Fans of health care overhaul in history. We'll tell you how it happened, what's in it, and why the fight's still not over, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Today, after almost a century of trying, today, after over a year of debate, today, after all the votes have been tallied, health insurance reform becomes law in the United States of America." It was a fight to the finish complete with sore losers and astonished winners. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Hell no, you can't." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "We will work in every way to repeal this legislation and start over." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I believe that this is what we came here to do." Changes to Medicare, extended coverage for young adults and the uninsured and for prescription drugs, plus a nearly billion dollar price tag. Also this week, big developments with old allies and former enemies, as tensions build between the U.S. and Israel over a settlement freeze. Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "It exposes daylight between Israel and the United States that others in the region hope to exploit." And the U.S. agrees to a nuclear deal with Russia. Covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Paul Richter of the Los Angeles Times.

Segment Length: 00:00:00

Fans of health care overhaul in history. We'll tell you how it happened, what's in it, and why the fight's still not over, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Today, after almost a century of trying, today, after over a year of debate, today, after all the votes have been tallied, health insurance reform becomes law in the United States of America." It was a fight to the finish complete with sore losers and astonished winners. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, " Hell no, you can't." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "We will work in every way to repeal this legislation and start over." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I believe that this is what we came here to do." Changes to Medicare, extended coverage for young adults and the uninsured and for prescription drugs, plus a nearly billion dollar price tag. Also this week, big developments with old allies and former enemies, as tensions build between the U.S. and Israel over a settlement freeze. Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "It exposes daylight between Israel and the United States that others in the region hope to exploit." And the U.S. agrees to a nuclear deal with Russia. Covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Paul Richter of the Los Angeles Times.

Length: 60 minutes
Airdate: 2/22/2010 9:00:00 PM
O.B. Date: 10/27/1993 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

Of all the 19th-century pioneer stories, none exerts so powerful a hold on the American imagination as the tale of the Donner Party in the high Sierra Nevadas in the winter of 1846. That June, along with thousands of others, George and Jacob Donner and James Frazier Reed led their families west out of Springfield, Illinois, and headed for the "Promised Land" in California, two thousand miles away. Theirs was a prosperous caravan that would swell to more than 87 men, women and children. They packed huge wagons (one was two stories high), took food, hired servants and even sewed money between the covers of a quilt. When family leaders made the fateful decision to take an untried short cut to beat the coming winter, only half of them would come out alive. What began as a trek to the western paradise became a terrifying tale of misery, death, madness and cannibalism. But there was also extraordinary bravery, as survivors made their way to California, after enduring the worst winter ever recorded in the high Sierras. Through family journals, newspaper accounts and interviews with historians and descendants of the party, the film recreates the Donner Party's now legendary journey.

You see the world differently when you work underground. That made Butte, Montana different right from the start as immigrants came from around the world to work the mines. But what they blasted out of the 10,000 miles of tunnels was more than just copper. It was the rise of unions and multinational corporations, and the seeds of the current debate over the environment.

In the spring of 1918, as the nation mobilized for war, Private Albert Gitchell reported to an Army hospital in Kansas. He was diagnosed with the flu, a disease doctors knew little about. Before the year was out, America would be ravaged by a flu epidemic that killed 675,000 -- more than those killed in all the wars of this century combined -- before disappearing as mysteriously as it began. "The American Experience" examines the social ramifications of the disease and how it affected those who lived through it.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Happy New Year, but before we look ahead, we take a look back, tonight on Washington Week. A thwarted attempt to blow a plane from the sky revives old fears about terrorism and the tradeoffs we make to feel safe. President Barack Obama said, "This was a serious reminder of the dangers that we face and the nature of those who threaten our homeland." Rep. Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) said, "The threat to the United States is real. I think this administration has downplayed it. They need to recognize it." At the end of the year and the end of a decade, a new scare. Michael Duffy of Time Magazine provides context. Then, a roundtable with three Washington Week panelists whose books tell us much about the year just passed and the year to come. Dan Balz, author of "The Battle for America 2008," the story of the election. Joan Biskupic, author of "American Original," a biography of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. And David Sanger, author of "The Inheritance," a look at the challenges of our foreign policy.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

