and how to get the job. Many homeless come out of foster care where no one cared about them. What do you think a person will become if they don't believe in themselves? Hope for the Future Ministries offers Jesus because Jesus teaches them who they are and that they're worth everything to Him. Individuals are mentored and learn skills as they work in the ministry. Those served, as well as volunteers, share the positive impact Hope for the Future Ministries has made in their lives. Many volunteer opportunities are available all week long. On Thursdays the handicapped volunteer. On Friday nights, the Girls Scouts, youth groups, and senior citizens volunteer. Pastor Diane tells people, if you can make a sandwich God can use you. Help is needed to cook, do pickups, load vans, and bag groceries. Drivers are also needed.

Mike Huckabee talks about immigration and shares a few facts. Of the 12,000 children that have shown up at our border and been placed in protective care, 10,000 of them were separated from their parents, not at the border by way of border patrol, but parents sent them on their own to our border by way of traffickers, paid escorts, and others, to make the journey of hundreds or even thousands of miles unaccompanied by their parents. The reason they were placed in protective care was to keep them out of the hands of human predators and child traffickers who would use them as pawns in the sex slave trade. Since this time last year, there has been a 325% increase in unaccompanied alien children and a 435% increase in family units entering the country illegally. Over the last ten years, there has been a 1,700% increase in asylum claims resulting in an asylum backlog of 600,000 cases because those wishing to get into American have been coached as to what to say to come under the guise of asylum. Most critics offer no solutions. He suggests the following: 1. Media Accuracy. 2. Send illegals back to parents. 3. Churches and faith groups care for displaced children. 4. Clearly defined and enforced border. 5. Congress change the laws. 6. Stop foreign aid to countries sending immigrants.

Today on Joy in Our Town, Pastor D. Robinson introduces the organization Restore NYC. Chris Muller, Manager of Collaborative Initiatives at Restore NYC, discusses human trafficking, and sex trafficking in New York City. Sex trafficking is happening as exploitation at licensed massage businesses, as a brothel, on street corners, in hotel suites or in store front parlors. Key characteristics of sex trafficking is someone being exploited in slave-like conditions that are usually focused on some form of commercial sex services. Other indicators are the exploitation of a person's documentation, physical or mental abuse, or working without being paid. Statistics show that globally there are 40 million people actively in slavery-like conditions today with more than 25 million in sex trafficking or labor trafficking, and 15 million who are in some form of forced marriage. Here in the U.S., a recent study showed that approximately 18,000 foreign national adults are trafficked into the United States each year. In response to the magnitude of this crime, law enforcement, service providers, defense attorneys, and immigration attorneys are working together to solve the problem of sex trafficking. There are improved practices to go after traffickers as well as those buying and looking to purchase sex services, while coordinating the best care for those who are survivors of this crime. Two of the biggest challenges women face after being trafficked is incredible trauma and getting back to work. Amanda Eckhardt, Ph.D., Director of Programs at Restore NYC, shares that Restore NYC seeks to end sex trafficking in New York and to restore the well-being and independence of foreign national survivors of trafficking. They provide crisis intervention, a case management and counseling program, a safe home, and an economic empowering program. God is at center of all that they do. Volunteer opportunities are also available.

Addiction is said to be a family disease. One of the casualties of a battle with addiction is the trail of broken families it leaves in it's wake; not to mention the dysfunctional adult children of addicts that are having to deal with issues related to their parent(s) addiction as they were growing up. The American Society of Addiction Medicine reports that 21.5 million families are affected by addiction. After a pattern where trust has been betrayed and likely several times, rebuilding the family can be a lengthy process, but with the right kind of help repairing relationships and families after addiction is possible. Pastor Mike Gomez, Director of U-Turn for Christ New Mexico and his wife, Evangeline, Director of U-Turn for Christ New Mexico Women's Ranch, explain how their ministry helps heal and rebuild families that were once trapped by addiction, be freed from it's deadly grip through a relationship with Christ.

Host Jasmine Douglas introduces the organization, JC Recovery, which began in 2013 after JC (John Cascone) left his grandson, Stephen Boyarsky, financial support to help people. Stephen, once lost to drugs and alcohol, was encouraged by his grandfather to make a difference. Stephen Baoyarsky is the Founder and Spiritual Director of JC Recovery. The goal of this ministry is to help people get off drugs and alcohol and to form a relationship with Jesus Christ. They take anybody who needs help and introduces them to the twelve steps and to the Lord. The Recovery Bible Study is a combination of meeting and songs, worship, preaching, and Bible. General Manager, Jerry Pagan, shares that it's not about feeding them religion, it's for them to stop drinking and drugging. The schedule is designed to give them something to do every night, substituting the old behavior with something that is going to change their way of thinking. Drug addiction and the opioid crisis is real, but so is God. Problems are big, but God is bigger. There is hope. Spencer Grossnickle and Darrius Price share their experience at JC Recovery.

