Issue	Program/Title	Description	Date	Time	Duration
Economy & State Budget Ride-Sharing	Capital Connection	Blair Horner, executive director of the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), discussed Governor Cuomo's proposed state budget and the impact a Republican president and a Republican-controlled Congress would have on the state's allocation of federal funds. Horner also talked about the debate over allowing ride-sharing programs (like Uber) in the state; he said it revolves around who would regulate them: the DMV or local municipalities (the latter already regulate taxicabs).	04/02/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Economy & State Budget Court System	Capital Connection	Casey Seiler, Senior Editor for News with the Albany Times Union , discussed the "dysfunction" in this year's state budget process with the conflicts between the governor and the legislators. Seiler described the movement to "Raise the Age" so that 16 and 17 year olds would no longer be tried as adults in the court system; he outlined why some politicians want that provision included in the new budget instead of as stand-alone legislation.	04/09/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Education	Capital Connection	New York State Republican Party Chair Ed Cox described the tough standards the state has for charter schools, how such schools benefit residents, and their impact on public schools. He also commented on the governor's proposal to offer free college tuition with certain income guidelines and whether or not it's a good idea.	04/16/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Education Ride-sharing	Capital Connection	Ken Lovett, Albany Bureau Chief for the New York Daily News , discussed the state's new "college affordability plan," which provides free college tuition for certain income levels. He also outlined the reasons why ride-sharing programs like Uber had been allowed in New York City but not in upstate New York, along with why there was such a strong lobby to change that.	04/23/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Politics Education	Capital Connection	Jesse McKinley, Albany Bureau Chief of the New York Times , discussed the governor's change from leaning right to leaning left and what that means for any future political aspirations. McKinley also talked about the concept of mayoral control of the schools, as is the case in New York City.	04/30/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Politics	Capital Connections	J.P. Miller, founder and publisher of EmpireReportNewYork.com (an online source of state political news), described how he and his staff compile news from over 50 local newspapers and other sources, and	05/07/17	6:30 am	30 min.

Education		mentioned how the site now includes various commentaries, including that of Bob Lonsberry in Rochester. Miller discussed whether Governor Andrew Cuomo should run for a third term in light of possible presidential aspirations. And Miller talked about the opposition to the governor's free college tuition plan.
Politics Economy Immigration Health care	Capital Connection	New York State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli discussed his proposal to restore review power of state contracts to the comptroller's office. This pre-audit oversight was removed by the state legislature and led to the alleged shady transactions which have marred the state's economic development plan. DiNapoli talked about proposed federal immigration reform and how that would impact farm operators in the state who depend on immigrants to harvest crops. And he discussed proposed changes to federal health care regulations.	05/14/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Politics State Stipend Controversy	Capital Connection	Ken Lovett, Albany Bureau Chief for the New York Daily News , explained that state senators get stipends (extra income) for being a senate leader or a committee chair. A newspaper investigation has revealed that other senators are getting stipends, too, for being "vice-chairs" and there's some question about the legality of that. He discussed what this means for state taxpayers, who are paying these higher salaries.	05/21/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Politics State Stipend Controversy	Capital Connection	Albany Times Union Capitol Bureau reporter Matt Hamilton explained the situation in the state senate involving the Independent Democratic Conference, which separated from the mainline Democrats and has a power-sharing agreement with the Republicans (the majority in the senate). He also discussed the stipend controversy in which vice-chairs of committees are getting stipends (extra pay), which are generally reserved only for committee chairs.	05/28/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Politics Police	Capital Connection	Jay Jochnowitz, Editorial Page Editor for the Albany Times Union , described the impact of the Independent Democratic Conference in the state senate, saying it helps the Republican agenda but may or may not help those renegade Democrats. He explained why his editorial board endorsed body cameras for police officers, saying that	06/04/17	6:30 am	30 min.

		recordings could force the cops to change their sometimes intimidating tactics.
Politics State Stipend Controversy	Capital Connection	Ken Lovett, Albany Bureau Chief for the New York Daily News , discussed the governor's effort to build up a progressive record to appeal to the Democrats in the state, and also pondered whether the lieutenant governor has further political ambitions. Lovett presented the latest in the stipend controversy in the state senate; vice-chairs of committees have allegedly gotten stipends which are generally reserved only for committee chairs.	06/11/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Marijuana Legalization Politics State Constitution	Capital Connection	New York State Republican Assembly Minority Leader Brian Kolb of Canandaigua discussed whether the state would consider legalizing marijuana for recreational use. He also explained the proposal for procurement reform, which would restore pre-audit oversight to the state comptroller before economic development contracts are signed. And he pondered whether there should be a state constitutional convention and whether that would lead to any reforms in Albany.	06/18/17	6:30 am	30 min.
Economy & State Budget Child Abuse	Capital Connection	Albany Times Union columnist Chris Churchill pondered why the state legislature always waits to the last minute to pass a state budget. He noted that the legislature failed to pass the Child Victims Act, which would have extended the statute of limitations on child abuse cases. He also discussed the impact of state government on the economy of Albany – and what would happen if the capital were moved to another location in the state.	06/25/17	6:30 am	30 min.
