Issue	Program/Title	Description	Date	Time	Duration
Political Scandals in NYS	Capital Connections	Blair Horner, executive director of the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), gave an update on the continuing investigations into the alleged wrongdoings by the governor's top aides regarding an economic development scandal. He provided reaction to a former gubernatorial candidate in Buffalo who got into trouble for saying racist comments against President Obama. And Horner also discussed the state Attorney General investigating the Trump Foundation and Exxon-Mobil and whether those actions would influence national environmental policies.	01/01/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Government & Politics Political Scandals in NYS	Capital Connections	Jimmy Vielkind, Albany Bureau Chief for Politico , an online news service, discussed the opening day of the 2017 session of the New York State Senate, including the new restrictions on cell phone use in the legislative chambers and lobby (which could be viewed as a curb on freedom of the press). He also talked about the alleged corruption among the governor's top aides and how that might impact the legislative session.	01/08/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Government & Politics Education	Capital Connections	New York State Assembly Minority Leader Brian Kolb of Canandaigua reacted to Governor Andrew Cuomo conducting a series of "State of the State" addresses in various regions of the state instead of doing one address before the entire legislature. Kolb also discussed the governor's proposal to offer free college tuition for state residents who are in a certain income range; he pointed out that it would likely take money away from the public elementary and high schools.	01/15/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Government & Politics	Capital Connections	Ken Lovett, Albany Bureau Chief for the New York Daily News , reviewed the state budget proposal put forth by Gov. Andrew Cuomo and discussed	01/22/2017	6:30 am	30 min.

		how many of the governor's new initiatives will actually be accepted by the legislature after the governor chose to present his "state of the state" address in various regions of the state instead of before the legislators directly.
Education	Capital Connections	Blair Horner, Executive Director of the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), discussed the governor's idea of giving free SUNY tuition to people in certain income brackets, while raising tuition for people in higher brackets. He also explained the so-called "millionaire's tax" and talked about whether it should be extended when the law expires	01/29/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Taxes
Government & Politics	Capital Connections	Yancey Roy, Albany Bureau Chief for Newsday , discussed the rocky relationship Gov. Andrew Cuomo has with the New York State legislature after a pay raise for the legislators was voted down by a commission appointed by the governor – and the impact that will have on getting his agenda passed.	02/05/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Government & Politics	Capital Connections	Albany Times Union Columnist Chris Churchill discussed the chances of Governor Andrew Cuomo being re-elected, based on polling numbers and whether people like the governor's politics and personality. Churchill also talked about the new casinos which have opened around the state and whether gambling institutions are good for the local economy or not.	02/12/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Economy
Government & Politics	Capital Connections	J.P. Miller, founder and publisher of EmpireReportNewYork.com (an online source of state political news), described how he compiles news	02/19/2017	6:30 am	30 min.

		stories of interest to state residents. He discussed the actions of President Trump, pointing out that the president is following through with his campaign promises to the delight of his supporters, and annoying the media in the process. Miller also talked about the "rogue" Democrats in the New York State Senate (who caucus with the Republicans) and their relationship with the "regular" Democrats.
Government & Politics	Capital Connections	Albany Times Union State Editor Casey Seiler discussed the powers that were taken away from the state comptroller and the governor's proposal to create a commission (under the governor's control) to perform those duties. Seiler talked about congressional town hall meetings and whether or not those are the best forums for members of Congress to hear from their constituents. Seiler also described the non-profit corporations which were created to generate economic development, but which have actually created legal difficulties for their directors.	02/26/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Economy
Economy	Capital Connections	New York State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli discussed the improved revenues coming to the state because of the "Trump bump" (higher stock prices with the new president in office); this is good for the state pension fund's stocks and for people's earnings in the financial markets (which increases state taxes paid). He described the concept of "sustainable investments," which considers the environmental, social, and governmental impact of investments along with the rate of return. DiNapoli also talked about the	03/05/2017	6:30 am	30 min.

		comptroller's office having a restricted ability to perform "pre-audits" before state contracts are approved and whether that power might be restored at some point.
Immigration Healthcare Political Scandals in NYS	Capital Connections	New York State Republican Party chairperson Ed Cox discussed how President Trump's immigration policy will affect the state and whether federal laws need to change. Cox talked about the effort to repeal and replace "Obamacare" and its impact on the economy. Cox also discussed the scandal surrounding the high-tech economic development programs instituted by the governor.	03/12/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Government & Politics Political Scandals in NYS	Capital Connections	Ken Lovett, Albany Bureau Chief for the New York Daily News , provided reaction to 41 special prosecutors from across the country being let go by President Trump, including the prosecutor who was investigating corruption in New York State. Lovett also discussed the various gubernatorial candidates and whether potential looming scandals will impact Governor Andrew Cuomo.	03/19/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
Healthcare Government & Politics	Capital Connections	Yancey Roy, Albany Bureau Chief for Newsday , discussed the federal health care proposal that would specifically apply to New York State in shifting the Medicaid costs from the counties to the state. He also discussed whether there are any viable Republican candidates to run for governor.	03/26/2017	6:30 am	30 min.
