

During the first quarter of 2020, KMWU focused on the following topics via local news efforts for Wichita and Kansas. This was the most unprecedented news quarter in recent memory, as the novel coronavirus' global impact became national, and then began to affect our local community. Our partnership with the Kansas News Service for public radio stations has continued, enabling a substantial number of regional stories as well. KMWU news staff covers issues in the community for radio and web (with photos and links for every story), and --also as a result of COVID-19-- offering news on a variety of platforms has become critical to our service to our listenership. Our news team of seven is supplemented by Wichita State interns, and those individuals have learned an incredible amount from our award-winning radio talent about news coverage during a crisis while they provide additional local coverage.

Ascertainment topics continue to come from community projects and efforts focused on surveying residents. This has never been more true than it is today. People have wanted - and quite literally needed - to have dependable information on the coronavirus topic, and community needs beyond this have also continued as usual. KMWU helps enable the community to come together, most notably with its civic engagement activities such as Digital Democracy on Tap, other virtual events, and opportunities for listeners to ask questions and give feedback through socially distanced methods. Through these efforts as well as countless individual conversations with staff, the station continues collecting input on topics relevant to Wichitans in order to best inform them.