You see the world differently when you work underground. That made Butte, Montana different right from the start as immigrants came from around the world to work the mines. But what they blasted out of the 10,000 miles of tunnels was more than just copper. It was the rise of unions and multinational corporations, and the seeds of the current debate over the environment.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Yousef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Buying the Bench?: A Bill Moyers essay. Jeffrey Toobin: Legal analyst and journalist Jeffrey Toobin talks about the relationship between big money and judicial elections today. Justice for Sale: Bill Moyers Journal takes a hard look at how campaign cash in judicial races may sway America's courts. The Journal revisits the 1999 FRONTLINE special "Justice for Sale" which looked at the growing concern -- even among Supreme Court justices themselves -- that campaign contributions may be corrupting the judicial process.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Buying the Bench?: A Bill Moyers essay. Jeffrey Toobin: Legal analyst and journalist Jeffrey Toobin talks about the relationship between big money and judicial elections today. Justice for Sale: Bill Moyers Journal takes a hard look at how campaign cash in judicial races may sway America's courts. The Journal revisits the 1999 FRONTLINE special "Justice for Sale" which looked at the growing concern -- even among Supreme Court justices themselves -- that campaign contributions may be corrupting the judicial process.

The surprising, delightful, entertaining and inspiring members of the Young@Heart Chorus, a New England senior citizens chorus, have charmed audiences worldwide with their renditions of songs by everyone from the Clash to Coldplay. As Stephen Walker's critically acclaimed documentary begins, the retirees, led by their demanding musical director, are rehearsing their new show, struggling with Sonic Youth's dissonant rock anthem "Schizophrenia" and giving new meaning to James Brown's "I Feel Good." What ultimately emerges is a funny and unexpectedly moving testament to friendship, creative inspiration and expectations defied.

Happy New Year, but before we look ahead, we take a look back, tonight on Washington Week. A thwarted attempt to blow a plane from the sky revives old fears about terrorism and the tradeoffs we make to feel safe. President Barack Obama said, "This was a serious reminder of the dangers that we face and the nature of those who threaten our homeland." Rep. Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) said, "The threat to the United States is real. I think this administration has downplayed it. They need to recognize it." At the end of the year and the end of a decade, a new scare. Michael Duffy of Time Magazine provides context. Then, a roundtable with three Washington Week panelists whose books tell us much about the year just passed and the year to come. Dan Balz, author of "The Battle for America 2008," the story of the election. Joan Biskupic, author of "American Original," a biography of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. And David Sanger, author of "The Inheritance," a look at the challenges of our foreign policy.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Chaos on the Potomac, the Supreme Court guts campaign finance limits. Massachusetts elects a Republican senator, health care reform's on life support, plus we bring you an eye witness report on Haiti, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Let the American people decide how much money is enough. Sunshine really does work if you allow it to." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "The Roberts court has turned back the clock on our democracy by over a century." In one major decision the Supreme Court rolls back decades of campaign finance limits. While political upheaval of another kind rocks the capital after Massachusetts voters picked Republican Scott Brown. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I think they sent a very, very powerful message that business as usual is not going to be the way we do it." How much will the 41st Republican senator weaken the president's agenda? President Barack Obama said, "It's just nice being out of Washington. Let me say. There're some nice people in Washington, but they can drive you crazy." And amid aftershocks and confusion, the world copes with the devastation in Haiti. Covering the week, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Chaos on the Potomac, the Supreme Court guts campaign finance limits. Massachusetts elects a Republican senator, health care reform's on life support, plus we bring you an eye witness report on Haiti, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Let the American people decide how much money is enough. Sunshine really does work if you allow it to." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "The Roberts court has turned back the clock on our democracy by over a century." In one major decision the Supreme Court rolls back decades of campaign finance limits. While political upheaval of another kind rocks the capital after Massachusetts voters picked Republican Scott Brown. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I think they sent a very, very powerful message that business as usual is not going to be the way we do it." How much will the 41st Republican senator weaken the president's agenda? President Barack Obama said, "It's just nice being out of Washington. Let me say. There're some nice people in Washington, but they can drive you crazy." And amid aftershocks and confusion, the world copes with the devastation in Haiti. Covering the week, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Of all the 19th-century pioneer stories, none exerts so powerful a hold on the American imagination as the tale of the Donner Party in the high Sierra Nevadas in the winter of 1846. That June, along with thousands of others, George and Jacob Donner and James Frazier Reed led their families west out of Springfield, Illinois, and headed for the "Promised Land" in California, two thousand miles away. Theirs was a prosperous caravan that would swell to more than 87 men, women and children. They packed huge wagons (one was two stories high), took food, hired servants and even sewed money between the covers of a quilt. When family leaders made the fateful decision to take an untried short cut to beat the coming winter, only half of them would come out alive. What began as a trek to the western paradise became a terrifying tale of misery, death, madness and cannibalism. But there was also extraordinary bravery, as survivors made their way to California, after enduring the worst winter ever recorded in the high Sierras. Through family journals, newspaper accounts and interviews with historians and descendants of the party, the film recreates the Donner Party's now legendary journey.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy."

Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Is Washington broken? And if it is, who's supposed to fix it? How an Indiana senator shook up the capital, what it means for Democrats, Republicans, and for you, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Evan Bayh (D-IN) said, "We've got a lot of good people in Congress, but they're trapped in a dysfunctional system." If Congress is indeed dysfunctional, is the answer to flee? Rep. Lincoln Diaz-Balart (R-FL) said, "I will not seek a 10th term in the United States Congress this November." Rep. Patrick Kennedy (D-RI) said, "My life has taken a new direction and I will not be a candidate for reelection this year." With the White House agenda on the ropes, the President searches for the bright side. Pres. Barack Obama said, "One year later, it is largely thanks to the Recovery Act that a second depression is no longer a possibility." But has the opposition finally found its voice? Mitt Romney said, "The gold medal that was won last night by American Lindsey Vonn has been stripped. Yes, it was determined that President Obama has been going downhill faster than she has." (Laughter.) As Democrats and Republicans retreat to their corners, is the middle ground forever a lost? Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

AFL-CIO's Richard Trumka: AFL-CIO president Richard Trumka joins Bill Moyers on the JOURNAL to talk about why he thinks labor remains relevant, how labor has fared thus far under the Obama presidency, and the role he envisions for unions in the future. Campaign Finance Laws by State: Twenty-four states currently have laws which restrict or ban corporate spending in elections. Below, you will find a list of state statutes that may be affected by Citizens United v. F.E.C. Remembering Howard Zinn: Bill Moyers remembers Howard Zinn. The Court and Campaign Finance: The JOURNAL explores what the Supreme Court's decision means for campaign finance reform and the future of our democracy with legal experts Monica Youn, of the Brennan Center for Law and Justice at NYU School of Law and Zephyr Teachout, of Fordham University's School of Law.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

Democrats and Republicans jockey for position in Washington, while Americans at home grow increasingly disenchanted with the spectacle. We look at the fallout, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I understand that McConnell and Reid are out doing snow angels on the South Lawn together." Well, not exactly. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Why are we going to talk about a bill that can't pass?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "What we need to do is start over." Bipartisanship remains elusive on the issues of the day, including how to fix health care and how to create jobs. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We feel that the American people need a message. The message that they need is that we're doing something about jobs." But as Americans clearly lose patience with their government, some are lining up to capitalize on that discontent. Former Gov. Sarah Palin said, "How's that hopey, changey stuff working out for you?" While discontent of another type roils Iran. We look at the week with the reporters covering the stories: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

You see the world differently when you work underground. That made Butte, Montana different right from the start as immigrants came from around the world to work the mines. But what they blasted out of the 10,000 miles of tunnels was more than just copper. It was the rise of unions and multinational corporations, and the seeds of the current debate over the environment.

Most people best know the chicken from their dinner plates -- whether as thigh, wing or drumstick. Consumers barely pause a moment to consider the bird's many virtues. Filmmaker Mark Lewis ("Cane Toads: An Unnatural History" and "Rat") expands the frontiers of popular awareness and delightfully reveals that this small, common and seemingly simple animal is as complex and grand as any of Earth's creatures.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

Chaos on the Potomac, the Supreme Court guts campaign finance limits. Massachusetts elects a Republican senator, health care reform's on life support, plus we bring you an eye witness report on Haiti, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Let the American people decide how much money is enough. Sunshine really does work if you allow it to." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "The Roberts court has turned back the clock on our democracy by over a century." In one major decision the Supreme Court rolls back decades of campaign finance limits. While political upheaval of another kind rocks the capital after Massachusetts voters picked Republican Scott Brown. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I think they sent a very, very powerful message that business as usual is not going to be the way we do it." How much will the 41st Republican senator weaken the president's agenda? President Barack Obama said, "It's just nice being out of Washington. Let me say. There're some nice people in Washington, but they can drive you crazy." And amid aftershocks and confusion, the world copes with the devastation in Haiti. Covering the week, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat,"

Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Segment Length: 02:56:46

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NINOS EN SU CASA. Both shows are designed for parents or anyone else who takes care of young kids: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The shows cover subjects such as: tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, speech and language delays. These series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help kids be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

In the spring of 1918, as the nation mobilized for war, Private Albert Gitchell reported to an Army hospital in Kansas. He was diagnosed with the flu, a disease doctors knew little about. Before the year was out, America would be ravaged by a flu epidemic that killed 675,000 -- more than those killed in all the wars of this century combined -- before disappearing as mysteriously as it began. "The American Experience" examines the social ramifications of the disease and how it affected those who lived through it.

