Service: PBS
Format: Interview/Discussion/Review
Segment Length: 00:00:00

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

The 1950s could be considered the last days of innocence. While Elvis gyrated to "Jailhouse Rock," Pat Boone mused about "Love Letters In The Sand." Pop music, short for "popular," was just that: music enjoyed by mom, dad and kids alike. The PBS concert special "The Magic Moments: The Best Of '50s Pop," taped at the Trump Taj Majal in Atlantic city on April 21, 2004, celebrates that era with many stars of the '50s singing their biggest hits.

The 1950s could be considered the last days of innocence. While Elvis gyrated to "Jailhouse Rock," Pat Boone mused about "Love Letters In The Sand." Pop music, short for "popular," was just that: music enjoyed by mom, dad and kids alike. The PBS concert special "The Magic Moments: The Best Of '50s Pop," taped at the Trump Taj Majal in Atlantic city on April 21, 2004, celebrates that era with many stars of the '50s singing their biggest hits.

"Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" explores the critical role that Miami played in the evolution of one of the most significant cultural figures of our time: Muhammad Ali (n? Cassius Clay). The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

For thirteen years, as baritone singer and resident comedian for the award-winning Gaither Vocal Band, Mark Lowry poked good-natured fun at Bill Gaither. No aspect of Bill's life was off limits, from his "southern gospel helmet hair" to his age to his perpetual video-taping of Homecoming videos. These comedy routines have become so in-demand, that for the first time, many of those special moments have been compiled in The Best of Mark Lowry and Bill Gaither. The Best of Mark Lowry and Bill Gaither is not without its serious moments. He may be out world-class comedian, but Mark demonstrates on his self-penned classic, "Mary, Did You Know?" why Bill Gaither chose him for his superb baritone singing voice first. Bill even dug into the Gospel Jubilee vault for a seldom-seen vintage clip of a very young Mark Lowry singing a Bill Gaither-penned solo.

Bill Gaither salutes one of the legendary gospel quartets and its beloved frontmen, George Younce and the late Glen Payne, in A Tribute to The Cathedrals. The tribute showcases memorable performances of the Cathedrals from 12 years of Gaither Homecoming videos as well as vintage clips from their 50 years together. The musical performances are interspersed with reminiscences between Bill Gaither and Cathedral co-founder and bass singer, George Younce, about the remarkable history of the famed quartet. "The Cathedrals have been winning the hearts of music lovers for decades," stressed host Bill Gaither. "They have given us some incredible memories and a whole lot of laughs." The Cathedrals scored many firsts for gospel music: the first gospel group to appear on the Today Show, the first to perform and record in the Holy Land, and to record an album with strings. Before the Cathedrals retired in 1999 and Payne died in 2000, they garnered a dozen Gospel Music Association Dove Awards, almost 40 Singing News Fan Awards and 11 Grammy nominations.

For more than 50 years, as lead singer for both the Statesmen and the Imperials, Jake Hess' was the voice that everyone revered, admired and emulated, including Elvis Presley, who listed Jake as his favorite singer. Bigger than life...seemingly indestructible...Jake's contagious spirit was adored by young and old alike, making him one of the most beloved people in gospel music. A Tribute to Jake Hess is a fitting memorial to Jake, who died this year, through memorable performances from the Gaither Homecoming series of videos, which contribute to the already rich memories, gracious spirit and eternal perspective he left us by way of his golden voice. The musical highlights of A Tribute to Jake Hess are punctuated by special remembrances by Jake's close friend of many years, Bill Gaither, which adds yet another element of poignancy to this warm, memorable tribute.

In this special edition of "From the Top at Carnegie Hall," we learn that no matter how far from home we are, we always have a home in the things we love. Seventeen-year-old pianist Ronald Joseph grew up outside of New Orleans but temporarily relocated to New York in the wake of Hurricane Katrina to study at Juilliard. Thirteen-year-old Nikki Yanofsky from Hampstead, Quebec sings "Old McDonald Had a Farm," scat-style. And host Christopher O'Riley accompanies 17-year-old violinist Allyson Tomsy as she performs a Gershwin piece.

In this special edition of "From the Top at Carnegie Hall," we learn that no matter how far from home we are, we always have a home in the things we love. Seventeen-year-old pianist Ronald Joseph grew up outside of New Orleans but temporarily relocated to New York in the wake of Hurricane Katrina to study at Juilliard. Thirteen-year-old Nikki Yanofsky from Hampstead, Quebec sings "Old McDonald Had a Farm," scat-style. And host Christopher O'Riley accompanies 17-year-old violinist Allyson Tomsy as she performs a Gershwin piece.