Today on Joy in Our Town, Host Velasquez interviews Allyson Vinzant Lang, Co-Founder of COO of Hope Is Alive Ministries, to discuss the epidemic of addiction. Every day two people are buried due to drug and alcohol overdoses in the State of Oklahoma, which leads the country in prescription pill abuse. The vision for Hope Is Alive Ministries was birthed through Allyson's husband, Lance Lang, who once was a recovering addict. They found there was something missing in the recovery community. People that were just newly sober were often sent back to where they came from. Hope Is Alive Ministries was created as a faith-based resource to offer a safe place for recovering addicts to come live out their calling and use their testimony for a greater purpose in life. Hope Is Alive is the third step in a recovering addicts healing process. The first step is detox. The second step is rehab for 30, 60, or 90 days. Hope Is Alive is the third step where the recovering addict will come and stay with them for eighteen months to allow a holistic treatment of rebuilding every area of their lives; financially, physically, spiritually, emotionally. They offer monthly "Finding Hope Classes" where speakers and licensed counselors teach and coach parents and family members about how not to enable, but to become a part of the solution for their loved one struggling with addiction. Addiction is a family disease and it affects a lot of people in the path that they lead. Hope Is Alive Ministries invites churches to be a part of their church-partnership program. The ministry has grown to ten houses, three of which are for women. Prayer support and household goods are also needed.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shows us a home affected by alcoholism and how it impacted a family. Alcoholism has crept into many homes over the years. The pattern of the social drinker turning into an alcoholic has affected many lives to the point that entire families have experienced the pain that comes along with this vicious cycle. Children are among the most damaged by alcoholism. Statistics show that an estimated 6.6 million children live in a household with at least one alcoholic parent. Many of these children develop emotional issues such as guilt, anxiety, anger, and depression. Some often have difficulty building relationships with others, make decisions which lead to violence and crime, and for many, they end up following in the footsteps of their parents. It's a very sad cycle that many families cannot break for generations. However, this family was transformed by the power of Jesus Christ. He's able to change you and your entire family, as well.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, let's us hear real life stories of people who overcame one the most prominent issues that the world is facing today, heroin and methamphetamine abuse. The use of heroin and meth has taken control of so many lives. It has been reported that an estimated 4.2 million people over the age of 12 have used heroin while 23% of these people become dependent on it. Sadly, more than 50% of all heroin related deaths are people between the ages of 15 and 35. When it comes to meth, an alarming 13 million people over the age of 12 have used meth in the United States alone. Many of these people never live a normal life again, battling with liver, kidney, and lung damage, depression, permanent brain and heart damage, and sometimes even death. Today's society considers it a hopeless case, but that's not necessarily true. In Victory Outreach we believe that no person is too far gone that God can't reach and change their lives.

Host, Cheri Duckworth introduces the segment for The WorkFaith Connection. She tosses to Coppelia Acevedo. Coppelia pitches to Roll-in 1: More than a job a new life. It's an introduction of The WorkFaith Connection & client testimonials. One client says "Most of us that work here from The WorkFaith Connection have checkered pasts. We know what it's like to be at the bottom." An employer exclaims, "When you hire WorkFaith guys it's "What's can I do for you?" Next, Coppelia introduces Sandy Schultz, the President and CEO of The WorkFaith Connection. The WorkFaith Connection provides an eight day boot camp so that people can get the skills they need to get a job. In addition, they restore hope by reminding people how deeply they are loved by God and helping them to see the person God created them to be. About 50% of people The WorkFaith Connection helps are coming out of prison or have struggled with addiction. The other half may be stay-at-home moms who are returning to work or older people who are back on the job search after a long time and are feeling discouraged. The minimum age for the program is 18 years old, but there is no maximum age. They have a variety of people in the classroom who are all there for the same purpose. There's a bonding that happens in the classroom where the Holy Spirit brings together a very diverse group of people from all economic and background levels into a common room. They call it "The Redemption Room". Coppelia says, "When you bring God into the mix with The WorkFaith Connection the Faith part is definitely life changing." People do not have to be followers of Christ to come to The WorkFaith Connection. The staff is trained to love people with the spirit of Christ. They read from scripture every morning, but they let people be drawn to the holiness of God in them. Cheri re-opens the show, then introduces Roll-in 2. Roll-in 2 is about being in the classroom at The WorkFaith Connection. After the Roll-in, Sandy tells us about the success story from the video that is near and dear to her heart. It doesn't cost anything to go to The WorkFaith Connection. Coppelia -"People can go through this incredible program and land jobs for free." Coppelia thanks Sandy for sacrificing so people can have a better life in the future. Cheri closes the show.

