As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Service: PBS
The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren

Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend -- the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

Series Title: We Shall Remain: American Experience Episode Title: After the Mayflower
Length: 90 minutes Airdate: 4/13/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS Format: Documentary
In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

Series Title: We Shall Remain: American Experience Episode Title: Tecumseh's Vision
Length: 90 minutes Airdate: 4/20/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS Format: Documentary
In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

Length: 90 minutes Airdate: 5/4/2009 8:00:00 PM O.B. Date: 5/4/2009 9:00:00 PM

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

All seven astronauts aboard perished and the implications for the future of the space shuttle program were enormous. What caused the Columbia tragedy? An engineering flaw? A failure within NASA? A lack of financing? Could this catastrophe have been avoided? Through interviews with astronauts and their families, as well as with members of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board, "Space Shuttle Disaster" gives viewers a new look at the Columbia tragedy -- and at NASA itself. From the creation of NASA through decades of technical and financial compromises, the program gets to the heart of what went wrong -- and how to make sure it never happens again.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

PsychoPhone--A couple in Cincinnati acquired a peculiar phonograph at an antiques auction. The machine, labeled "PsychoPhone," included four grooved wax cylinders. The contributors think Thomas Edison invented the PsychoPhone to record messages from the afterlife. As early as the 1870s, Edison and other scientific minds explored psychic phenomena, believing every living being was made of atoms that could "remember" past lives. Did Edison make a machine to unlock the secrets of the dead? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright travels to the Thomas A. Edison Menlo Park museum in New Jersey to find out. War Dog Letter--A World War II collector from Kansas City, Kansas, has a cryptic letter from a soldier to another military man. The soldier explains that military investigators have questioned him about a man named Prestre--specifically about his character and qualifications as a dog trainer. The contributor wants to know why the military was investigating Prestre and what the dogs were being trained to do. The search takes HISTORY DETECTIVES host Tukufu Zuberi to remote Cat Island near Gulfport, Mississippi, and Fort Lee in Virginia. The military put great effort into a new "War Dogs" program during WWII. What went wrong on Cat Island? Pancho Villa Watch Fob--Just before he died, a man gave his neighbors a most unusual gift: a watch fob commemorating Francisco "Pancho" Villa's murderous raid on the border town of Columbus, New Mexico. The man says he was a boy when the raid occurred in 1916, and he and his parents survived by hiding under a train car. The new owners want to know more about this watch fob. Who made it? Did their friend indeed witness this infamous raid? HISTORY DETECTIVES' new guest host, Eduardo Pagan, leads on an expedition that reveals an especially wild chapter of the American West.

St. Valentine's Day Massacre - HISTORY DETECTIVES stares down the barrel of a shotgun for clues that one of Al Capone's men fired it in a Chicago gang massacre that shocked the nation. The gun came to the contributor's family after it was handed down through two generations of prominent Chicago families. It's a Western Field single-barreled repeating action 12-gauge shotgun. The barrel and the stock were once shortened just the way the Capone gang liked its guns: easy to conceal and with greater destructive force. HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray tests the gun's firepower, consults with ballistics experts and combs through physical evidence to see if she can place this gun at the scene of the crime. Booth Letter - A contributor gave HISTORY DETECTIVES a letter indicating that, 30 years before John Wilkes Booth assassinated Abraham Lincoln, Booth's father threatened to kill another sitting president, Andrew Jackson. Signed "Junius Brutus Booth," the letter to Jackson reads, "You damn'd old scoundrel ... I will cut your throat whilst you are sleeping." The writer insists that Jackson pardon two men who were sentenced to death. Why did the fate of these two men incite such fury? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Tukufu Zuberi travels to Nashville to consult historians at The Hermitage, the ancestral home of President Andrew Jackson, and to Washington, DC, to talk with a Booth biographer. Was the letter a hoax? Or did assassination run in the Booth blood? Cemetery Alarm - A Midland, Michigan, man who collects war munitions snapped up an item at an estate auction that looked like a Civil War-era weapon. On closer inspection, after consulting with other collectors, he decided he had a grave alarm: an explosive device meant to guard against grave robbers. Is this truly a grave alarm? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan's investigation winds through tales of body snatching and cadaver dissecting, unusual crimes and the most unlikely suspects.