The 1950s could be considered the last days of innocence. While Elvis gyrated to "Jailhouse Rock," Pat Boone mused about "Love Letters In The Sand." Pop music, short for "popular," was just that: music enjoyed by mom, dad and kids alike. The PBS concert special "The Magic Moments: The Best Of '50s Pop," taped at the Trump Taj Majal in Atlantic city on April 21, 2004, celebrates that era with many stars of the '50s singing their biggest hits.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali

Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

JAIL TALK profiles a group of inmates at the Davidson County Jail in Nashville, Tenn. striving to break the cycle of abuse and addiction. Involved from the moment of an arrest, community volunteers work closely with the jail's Project Return staff to successfully reintegrate ex-offenders into the community. In evocative and candid sessions with counselors and fellow prisoners, inmates grapple with the reasons behind their recidivism. The encouraging results of these programs and collaborations show promise and could benefit the United States, a nation in which one in every five people serves time behind bars.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic.

Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president -- Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority -- health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Prague's Old Jewish Cemetery, a place of haunting beauty and mystery, has endured wars and pogroms, floods and fires, assimilation and an urban clearing project that destroyed most of the ancient Jewish Quarter it once served. Miraculously, it even survived the Nazi occupation and 40 years of communist neglect. "House of Life" tells the story of the vibrant Prague Jewish community of the past and of today's small Jewish community for whom the cemetery still serves as a spiritual center. The film features the curators, historians, rabbis, guides and conservationists who are all devoted to the preservation of this unforgettable place. Claire Bloom narrates.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The most complex marine species on the planet, our counterparts in the sea, is the orca, the ruler of the ocean. Orcas, also called killer whales, are the most widely distributed marine mammal in the world -- their realm extends from the Arctic to the Antarctic. They number fewer than 100,000 worldwide, and learning more about them is a global endeavor for Jean-Michel Cousteau and his team of explorers, who travel to both the Northern and Southern hemispheres as they seek out killer whales in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Cousteau and the team discover that people and orcas share surprising similarities, even similar needs, and they relate their findings to the captivity and release of Keiko, from "Free Willy" fame, who captured the world's imagination and whose survival depended on pioneering efforts to reintroduce Keiko into the wild. The team also learns how some of the threats to killer whales now intersect with human lives. Intriguing detours in the expedition arise, leading to critical examinations of our environment, of the food on our dinner tables, even of our own health. Part 1 of 2.

The president searches for the right tone on Iran, the Supreme Court weighs in on voting rights and student rights, and the gubernatorial mystery in South Carolina, tonight on "Washington Week." With Iran still in chaos, walking the U.S. policy tightrope. President Barack Obama said, "No iron fist is strong enough to shut off the world from bearing witness to peaceful protests of justice." But how does the president scold Iran's leadership while keeping the door open to nuclear negotiation? From climate change to health care - how the president is getting his message across. At the Supreme Court, two critical decisions on voting rights and on students rights. While a three-ring circus erupts in South Carolina. Gov. Mark Sanford said, "And so the bottom line is this: I've been unfaithful to my wife." State Rep. Todd Rutherford said, "I'm stunned. This is not what I expected." The dramatic fall of a rising star. Covering the week, David Sanger of the "New York Times," John Dickerson of "Slate" Magazine and CBS News, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

How did five female Army support soldiers -- mechanics, supply clerks and engineers -- end up fighting alongside the Marines in some of the bloodiest counterinsurgency battles of the Iraq War? Directors Meg McLagan and Daria Sommers give viewers an intimate look at war through the eyes of the first women in U.S. history sent into direct ground combat, despite a policy that bans them from doing so. Through harrowing personal stories, these women candidly share their experiences in Iraq as well as experiences from their lives back home to form a portrait of the emotional and psychological effects of war.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The push for consensus on health care reform. Most people agree the system isn't working, so why the resistance to change? How will Iran's brutal crackdown on the country's opposition affect future relations with the U.S. and the rest of the world? With protests dwindling, has the government successfully crushed its opponents? Governor Mark Sanford joins the ranks of high-profile politicians admitting infidelity. It took Michael Jackson's death to push Sanford's story off the front page. The White House pushes for passage of an energy bill; reporters seem more adversarial at the president's news conference.

