Democratic Senators urge IRS to simplify, expand free filing options	SRN News Reports: A pair of senate Democrats are asking the IRS to simplify the tax-filing process. Senators Tom Carper [D-Del.] and Elizabeth Warren [D-Mass.] sent a letter to IRS Commissioner Danny Werfel asking that the agency simply the process of filing and expand free filing options. The senators say encouraging more Americans to use free e-filing software would lead to greater tax compliance, fewer unintentional errors on returns, and the ability for taxpayers to claim their refunds more quickly.	4 minutes	04/25/23
A coming economic earthquake	On today’s broadcast, Chuck Bentley of Crown Financial Ministries covered how Crown’s founder, the late Larry Burkett wrote The Coming Economic Earthquake, in 1991. He covered economic history, violations of Biblical financial principles, and the plausible scenario for what could happen to the debt-fueled American economy. Now we’ve survived a number of economic challenges since then and Larry was labeled an alarmist. Many discredited his thesis altogether. Today, however, his words are eerily appropriate. Larry said, “Once the limit to which foreign investors will fund the U.S. debt is reached, a monetary crisis is not far off.” He also said, “Government will monetize their debt...the printing of money to pay the government’s bills will be one of the last, and certainly the most desperate, measures because of the potential severity of the consequences.” Larry predicted a banking crisis by saying, “In a bad economy with unemployment exceeding 10 percent or more, many of the normally sound loans will default. This crack in the economy will be highly	2 minutes	05/01/23 publicized because it will swallow up hundreds of banks, large and small, and will require a trillion dollars or more of government subsidies. Once again, the same question surfaces, where will the funds come from at a time when the economy is flagging and the government's income is declining? New taxes, more loans, or printed money? Take your pick."

Republicans Gaetz and Mullin push for nationwide "Stand Your Ground" law	SRN News Reports: Congressman Matt Gaetz and Senator Markwayne Mullin say their companion bills would allow people to use deadly force in the event they "reasonably believe it's needed to prevent imminent death or great bodily harm to themselves or others." It would also be allowed to "prevent the imminent commission of a forcible felony." Gaetz says the legal duty of retreat should be abolished everywhere and that -quote-"Every American has the right to defend themselves and their loved ones from an attacker."	4 minutes	05/04/23
Republicans are forecasting a dangerous influx in illegals this week when President Biden ends enforcement of the "Title-42" immigration law	SRN News Reports: Republicans are forecasting a dangerous influx in illegals this week when President Biden ends enforcement of the "Title-42" immigration law. Senator Lindsey Graham [R-S.C.] says many of those planning to enter the country illegally are well aware the U.S. will stop enforcing Title-42 on Thursday. Senator Graham says even Democrat mayors in major cities like Washington DC, Chicago, and New York are urging the president to reconsider. A number of cities in Texas have already declared states of emergency.	4 minutes	05/07/23
A lifeline to overwhelmed moms	On this edition of Family Talk w/Dr. James Dobson, he continues his conversation with Sarah Parshall Perry about the challenges of raising a household full of children—specifically two sons with autism spectrum disorder (ASD) and a strong-willed daughter. She reminds parents that God is there for them and they are doing the greatest job of all, whether they know it or not. Sometimes, as a parent, you have to set aside your wildly unrealistic aspirations for the day, week, or year and realize that this may be one of those times where you just don't get out of your pajamas.	26 minutes	05/12/23

	other living arrangement compares to the financial and emotional well-being that's generated from a faithful, committed marriage and family. Yet today, many are fragmented, under pressure, and being pulled apart. When families fail to form or fracture, the financial and emotional consequences can be extreme. The overall well-being of families is interrelated with finances. That's why intentionality is required to avoid the destruction happening today. The University of Nebraska studied the characteristics of strong families. Over a 35-year period, researchers found several defining strengths. First, commitment: they make their relationships a high priority. Appreciation: they let each other know they're important. Communication: they discuss issues, listen well, and laugh together. Time together: they're intentional about planning activities. Spiritual wellness: they have shared beliefs. Crisis and stress: they're able to cope with difficulties and are resilient. As the old saying goes, love is often spelled T.I.M.E. By choosing to live according to God's financial principles, you create the financial capacity to have more time together. You also avoid the crisis and stress generated by the mismanagement of money.