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

From the 1st Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain 9 decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors & iconic film images to examine how Chinese people have contributed to & been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about & dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical & exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films some dating back to the 1890s weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe & Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers & feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, & his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times & bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last 2 decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith & Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

From the first Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain nine decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors -- and iconic film images -- to examine how Chinese people have contributed to and been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about and dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Manhattan Project: A contributor is certain that his father worked on the Manhattan Project during World War II. His father refused to talk about his war assignment, except to say that he sold his patent to the U.S. government for a single dollar. Along with the patent, the contributor has a letter from the Atomic Energy Commission stating that his father's patent had been declassified. Was this invention used to build the atomic bomb? To find out, HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan travels to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, & discovers a plan to hide atomic secrets in plain sight. Galleon Shipwreck - A woman in Portland, Oregon, has a large chunk of what she believes is very old beeswax. This 23-pound block, dug up on the northern Oregon coast in the late 1930s, seems to have been deliberately carved with strange markings. For centuries, ships carried beeswax on trade routes from the Far East to the American Pacific Coast. Could this beeswax have been cargo on a legendary ship that foundered more than 300 years ago? And what do those odd markings mean? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray goes to the Bee Lab at Oregon State University to decipher where the beeswax came from and visits an archaeologist in Olympia, Washington, to track which ship may have brought it to the Oregon coast. Creole Poems - A HISTORY DETECTIVES fan from Chicago recently unearthed a French manuscript rolled in a cardboard tube. "Duplessis," his great-grandmother's mother-in-laws surname, is jotted in a margin, and "Rouzan," his grandmother's maiden name, appears at the bottom of another page. No one in the family knows anything about it, but the contributor, who reads a little French, thinks he has a collection of love poems, possibly written to one of his relatives. What is this? And why has his family kept it for 160 years? The questions lead HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright to New Orleans and to a piece of family history the contributor had never known.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe & Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith & Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, & cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

 Americans have a longstanding love affair with food the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," that takes a hard look at the secretive & surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The 2 discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, & another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

 From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

 The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

A terrible statistic: one in six women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. But an even more shocking reality: A backlog in processing rape kits--crucial evidence in arresting violent predators -- is delaying and sometimes denying justice for tens of thousands of American women. NOW travels to Los Angeles County to investigate why it has the largest known rape kit backlog in the country -- over 12,000 kits are sitting untested in police storage facilities. An internal audit found that more than 50 of these cases have exceeded the 10-year statute of limitations on rape. "The evidence that we're talking about represents human lives," Los Angeles Controller Laura Chick tells NOW. "Those are lives stacked up on the shelves waiting for justice." NOW talks with courageous rape survivors and law enforcement experts for insight and answers in this disturbing but important report. Are these women being victimized twice?

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith & Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

 An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

 As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

 The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

 The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Prague's Old Jewish Cemetery, a place of haunting beauty and mystery, has endured wars and pogroms, floods and fires, assimilation and an urban clearing project that destroyed most of the ancient Jewish Quarter it once served. Miraculously, it even survived the Nazi occupation and 40 years of communist neglect. "House of Life" tells the story of the vibrant Prague Jewish community of the past and of today's small Jewish community for whom the cemetery still serves as a spiritual center. The film features the curators, historians, rabbis, guides and conservationists who are all devoted to the preservation of this unforgettable place. Claire Bloom narrates.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

The ancient Maya civilization of Central America left behind an intricate and mysterious hieroglyphic script, carved on monuments, painted on pottery, and drawn in handmade bark-paper books. For centuries, scholars considered it too complex ever to understand -- until recently, when an ingenious series of breakthroughs finally cracked the code and unleashed a torrent of new insights into the Mayas' turbulent past. For the first time, NOVA presents the epic inside story of how the decoding was done -- traveling to the remote jungles of southern Mexico and Central America to investigate how the code was broken and what Maya writings now reveal.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith & Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, & cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

What will jobs of the future look like? Many studying that question are seeing green -- green jobs. And with President Obama promising to create 5 million "green-collar" jobs over the next 10 years, some are predicting that new career paths in energy efficiency and clean power will transform the American economy. This week, NOW on PBS talks with environmental activist Van Jones, founder of "Green for All," an environmental group dedicated to bringing green jobs to the disadvantaged. In March, Jones was appointed as special advisor for Green Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation at the White House Council on Environmental Quality. Now that he has the President's ear, will Jones be creating a new career frontier for America?