The most complex marine species on the planet, our counterparts in the sea, is the orca, the ruler of the ocean. Orcas, also called killer whales, are the most widely distributed marine mammal in the world -- their realm extends from the Arctic to the Antarctic. They number fewer than 100,000 worldwide, and learning more about them is a global endeavor for Jean-Michel Cousteau and his team of explorers, who travel to both the Northern and Southern hemispheres as they seek out killer whales in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Cousteau and the team discover that people and orcas share surprising similarities, even similar needs, and they relate their findings to the captivity and release of Keiko, from "Free Willy" fame, who captured the world's imagination and whose survival depended on pioneering efforts to reintroduce Keiko into the wild. The team also learns how some of the threats to killer whales now intersect with human lives. Intriguing detours in the expedition arise, leading to critical examinations of our environment, of the food on our dinner tables, even of our own health. Part 1 of 2.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The president searches for the right tone on Iran, the Supreme Court weighs in on voting rights and student rights, and the gubernatorial mystery in South Carolina, tonight on "Washington Week." With Iran still in chaos, walking the U.S. policy tightrope. President Barack Obama said, "No iron fist is strong enough to shut off the world from bearing witness to peaceful protests of justice." But how does the president scold Iran's leadership while keeping the door open to nuclear negotiation? From climate change to health care - how the president is getting his message across. At the Supreme Court, two critical decisions on voting rights and on students rights. While a three-ring circus erupts in South Carolina. Gov. Mark Sanford said, "And so the bottom line is this: I've been unfaithful to my wife." State Rep. Todd Rutherford said, "I'm stunned. This is not what I expected." The dramatic fall of a rising star. Covering the week, David Sanger of the "New York Times," John Dickerson of "Slate" Magazine and CBS News, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

Germany: "Swiss" Children, 60 Years Later - Switzerland is a special place for German Edith Lang. Here, she and many other children came to recuperate after the end of World War 2. Edith Lang visits her foster family to his day. On the 60th anniversary of the Federal Republic, she remembers their generous help. Austria: Religious Fanatics in Tyrol: "Abendland in Christenhand" ("The West is Christian") is the slogan the FPÖ, the Austrian Freedom Party, is using for the European elections. But many Austrians don't find the slogan Christian at all, and are distancing themselves from the mayhem surrounding it. The Kitzbuhel tourism board is alarmed too. They've invested a lot of money in advertising to Islamic countries, and the tourists feel the placards are insulting. The city council finds itself in the hot seat. The Netherlands: Pensions put to the Test: Hundreds of thousands of Dutch are fearing for their pensions. In The Netherlands, the state pays a base pension, which is added to by pension investments, which the employees contributed during their working years. But as many as 600 pension funds are now running out of money. The financial crisis has meant that the kitty out of which the pensions are paid has shrunk by about 40 billion euros. So the benefits are getting smaller, the contributions are being sharply increased, and the government wants to raise the retirement age to 67. Hungary: Children under Pressure: No money, no hope. Not only is Hungary on the brink of state bankruptcy, but its private citizens are seriously in debt as well. The situation for children from low-income families is even worse. Half a million children in Hungary live below the poverty line. The financial crisis has prompted the government to slash funding for programs dedicated to ending child poverty. Some families see no other solution but to send their sons and daughters into children's homes. Turkey: Meerschaum Excavation Going up in Smoke: The Turkish region around Eskisehir is the center of meerschaum carving. For centuries the white clay-like mineral has been the favored material of passionate pipe smokers for making meerschaum pipes. But fewer and fewer fellows these days are willing to dig out the tunnels and the caves in order to mine the material. The work is tiring and dangerous. And for young villagers looking for work, the factories in the cities are a lot more appealing than the damp dark mines.

In the barren landscape of remote western Tibet lie the ruins of a mysterious kingdom called Guge. A kingdom whose capital was 3,600 meters high on the Tibetan plateau. A kingdom with archaeological treasures that compare with Italy's Pompeii. This was a kingdom of fabulous wealth and great religious significance. It controlled the trade in gold, silk and spices between India and China and for two centuries it was the cradle of Himalayan Buddhism. Yet this spiritual and commercial hub, which prospered for seven centuries, vanished without a trace in 1630. Until now the mystery of what was the Tibetan kingdom of Guge has remained unresolved. The Italian archaeologist Giuseppe Tucci was the first to investigate the existence of the Guge kingdom in the early 1930's. Since then, the extraordinary altitude, hostile terrain and political upheaval have made sure that only a select few could travel to the region to make serious study. Now, two filmmakers journey to the extreme corner of West Tibet with two of the world's experts, Tibetan historian Tsering Gyalpo and American archaeologist John Bellezza. Their aim is to unravel the mystery of Guge.