According to CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention), in 2015, a total of 229,715 babies were born to women aged 15-19 years, for a birth rate of 22.3 per 1,000 women in this age group. This is another record low for U.S. teens and a drop of 8% from 2014. Although we don't know the true reasons for the decrease, evidence suggests these are due to more teens abstaining from sexual activity. Still, the U.S. teen pregnancy rate is substantially higher than in other western industrialized nations. Teen pregnancy and childbearing bring significant social and economic costs with either immediate or long-term impacts on teen parents or their children. The children of teenage mothers are more likely to have lower school achievement and to drop out of high school, have more health problems, be incarcerated at some time during adolescence, give birth as a teenager, and face unemployment as a young adult. An unplanned pregnancy was the last thing that was expected. The possibility creates an atmosphere of panic and intense emotions. Life feels as if it has been turned upside down. Mary LeQuieu, Executive Director of the Care Net Pregnancy Centers of Albuquerque states that's why they exist. In this segment we will hear about how Care Net is ready to help in FREE and practical ways. Since November of 1983, Care Net has been providing help and support to thousands of women, men and families in their communities. Care Net Pregnancy Centers of Albuquerque is recognized for providing a safe place for women and their families to explore their options related to pregnancy and their futures. They also connect their clients with local churches for additional resources.

Host Jasmine Douglas introduces the ministry, His House. Executive Director, Carolina Miller, shares that in 1989 their Founder, Jean Caceres-Gonzales, was inspired to start a ministry called "His house Children's Home" caring for abused, abandoned, and neglected children. Now, almost 29 years later, His House has cared for over 14,000 children. Kristen Guerse shares how she became a house parent, which required her to move into the house and live there full-time. Initially, when children arrive they are offered physical comforts such as a warm bed, food in their belly, clean clothes, and toys to play with. They also receive medical, dental, and a mental health evaluation, and are enrolled and attend school. His House strives to create as much of a normal environment in such, unfortunately, abnormal situations for them. Volunteers serve a huge purpose by essentially filling in the gaps. There are currently 232 licensed beds; 106 of those beds for foster care children who have been removed from their homes due to abuse, and 126 beds for the international children who are crossing the borders looking for a better way of life. Approximately 120 children are turned away every month because there are not enough beds. Children can stay overnight, or anywhere from a week up to five years. Kristen shares that one of the most rewarding things for her to see is a family reunited or a child united with a family through adoption or fostering. The Crespo family share the joys of being foster parents.

Youth spend more time on social media and devices than they do sleeping. During that time, they are being influenced by a worldview that is opposed to the Biblical worldview. They see negative behaviors glorified in media, yet also the hypocrisy that comes from these behaviors. It is not enough to expect a child to become an adult and hold a strong biblical worldview when they spend countless hours in school and influenced by culture every week and only two hours in church. The Refuge Youth Center provides a safe and fun place to engage with kids outside of the church. They are open 6 days a week and teach kids a Biblical worldview. Their program, "A Better Me A Better Tomorrow" gives kids points for engaging in social activities, working, going on outreaches, and other community involvement. The points can be redeemed for special trips. They also have kids worship services, an indoor skate park, art room, auto shop, and game room. The kids are mentored by other adults that teach them a Biblical worldview.

Today on Joy in Our Town, Host Taylor Murray introduces the topic of youth in poverty and a video about Urban Hope NYC. Pastor David Beidel of New Hope Community Church and President of Urban Hope NYC discusses how he and his wife have served the West Brighton and New Brighton communities of Staten Island for twenty-five years. The area was once known as "Wild West Brighton" with a cross street referred to as "Murder Alley" or "Bloody Brighton," which had the second highest murder rate in New York City in a census block. The community was dense with violence and gang rivalry creating a dangerous and traumatic environment for the children. Urban Hope NYC was created to provide a sanctuary. On Friday nights, children are served a home cooked meal and have devotionals. Their after-school program offers children help with their homework, music classes, cooking classes, and gardening three days a week. Summer camp is a free six-week program providing eight hours each day for children to participate in games, arts and crafts, songs, and the word of God. Youth groups volunteer for a week of camp and just "love bomb" the children. Youth and members of the community share how Urban Hope NYC has impacted their lives for the better.

On today's episode of Treasures, Sonny Arguinzoni, Founder of Victory Outreach International, shows us the lives of a few people who suffer from child abuse and how God was able to heal all of their wounds. The harsh reality is that one in every five girls, and one in every 20 boys, are victims of child abuse. Many of these abused children grow up with psychological complexes and a poor self-image. More and more we see the news and hear how dangerous it is for our children. They are not even safe in their own schools. Psalms 147:3 says "He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds." What seems impossible to men is possible for God. Society says there is no hope for any of these innocent victims. But God not only heals the physical sickness and disease, but God can heal the heart and the mind and the emotions.
