Quarterly Issues Programs List

Station: KROD-AM

January 1, 2024 through March 31, 2024

Section I. Issues

KROD has identified the following topics as significant issues facing our community in this quarter:

- A. Animal Conservation: The year started with excitement surrounded the new exhibits at the Zoo. The quarter ended with controversy as the city elected to not renew its contract with the Zoological Society.
- B. Children's Advocacy: CASA continues to seek assistance with restocking funds and volunteer staff.
- C. Education: Numerous scholarship fundraisers took place this quarter. El Paso has made a commitment to improve youth and adult education as we continue to face criticism for national rankings.
- D. Immigration: This continued to be a source of debate for how to address the surging number of migrants attempting to come to America through the Borderland as the previously leveled off numbers began to rise again. This subject has become a political topic of debate amplified in Texas by the bussing actions and installation of razor wire fencing from Governor Gregg Abbott.
- E. Politics: Texas was a part of Super Tuesday. Plus the activity of candidates for Mayor increased as Mayor Oscar Leeser is ineligible to run for re-election.

QUARTERLY ISSUES REPORT, JANUARY-MARCH, 2024

Show # 2024-01

Date aired: Jan.7, 2024 Time Aired: 6:00 a.m.

Steve Elek, Senior Automotive Data Analyst at Consumer Reports

Mr. Elek shared results of Consumer Reports' newly-released annual car reliability survey, which found that electric vehicle owners continue to report far more problems with their vehicles than owners of conventional cars or hybrids. He said that on average, EVs from the past three model years had 79 percent more problems than cars powered by internal combustion engines. He outlined the most common problems cited by EV owners, and the potential reasons behind this trend.

Gary Taubes, journalist, author of “Rethinking Diabetes: What Science Reveals About Diet, Insulin, and Successful Treatments”

Diabetes affects one out of every nine Americans. Mr. Taubes believes that treatment approaches to diabetes need to change, with renewed focus on diet—particularly, fewer carbohydrates and more fat—over a reliance on insulin. He also criticized the role of the food industry in promoting unhealthy foods and influencing diabetes research. He said that the current diabetes epidemic is driven by overeating and obesity, and that the best way to prevent and treat diabetes is to avoid the poison, not take the antidote.

Harvey Miller, PhD, Professor of Geography at Ohio State University

Prof. Miller led a recent study that examined the circumstances behind who is found at fault when cars hit pedestrians in an urban area. He found that pedestrians were more likely to be blamed when they were crossing busy highways where crosswalks were few and far between. In congested downtown areas, where there were more marked intersections with pedestrian crossings, drivers were more likely to be found at fault. He believes that street and highway designs should be re-imagined, to put a greater emphasis pedestrian safety.

Marilyn Horta, PhD, Research Scientist in the Social-Cognitive and Affective Development Lab in the Department of Psychology at the University of Florida

Each year, older adults lose more than $28 billion to financial scams targeting the elderly. Nearly three-quarters of that money is stolen by people the elderly adult knows – people they trust. Prof. Horta shared results of her study that found that older adults have a harder time overcoming their first impressions of people's trustworthiness when that trust is violated, potentially leaving them more open to deception and scams. She offered suggestions for seniors to recognize changes in behavior in relatives or friends who may not have their best interests at heart.

Sanja Jelic, MD, critical care medicine specialist and sleep researcher at Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons

Obstructive sleep apnea affects about 25% of adults, and it often goes untreated. Dr. Jelic discussed the condition and the most common treatment, CPAP machines. She has led several studies that have determined that, contrary to long-held medical beliefs, the machines do not lower a patient’s risk of heart disease, which is about two to three times higher than average. She said obesity is by far the biggest risk factor for sleep apnea. She noted that a recent study said the worldwide estimate of those with sleep apnea totals roughly 1 billion, compared to 1.2 billion with high blood pressure.

Pam Mueller, graduate student, Department of Psychology, Princeton University

Laptops, tablets and other electronic devices are commonplace in today’s classrooms. But Ms. Mueller co-authored a study that found that taking notes by typing, rather than writing, interferes with students’ ability to process and remember information. Her research indicated that students who take notes with pen and paper recall more material and perform significantly better in class.