The Farnsworth House near Chicago is an icon of 20th-century modernist domestic architecture. The one-story masterpiece of steel and glass, with its simple geometric designs and transparent walls, reflects architect Ludwig Mies van der Rohe's minimalist expression of structure and space. SAVED FROM THE WRECKING BALL tells the compelling story of van der Rohe's vision and his often tempestuous relationship with his client, D. Edith Farnsworth - a relationship filled with romantic intrigue and contentious legal battles. The film follows the saga of the Farnsworth House, from its construction in 1951 through its stewardship under subsequent owners to the efforts to preserve the building within its original context.

SS UNITED STATES: LADY IN WAITING details the triumphant and poignant saga of the nation's flagship, the ocean liner SS United States. The documentary, shot in high-definition, follows the journey of America's only superliner, from a mid-20th century maritime marvel to a largely forgotten relic. Previously unseen footage and compelling interviews tell the fascinating story of the SS United States' construction, record-breaking maiden voyage in 1952, its heyday during the 1950s and '60s, its retirement in 1969 and its gradual decline. Cameras climb aboard to reveal the SS United States, now moored at a pier in Philadelphia, to reveal its top-secret design and technological capabilities.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

"Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" explores the critical role that Miami played in the evolution of one of the most significant cultural figures of our time: Muhammad Ali (n? Cassius Clay). The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The president searches for the right tone on Iran, the Supreme Court weighs in on voting rights and student rights, and the gubernatorial mystery in South Carolina, tonight on "Washington Week." With Iran still in chaos, walking the U.S. policy tightrope. President Barack Obama said, "No iron fist is strong enough to shut off the world from bearing witness to peaceful protests of justice." But how does the president scold Iran's leadership while keeping the door open to nuclear negotiation? From climate change to health care - how the president is getting his message across. At the Supreme Court, two critical decisions on voting rights and on students rights. While a three-ring circus erupts in South Carolina. Gov. Mark Sanford said, "And so the bottom line is this: I've been unfaithful to my wife." State Rep. Todd Rutherford said, "I'm stunned. This is not what I expected." The dramatic fall of a rising star. Covering the week, David Sanger of the "New York Times," John Dickerson of "Slate" Magazine and CBS News, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

ARABIAN HORSE: THE ANCIENT BREED. One of the earth's most majestic animals Arabians are the oldest purebred horse in existence today, renowned for their versatility as show, endurance, work and family horses. Stunning footage of Arabians and historical narrative helps trace the roots of the breed from its origins on the deserts of Africa to its importation to the United States in the 20th century. Arabians are seen competing in some of the most prestigious equestrian events in the country, including an Arabian horse show in Louisville, Ky. and the grueling Tevis Cup competition in Nevada. A trip to a cattle ranch in Nebraska and to a theatrical adaptation of The Arabian Nights illuminates the loyal and even-tempered nature of the Arabian breed.

In the summer of 2003, the Vagabond, a small sailboat with a three person French crew, set off on an expedition with the goal of crossing the Northwest Passage between the Pacific and the Atlantic via the Arctic Ocean. ARCTIC BOUND follows the adventurers over the course of a year as they follow in the steps of Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen who made the voyage in 1906. It is a perilous journey since global warming is causing rapid changes in the Arctic and the ice pack is in constant flux. In addition to documenting the harsh polar conditions that are the backdrop of the adventure, the stunning photography of ARCTIC BOUND reveals the stark beauty of that landscape and the creatures that live there, including polar bears, musk-oxen and beluga whales. Ultimately, the Vagabond arrives in Baffins Bay, and its crew becomes the first to circumnavigate the Arctic Circle in two summers and without an ice breaker.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

"Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" explores the critical role that Miami played in the evolution of one of the most significant cultural figures of our time: Muhammad Ali (n? Cassius Clay). The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Neuroscientists are studying the "science of consciousness" to discover the networks where conscious thoughts and sensations originate. This program introduces Tony Grobmeier, who was born without a corpus callosum, the structure that connects the two interdependent halves of our brains: language and linear thinking on the left, emotion and visual perception on the right. Neuroscientists are trying to understand the ways this relatively rare congenital condition affects the brain. They've observed that people without a corpus callosum have brains wired in completely unique ways. When it comes to human nature, what does "normal" mean, anyway? This is just one of the provocative questions posed in this segment. Another segment takes viewers to the FlyLab at Caltech. Here, Michael Dickinson and his graduate students are researching the brain and its complex collection of neurons with help from Drosophila Melanogaster - a.k.a. the fruit fly. What they learn from this extraordinarily robust and dexterous biological flying machine might one day be used to build better robots and other machines, including safer airplanes. Though their brains are the size of a poppy seed with 300,000 times less gray matter than ours, flies squeeze a lot more performance out of each neuron than humans do. Always reverent of their subject matter, but with charm and humor to spare, the young researchers work with the lab's "Fly-o-rama" - a virtual reality environment where flies play for hours - and other devices, giving viewers a new respect for the humble fly and a new way of thinking about our brains. Moral, social and economic decisions all happen at the level of the individual neuron, the brain's most basic unit. This segment goes inside the human brain, revealing what is essentially a huge number-cruncher that assigns a numeric value to everything from a loaf of bread to our most deeply held values. Do the emotional parts of the brain do battle with areas that control reason? How do these conflicts result in feelings and decisions? To answer these questions, scientists are attempting to catch the brain in the act of decision making using an fMRI, a heavy-duty but non-evasive method of brain scanning that is revolutionizing our understanding of the science of decision making. The program illustrates conflicts and ethical dilemmas involved in decision making by proposing theoretical scenarios. One example uses a train racing toward a group of track workers to ask whether people would make the decision to sacrifice one life in order to save four others. The researchers aren't the only interesting characters in this program. This segment also features a fascinating cast of robots, including NASA veterans like the aging but able Mars Exploration Rover and youngsters like the tool-wielding A.T.H.L.E.T.E. (All Terrain Hex-Limbed Extra-Terrestrial Explorer). Can things we're learning about the brain be applied to robots? Will it ever be possible to create a machine that can see, learn and make decisions? Some scientists predict robots will ultimately surpass humans in intelligence, leading to prickly ethical conundrums.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president -- Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority -- health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

This documentary uses testimonies from those men who bravely fought in the Battle of Britain from both sides of the war. It dramatically covers not only the emotional scars that these men carry but also their physical scars and the scars that countries and families bear in the loss of so many lives. The veterans revisit the scenes of their wartime exploits and reflect on what a close run thing was the Battle of Britain. This moving film was produced in 1985 but has never been seen in the United States. Produced, directed and narrated by John Willis for Yorkshire Television.

HORSES OF GETTYSBURG celebrates the forgotten equine heroes of the Civil War. Narrated by Ronald F. Maxwell, director of the epic films Gettysburg and Gods and Generals, the documentary vividly captures the relationship forged between Union and Confederate soldiers and their horses. Filmed in High Definition, HORSES OF GETTYSBURG uses scenes of charging horses, period illustrations and photographs, and battlefield panoramas to tell the story of the 72,000 military horses and supply-carrying mules employed by both the North and South during the Battle of Gettysburg in July 1863 and throughout the Civil War.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

The president searches for the right tone on Iran, the Supreme Court weighs in on voting rights and student rights, and the gubernatorial mystery in South Carolina, tonight on "Washington Week." With Iran still in chaos, walking the U.S. policy tightrope. President Barack Obama said, "No iron fist is strong enough to shut off the world from bearing witness to peaceful protests of justice." But how does the president scold Iran's leadership while keeping the door open to nuclear negotiation? From climate change to health care - how the president is getting his message across. At the Supreme Court, two critical decisions on voting rights and on students rights. While a three-ring circus erupts in South Carolina. Gov. Mark Sanford said, "And so the bottom line is this: I've been unfaithful to my wife." State Rep. Todd Rutherford said, "I'm stunned. This is not what I expected." The dramatic fall of a rising star. Covering the week, David Sanger of the "New York Times," John Dickerson of "Slate" Magazine and CBS News, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

What were the Japanese Kamikazes thinking just before crashing into their targets? When Risa Morimoto discovered that her beloved uncle trained as a Kamikaze pilot in his youth, she wondered the same thing. Through rare interviews with surviving Kamikaze pilots, Morimoto retraces their journeys from teenagers to doomed pilots and reveals a complex history of brutal training and ambivalent sacrifice.