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

 How massive student loan debts are sinking American dreams and causing a national economic headache. This week, NOW follows the story of a single mother in Baltimore trying to dig herself out of more than $70,000 student loan debt. While issues of personal responsibility are debated, there's no question the high price of higher education is creating an ocean of student loan debt for people who can least afford it. How are the 70 million Americans with student debt frustrating America's economic recovery?

 Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

 Over the past 21 years, NOVA has followed a group of seven doctors from their first day at Harvard Medical School in 1987. All young, bright and accomplished, none of them could have predicted what it would take, personally and professionally, to become a member of the medical tribe. NOVA's cameras have been there through the difficult years of classes and clinical training, internship and residency, marriage and divorce -- documenting the trials and tribulations as these individuals struggled to become doctors and to balance time at work and at home. Candid in-depth interviews have given viewers a real sense of what each person has to deal with day in and day out since he or she made the decision to practice medicine. In this special two-part program, NOVA returns one last time to get an update on the kind of doctors -- and people -- they have become. Part 1 of 2.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

Over the past 21 years, NOVA has followed a group of 7 doctors from their first day at Harvard Medical School in 1987. All young, bright and accomplished, none of them could have predicted what it would take, personally and professionally, to become a member of the medical tribe. NOVA's cameras have been there through the difficult years of classes and clinical training, internship and residency, marriage and divorce -- documenting the trials and tribulations as these individuals struggled to become doctors and to balance time at work and at home. Candid in-depth interviews have given viewers a real sense of what each person has to deal with day in and day out since he or she made the decision to practice medicine. In this special two-part program, NOVA returns one last time to get an update on the kind of doctors -- and people -- they have become. Part 1 of 2.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human & women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty & sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people & hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. 5 decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annown Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

In the cold reaches of the far northern seas, it's a wonder that anything survives beyond the harshest of microbes, insects, and shrimp. But some of the ocean's coldest waters are also home to some of its largest and most warm-blooded, in this case, beluga whales, the mammal known as the canary of the sea for its vocal repertoire. In this episode, Jean-Michel Cousteau travels with his son and daughter, Fabien and Celine, and team to the high Arctic to discover why some beluga groups are thriving and others are disappearing. The revelation is the clear connection between human activity and the beluga's future. The surprise is that what is occurring with belugas may foreshadow similar health concerns for people. The inspiration is that with knowledge comes change and Jean-Michel Cousteau and team find reason for hope embodied in this intriguing, little known, and elusive white whale.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

The most complex marine species on the planet, our counterparts in the sea, is the orca, the ruler of the ocean. Orcas, also called killer whales, are the most widely distributed marine mammal in the world -- their realm extends from the Arctic to the Antarctic. They number fewer than 100,000 worldwide, and learning more about them is a global endeavor for Jean-Michel Cousteau and his team of explorers, who travel to both the Northern and Southern hemispheres as they seek out killer whales in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Cousteau and the team discover that people and orcas share surprising similarities, even similar needs, and they relate their findings to the captivity and release of Keiko, from "Free Willy" fame, who captured the world's imagination and whose survival depended on pioneering efforts to reintroduce Keiko into the wild. The team also learns how some of the threats to killer whales now intersect with human lives. Intriguing detours in the expedition arise, leading to critical examinations of our environment, of the food on our dinner tables, even of our own health.

Each year, a small shorebird that winters on the southern tip of South America must make a 10,000-mile journey to its nesting grounds in the Arctic -- one of the longest migrations on earth. The pocket-sized long distance traveler times its migration precisely to coincide with the annual spawning of one of earth's most ancient creatures. Horseshoe crab eggs in the Delaware Bay fuel the little bird's epic journey to the Arctic...but recently, bird numbers have started to crash. The story of the red knot and the horseshoe crab is a living example of how every species is interconnected -- each one important, no matter how big or small.

