| 2/17/2021         | Voices of COVID-19: From a broken heart to a bakery built by brownies | Host Krista Monk sat down with Britny Wray. She’s the owner of the brand new Broken Heart Bakery in downtown Albany. Britny developed a heart condition during the pandemic and was told she couldn’t work until the doctors were able to figure out what’s wrong and how to fix it. So, to make up for some of that income, she started selling freshly baked goods out of her home. What started off as a small side project eventually grew so big, she couldn’t do it out of her home anymore. How is she juggling having three kids, all of which were doing virtual learning from home, taking care of and rehoming foster pets, and trying to keep herself and her family healthy in a pandemic, as well as trying to start a new business? |

He was a part of organizing Phoebe's COVID-19 vaccination process. He explains how vaccines are going at Phoebe, the concerns of vaccine shortages and the process of getting vaccinated from application to scheduling your second shot. So, what can you expect when you go to get the vaccine? Find out on this week's episode of the Voices of COVID-19. |
| 3/10/2021 | Voices of COVID-19: A year in review with Emileigh Forrester          | Host Krista Monk sat down with WALB's Today in Georgia Anchor Emileigh Forrester. After a year of pandemic coverage, she's seen, covered and been through a lot. So what's it been like working in news during a pandemic, seeing our communities rally together to flatten the curve and getting through 365 days of COVID-19?   |
| 3/17/2021 | Voices of COVID-19: Students studying to be doctors amid a pandemic   | Host Krista Monk spoke with Allison Tresner and Jake Massey, who are both second-year students at Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine, or PCOM, in Moultrie. They discussed the curriculum and the impact of COVID-19 on their studies, as well as how the pandemic has affected their interest in studying medicine. So, what's it like for medical students getting ready to start clinicals during a pandemic?                                  |
| 3/24/2021 | Voices of COVID-19: Coronavirus has kept this couple apart for a year | Host Krista Monk spoke with Pam and Larry Hagan of Terrell County. Larry was hospitalized in March 2020, and he still hasn't been able to come home. He's spent the last year fighting for his life against COVID-19. Pam has also been fighting for Larry's life, but she's had to do it from a distance. Now, Larry is in rehab, working to rebuild the muscle lost while he battled the coronavirus. So, when will he and Pam finally be reunited?       |

| 3/31/2021 | Voices of COVID-19: The bond between a COVID patient and her nurse | Host Krista Monk spoke with Laconyea Lynn, one of the first COVID-19 patients at Phoebe, and Traveling Nurse Kim Sloan, who helped treat Laconyea. In early March 2020, Laconyea was brought to the hospital, intubated, treated for several medical conditions that arose as she battled the coronavirus. And by her side was one of several nurses, Kim. As nurses struggled to keep pace with Albany's early influx of COVID patients, Kim said Laconyea was her hope because every day she came into work, Laconyea was still in room 11, fighting for her life. During that time, Kim was one of the people telling Laconyea's son what was going on and keeping him informed on his mother's condition. When Laconyea woke up to a completely different world than she remembered, Kim explained what she had been doing as her nurse and that she was making sure her son knew what was going on. Now that Laconyea is out of the hospital, the two remain friends and talk frequently. But what were their individual experiences like and what's next for these two? |

GM Bruce Austin with along with Callie Hughey-Walker and Katie Hughey-Gatewood

Bruce - WALB is not just in the community, we are part of the community.

We have decided to do our part to keep our community being a place we are proud to live in.

Images of litter and trash along our roadways are much more than an eyesore, it's a deterrent for visitors and business.

We not only decided to partner with Keeping Albany and Dougherty Co beautiful, we again are teaming up with the Selling Sisters for the Love of our Community.

{Callie and Katie} That's right. We are asking you all to Pick an area near you to pick up the litter and toss it in its proper place.

It's easy to point fingers and ask "who's going to pick this up?!"

In the short moments it takes for us to complain on social media, or to our friends, we could be the change we want to see in the world and in our community.

Not only is litter an eye sore and a health hazard, but it's just plain lazy and it is against the law! So let's show our community some love by organizing your own group to pick up trash for the week of February 8th to 12th. Every little bit helps, even if it's just your own front yard.

Bruce - WALB is going to do the same and roll up our sleeves to pick up litter to help make OUR community beautiful. We ask that you do the same... a small amount of time and effort can make a dramatic and lasting change that we can all enjoy. We are proud to partner with Hughey and Neuman to make Southwest Georgia litter free and a place we all can be proud of.
