The Licensee uses a variety of recruitment sources designed to inform qualified job applicants in the community of the availability of vacancies at the stations. The specific recruitment sources used may vary depending upon the position to be filed, but generally include local newspapers, area colleges and universities, organizations, and state and local employment agencies, where appropriate. Jobs requiring specialized skill may be advertised in print and trade journals. The licensee also may use the stations and their websites, as well as job-related websites, to advertise job vacancies.