Frogs have been hopping the planet for more than 350 million years. They've evolved into some of the most wondrous, diverse and beloved animals on earth. Suddenly, they're slipping away. We've already lost one-third of our amphibians and more are disappearing each day. Some say it's the greatest extinction since the dinosaurs. Ecosystems are beginning to unravel, important medical cures are vanishing and we're losing a dear old friend. It's a global crisis, mobilizing scientists around the world to stem the tide - before the next frog crosses the thin green line.

The loneliest animals are the most endangered species on the planet. Collected and protected by dedicated scientists, these animals represent the end of the line for their species. In many cases, intensive captive breeding programs have been launched with the aim of sustaining these animals and the hope of returning them to the wild. Viewers are taken into high-security, high-tech labs where scientists attempt to breed new generations and into the field to discover what forces have led to the demise of entire species. Featured animals include Yangtze turtles under 24-hour surveillance; a baby Sumatran rhino; a special collection of lemurs; the Spix's macaw, a bird declared extinct in the wild in 2000; and "Lonesome George," a giant tortoise from the Galapagos, who is the last of his kind.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

Cutting across the Zambezi River, bridging the countries of Zambia and Zimbabwe, Victoria Falls is the largest waterfall in the world. This awesome force of nature divides two natural worlds - the tranquil meandering river above the cascade and the raging abyss of the gorge below. The upper river is idyllic, running shallow through sandstone hills and meandering around islands and reed-beds where elephants, lions, hippos, crocodiles, buffalo, zebra, antelope and otters thrive. In a single vertical drop, the river plummets twice the height of Niagara Falls into the wild waters and heavy spray of the narrow gorge, where 35 different raptor species rear their young, feasting on a glut of fish. Between the two worlds, the treacherous cliffs and rocky outcrops are covered in thick, mossy rainforest, fed by the constant mists, and home to baboons, monkeys, mongoose and parrots. It is a place of epic proportions, with an epic story to tell.

At a research site in Fongoli, Senegal, a female chimpanzee breaks off a branch, chews the end to make it sharp, then uses this rudimentary spear to skewer a tasty bushbaby hiding inside a hollow tree. The footage represents an astonishing breakthrough for primate researchers: It's the first time anyone has documented a chimpanzee wielding a carefully prepared, preplanned weapon. But it's only the latest in a slew of extraordinary new findings about ape behavior. The more researchers learn about the great apes -- chimpanzees, bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans -- the more evidence they find of creative intelligence. What, then, is the essential difference between us and them? "Ape Genius," a NOVA-National Geographic special, explores that provocative question and examines research that is illuminating the ape mind.

The president searches for the right tone on Iran, the Supreme Court weighs in on voting rights and student rights, and the gubernatorial mystery in South Carolina, tonight on "Washington Week." With Iran still in chaos, walking the U.S. policy tightrope. President Barack Obama said, "No iron fist is strong enough to shut off the world from bearing witness to peaceful protests of justice." But how does the president scold Iran's leadership while keeping the door open to nuclear negotiation? From climate change to health care - how the president is getting his message across. At the Supreme Court, two critical decisions on voting rights and on students rights. While a three-ring circus erupts in South Carolina. Gov. Mark Sanford said, "And so the bottom line is this: I've been unfaithful to my wife." State Rep. Todd Rutherford said, "I'm stunned. This is not what I expected." The dramatic fall of a rising star. Covering the week, David Sanger of the "New York Times," John Dickerson of "Slate" Magazine and CBS News, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

 Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

 The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

In the cold reaches of the far northern seas, it's a wonder that anything survives beyond the harshest of microbes, insects, and shrimp. But some of the ocean's coldest waters are also home to some of its largest and most warm-blooded, in this case, beluga whales, the mammal known as the canary of the sea for its vocal repertoire. In this episode, Jean-Michel Cousteau travels with his son and daughter, Fabien and Celine, and team to the high Arctic to discover why some beluga groups are thriving and others are disappearing. The revelation is the clear connection between human activity and the beluga's future. The surprise is that what is occurring with belugas may foreshadow similar health concerns for people. The inspiration is that with knowledge comes change and Jean-Michel Cousteau and team find reason for hope embodied in this intriguing, little known, and elusive white whale.

