 WRAL Documentary - "Grading Teacher Pay"
 During the 1990's Governor Jim Hunt worked with Republicans and Democrats in the legislature to raise the average salary for public school teachers to the national average in an effort to attract and retain good teachers and improve education. Teacher salaries rose steadily until 2008, but after that our state's average teacher salary plummeted to 47th in the nation and is currently 42nd. The result, according to North Carolina's Superintendent of Education and local superintendents, has been high teacher turnover and teacher shortages. Many teachers have gone to other states for higher pay or have left the profession. Through interviews with teachers and policymakers this documentary examines the impact of low teacher pay, its relationship to educational quality and the debate over how much North Carolina's public school teachers should be paid.

The documentary is hosted by WRAL News anchor Renee Chou.

2:00 04/27/2016 6PM
 Teacher of the Week - Stephanie Perkins
 Stephanie Perkins, a teacher at Rocky Mount High School, is WRAL's Teacher of the Week for April 27, 2016.

2:00	04/21/2016	5:30PM
Diversity In Medicine
There's a new national campaign aimed at increasing diversity in the medical profession. African Americans make up close to 13 percent of the U.S. population but they only represent 3 percent of all practicing physicians. WRAL's Dr. Allen Mask explains how local physicians are working to inspire more young black students to wear the white coat of healing.
2:00	04/26/2016	ALL AM
Opioid Overdose
Researchers at Boston Medical Center looked at 3,000 patients who had survived an opioid related overdose between 2000 and 2012. They found over 90% of these patients continued to receive these prescriptions even after their overdose. Upon following those patients over the next 300 days, an additional 7% of them overdosed a 2nd time. In a majority of cases, the researchers report that the same doctor wrote the opioid prescription before and after the first overdose.
2:00	04/27/2016	5:30PM
Fibroid Tumors
Women often face a different health issues that men don't. One that can hurt their quality of life which is "non-cancerous uterine fibroid tumors." As Dr. Allen Mask explains, a new 5 year study is aimed at finding the best way to help each patient and in a way that best suits their life goals.
2:00	04/28/2016	5:30PM
Unvaccinated Kids
Health officials are noticing a trend in parts of the country - more parents are choosing not to give their children recommended vaccinations. So experts are raising awareness to prevent the spread of disease. But as WRAL's Dr. Allen Mask explains, not all parents are on board.
2:00	04/29/2016	5:30PM
Ovarian Cancer Drama
A Pulitzer Prize winning drama opens tonight at the North Carolina Theater in Raleigh. It's called "Wit: A Story of Courage" and depicts one woman's experience of living and dying with ovarian cancer. Dr. Mask shares the stories of one woman who experienced ovarian cancer with her mother and another who experienced it, but only on stage.
2:00	05/02/2016	5:30PM
Palestinian Gets Prosthetic Leg
In the war torn Middle East, there are countless stories of suffering families and children, and the humanitarian efforts to help them. In this report, Dr. Allen Mask explains how a local group brought a Palestinian teenager to Raleigh to help him get back on his feet.
