Radio Job Line - Scott Passeser is one of Long Island's most respected business leaders and is deeply connected with the Long Island business community. Scott currently hosts Radio Jobline every Saturday afternoon from 2-3 PM and formerly hosted one of the region's most watched business television programs, News 12 Long Island's Jobline from 1989- 2013. Scott has been leading discussions and shaping thinking across the region for decades, while helping Long Islanders find jobs and achieve success in their careers.

Scott has been in the staffing business for over 25 years. He also has extensive experience in the outplacement and career management fields and is an expert on the use of social media in job hunting. Scott was so well respected in this field that he was asked by the Long Island Federation of Labor's Consortium of Worker Education in October of 2001, to run a re-employment program for over 1,000 Long Islanders displaced by the tragic events of 9/11. Scott is a published feature writer on the subject of navigating the job market and was a career columnist for Newsday, Long Island Business News and the Wall Street Journal's National Business Employment Weekly. Scott was also an Adjunct Professor at Hofstra University and instructed students in job hunting technique and interviewing. Scott connects job hunters with employers in unique ways and, thanks to Long Island News Radio, you can speak to him any time.

Internship Program with 5 Towns College

We work with the 5 Towns College internship department to offer students an in-depth look into the world of entertainment and technology, where they will have the opportunity to make valuable contributions to our company, experience hands-on opportunities and gain valuable skills to leverage their future career.

JVC offers opportunities in a ton of areas which means students can find themselves doing anything from running the board in a broadcasting booth or being a voice behind the mic. Many students of our internship program have moved onto entry level positions within JVC Media.