Over the past 21 years, NOVA has followed a group of seven doctors from their first day at Harvard Medical School in 1987. All young, bright and accomplished, none of them could have predicted what it would take, personally and professionally, to become a member of the medical tribe. NOVA's cameras have been there through the difficult years of classes and clinical training, internship and residency, marriage and divorce -- documenting the trials and tribulations as these individuals struggled to become doctors and to balance time at work and at home. Candid in-depth interviews have given viewers a real sense of what each person has to deal with day in and day out since he or she made the decision to practice medicine. In this special two-part program, NOVA returns one last time to get an update on the kind of doctors -- and people -- they have become. Part 1 of 2.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released - along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

The most complex marine species on the planet, our counterparts in the sea, is the orca, the ruler of the ocean. Orcas, also called killer whales, are the most widely distributed marine mammal in the world -- their realm extends from the Arctic to the Antarctic. They number fewer than 100,000 worldwide, and learning more about them is a global endeavor for Jean-Michel Cousteau and his team of explorers, who travel to both the Northern and Southern hemispheres as they seek out killer whales in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Cousteau and the team discover that people and orcas share surprising similarities, even similar needs, and they relate their findings to the captivity and release of Keiko, from "Free Willy" fame, who captured the world's imagination and whose survival depended on pioneering efforts to reintroduce Keiko into the wild. The team also learns how some of the threats to killer whales now intersect with human lives. Intriguing detours in the expedition arise, leading to critical examinations of our environment, of the food on our dinner tables, even of our own health.

This week, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with one of the most prominent figures in world health to discuss the future of the swine flu pandemic. Dr. Larry Brilliant is an epidemiologist, former Chief Philanthropist at Google.org, and was a central figure in the World Health Organization's successful smallpox eradication program. Brilliant sheds light on high-tech tools that are making it easier for scientists to detect global outbreaks, the critical importance of early detection and early response, and how the current pandemic has yet to show its real hand. "Anyone who tells you that they know that this is a mild pandemic, and the WHO has overreacted, they don't know. Anyone who tells you that the WHO and CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) have underestimated it, they don't know," Brilliant tells NOW. "We're all going to find out at the same time...we're all in it together." The show also features vital insight from Dr. Nathan Wolfe, a Stanford University epidemiologist who specializes in hunting viruses to their source.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services

Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

From the first Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain nine decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors -- and iconic film images -- to examine how Chinese people have contributed to and been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about and dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

Ray Suarez, senior correspondent for THE NEWSHOUR WITH JIM LEHRER, moderates this discussion of the future of affirmative action. In the age of Obama, should race and ethnicity still be a factor in promoting equality or should affirmative action policies be retooled with class and economic status in mind? The confirmed debaters are Julian Bond, chairman, NAACP; Dalton Conley, Chair of the Sociology Department, New York University; John McWhorter, Senior Fellow, Manhattan Institute; and Lee Bolinger, President, Columbia University.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

From the first Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain nine decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors -- and iconic film images -- to examine how Chinese people have contributed to and been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about and dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

 The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" LOS NIÑOS EN SU CASA is the Spanish-language companion to the English-language series A PLACE OF OUR OWN. Both series are designed for parents and anyone else who takes care of young children: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The series covers subjects such as tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, and speech and language delays. These Peabody award winning series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help children be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

Length: 90 minutes Airdate: 5/4/2009 8:00:00 PM O.B. Date: 5/4/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS Format: Documentary
In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

NOLA: AMEX 002109 Series Title: We Shall Remain: American Experience Episode Title: Wounded Knee
Length: 90 minutes Airdate: 5/11/2009 9:00:00 PM O.B. Date: 5/11/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS Format: Documentary

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times & bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last 2 decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith & Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

On February 1, 2003, the space shuttle Columbia disintegrated over Texas just 16 minutes before it was due to land. All seven astronauts aboard perished and the implications for the future of the space shuttle program were enormous. What caused the Columbia tragedy? An engineering flaw? A failure within NASA? A lack of financing? Could this catastrophe have been avoided? Through interviews with astronauts and their families, as well as with members of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board, "Space Shuttle Disaster" gives viewers a new look at the Columbia tragedy -- and at NASA itself. From the creation of NASA through decades of technical and financial compromises, the program gets to the heart of what went wrong -- and how to make sure it never happens again.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

 Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?"  In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend -- the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

"Ferrets: The Pursuit of Excellence" offers an endearing and amusing glimpse at America's most playful, mischievous pets -- not to mention their distinctive owners. At the annual Ferret Buckeye Bash in Columbus, Ohio, the largest and most popular ferret show in the country, hundreds of top breeders, seasoned experts and ferret enthusiasts pamper and parade their pets in a quest for prizes and prestige. FERRETS offers a quirky contrast to the common animal show -- these curious creatures lack the regal air of show cats or the respectable nature of pedigreed dogs -- yet these ferrets are trained, pampered and primed by their doting owners in the hope of taking the top prize in the biggest ferret show in the country.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

On February 1, 2003, the space shuttle Columbia disintegrated over Texas just 16 minutes before it was due to land. All seven astronauts aboard perished and the implications for the future of the space shuttle program were enormous. What caused the Columbia tragedy? An engineering flaw? A failure within NASA? A lack of financing? Could this catastrophe have been avoided? Through interviews with astronauts and their families, as well as with members of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board, "Space Shuttle Disaster" gives viewers a new look at the Columbia tragedy -- and at NASA itself. From the creation of NASA through decades of technical and financial compromises, the program gets to the heart of what went wrong -- and how to make sure it never happens again.

This week, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with one of the most prominent figures in world health to discuss the future of the swine flu pandemic. Dr. Larry Brilliant is an epidemiologist, former Chief Philanthropist at Google.org, and was a central figure in the World Health Organization's successful smallpox eradication program.

Brilliant sheds light on high-tech tools that are making it easier for scientists to detect global outbreaks, the critical importance of early detection and early response, and how the current pandemic has yet to show its real hand. "Anyone who tells you that they know that this is a mild pandemic, and the WHO has overreacted, they don't know. Anyone who tells you that the WHO and CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) have underestimated it, they don't know," Brilliant tells NOW. "We're all going to find out at the same time...we're all in it together." The show also features vital insight from Dr. Nathan Wolfe, a Stanford University epidemiologist who specializes in hunting viruses to their source.

In 1918, at the tail end of the First World War, a flu pandemic ripped through the world with such speed and virulence that by the end of the following year an estimated 40 million people would be dead-outstripping by four-fold the number of victims claimed by the war. Where did this particular flu strain come from, and what made it so deadly? "Killer Flu" will show how 85 years later, virologists and epidemiologists the world over are still hunting down the answers to those two critical questions. Their quest has been imbued with a sense of urgency; modern health experts are bracing themselves for a return of the 1918 flu strain, with many suggesting a similar pandemic will occur within the next decade. The show features the work of American pathologist Jeffrey Taubenberger, who found lung tissue from a 1918 flu victim that contained fragments of the undamaged 1918 virus. For the past six years, Taubenberger has been working to map the virus's genetic code one gene at a time in an effort to learn the secret of its killing prowess. He has even introduced some of the old virus's genes into present-day live virus and injected it into lung tissue to better study the way it attacks its victims. His hope is to apply his research on the 1918 virus to the emergence of new influenza strains.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

As the June 2009 digital television conversion makes tens of millions of analog TVs obsolete, and Americans continue to trash old computers and cell phones at alarming rates, FRONTLINE/WORLD presents a global investigation into the dirty secret of the digital age -- the dumping of hundreds of millions of pounds of electronic waste around the world each year. Tracking "e-waste" to the slums of Ghana and the far-off provinces in China, producer/correspondent Peter Klein and his team of graduate journalism students fan out around the world to document the growing impact of this toxic trash on those who desperately scavenge it for precious metals. They also explore the potential threats to privacy, as criminal gangs attempt to harvest data from America's old computers and cell phones and exploit it. Also in this hour, a popular competition to inspire a new generation of entrepreneurs in the Middle East, and a pioneering effort to make an affordable wheelchair for the developing world.

 Can the power of music make the brain come alive? Throughout his career Dr. Oliver Sacks, neurologist and acclaimed author, whose book Awakenings was made into an Oscar-nominated feature film starring Robin Williams and Robert De Niro, has encountered myriad patients who are struggling to cope with debilitating medical conditions. While their ailments vary, many have one thing in common: an appreciation for the therapeutic effects of music. NOVA follows four individuals--two of whom are Sacks's case studies--and even peers into Sacks's own brain, to investigate music's strange, surprising, and still unexplained power over the human mind.

 An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb.

Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

NOLA: AMEX 002108 Series Title: We Shall Remain: American Experience Episode Title: Geronimo
Length: 90 minutes Airdate: 5/4/2009 9:00:00 PM O.B. Date: 5/4/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

 Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? A record 115,000 U.N. peacekeepers are now deployed in 20 countries, and their mission is more vital than ever. But critics and insiders alike are openly worried that the current peacekeeping model is overstretched -- and at risk of failure. This week, NOW travels to the Democratic Republic of the Congo to witness today's largest and most expensive peacekeeping operation. There, 17,000 U.N. troops are tasked with protecting millions of people over a rugged and dangerous territory the size of the Eastern United States. But the effort is struggling -- last November, local rebels massacred civilians less than a mile from one of the U.N. bases. How can U.N. peacekeeping be improved so that it fulfills its promise of protection to the world? This show is a co-production with the Bureau for International Reporting (BIR), a non-profit video news production company.

In the summer of 1942, two ace fighter pilots -- one American and one Japanese -- faced off during a dramatic dogfight in the skies over Guadalcanal. Eventually the Japanese pilot shot down the American, who crash landed behind enemy lines but managed to escape before being captured. Using both pilots' comprehensive (but sometimes contradictory) memoirs, and following a forensic expedition to the recently-found American plane, "Dogfight Over Guadalcanal" examines and recreates every anxious second of the WWII showdown over the Pacific, revealing just how evenly matched the two men were and how they both survived, despite serious injuries.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

This week NOW on PBS partners with best-selling author and journalist Robert Lacey to investigate the surprising success of Saudi Arabia's approach to dealing with terrorists and extremists -- without torture or water-boarding. Given extraordinary access to the Saudi Arabian Interior Ministry and its practices, Lacey visits terrorist rehabilitation camps that use "soft policing" tactics to be nice to the bad guys. In the program we see the Saudis providing a private jumbo jet to bring inmates home from Guantanamo Bay, giving them a hero's welcome, then sending them to a converted holiday resort for re-education. Then, the men are set free. Is this rehab program working, and can we trust the Saudis to protect themselves -- and us -- against Islamic extremism in the future? Watch this NOW on PBS report for a perspective on terrorism you've never seen before.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend -- the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed woman suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

A terrible statistic: one in six women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. But an even more shocking reality: A backlog in processing rape kits--crucial evidence in arresting violent predators -- is delaying and sometimes denying justice for tens of thousands of American women. NOW travels to Los Angeles County to investigate why it has the largest known rape kit backlog in the country -- over 12,000 kits are sitting untested in police storage facilities. An internal audit found that more than 50 of these cases have exceeded the 10-year statute of limitations on rape. "The evidence that we're talking about represents human lives," Los Angeles Controller Laura Chick tells NOW. "Those are lives stacked up on the shelves waiting for justice." NOW talks with courageous rape survivors and law enforcement experts for insight and answers in this disturbing but important report. Are these women being victimized twice?

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin - who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Working in Pakistan after September 11, 2001, former Wall Street Journal reporter Asra Nomani faced a double shock: a surprise pregnancy and abandonment by the Pakistani man she thought would be her husband, then the murder of her dear friend Daniel Pearl at the hands of Muslim extremists. Still reeling, and with a son to raise, she returned to her hometown in West Virginia to find that the mosque had been taken over by men she saw as extremists. This documentary chronicles what happens when she decides to fight back -- angering even the mosque's moderates. As the film unfolds, it tells a story of competing paths to social change, American identity and the nature of religion itself.

 The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

 How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."