English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NINOS EN SU CASA. Both shows are designed for parents or anyone else who takes care of young kids: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The shows cover subjects such as: tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, speech and language delays. These series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help kids be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Chaos on the Potomac, the Supreme Court guts campaign finance limits. Massachusetts elects a Republican senator, health care reform's on life support, plus we bring you an eye witness report on Haiti, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Let the American people decide how much money is enough. Sunshine really does work if you allow it to." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "The Roberts court has turned back the clock on our democracy by over a century." In one major decision the Supreme Court rolls back decades of campaign finance limits. While political upheaval of another kind rocks the capital after Massachusetts voters picked Republican Scott Brown. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I think they sent a very, very powerful message that business as usual is not going to be the way we do it." How much will the 41st Republican senator weaken the president's agenda? President Barack Obama said, "It's just nice being out of Washington. Let me say. There're some nice people in Washington, but they can drive you crazy." And amid aftershocks and confusion, the world copes with the devastation in Haiti. Covering the week, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

Democrats and Republicans jockey for position in Washington, while Americans at home grow increasingly disenchanted with the spectacle. We look at the fallout, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I understand that McConnell and Reid are out doing snow angels on the South Lawn together." Well, not exactly. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Why are we going to talk about a bill that can't pass?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "What we need to do is start over." Bipartisanship remains elusive on the issues of the day, including how to fix health care and how to create jobs. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We feel that the American people need a message. The message that they need is that we're doing something about jobs." But as Americans clearly lose patience with their government, some are lining up to capitalize on that discontent. Former Gov. Sarah Palin said, "How's that hopey, changey stuff working out for you?" While discontent of another type roils Iran. We look at the week with the reporters covering the stories: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Fans of health care overhaul in history. We'll tell you how it happened, what's in it, and why the fight's still not over, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Today, after almost a century of trying, today, after over a year of debate, today, after all the votes have been tallied, health insurance reform becomes law in the United States of America." It was a fight to the finish complete with sore losers and astonished winners. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Hell no, you can't." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "We will work in every way to repeal this legislation and start over." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I believe that this is what we came here to do." Changes to Medicare, extended coverage for young adults and the uninsured and for prescription drugs, plus a nearly billion dollar price tag. Also this week, big developments with old allies and former enemies, as tensions build between the U.S. and Israel over a settlement freeze. Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "It exposes daylight between Israel and the United States that others in the region hope to exploit." And the U.S. agrees to a nuclear deal with Russia. Covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Paul Richter of the Los Angeles Times.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

You see the world differently when you work underground. That made Butte, Montana different right from the start as immigrants came from around the world to work the mines. But what they blasted out of the 10,000 miles of tunnels was more than just copper. It was the rise of unions and multinational corporations, and the seeds of the current debate over the environment.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

Buying the Bench?: A Bill Moyers essay. Jeffrey Toobin: Legal analyst and journalist Jeffrey Toobin talks about the relationship between big money and judicial elections today. Justice for Sale: Bill Moyers Journal takes a hard look at how campaign cash in judicial races may sway America's courts. The Journal revisits the 1999 FRONTLINE special "Justice for Sale" which looked at the growing concern -- even among Supreme Court justices themselves -- that campaign contributions may be corrupting the judicial process.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Happy New Year, but before we look ahead, we take a look back, tonight on Washington Week. A thwarted attempt to blow a plane from the sky revives old fears about terrorism and the tradeoffs we make to feel safe. President Barack Obama said, "This was a serious reminder of the dangers that we face and the nature of those who threaten our homeland." Rep. Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) said, "The threat to the United States is real. I think this administration has downplayed it. They need to recognize it." At the end of the year and the end of a decade, a new scare. Michael Duffy of Time Magazine provides context. Then, a roundtable with three Washington Week panelists whose books tell us much about the year just passed and the year to come. Dan Balz, author of "The Battle for America 2008," the story of the election. Joan Biskupic, author of "American Original," a biography of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. And David Sanger, author of "The Inheritance," a look at the challenges of our foreign policy.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

Chaos on the Potomac, the Supreme Court guts campaign finance limits. Massachusetts elects a Republican senator, health care reform's on life support, plus we bring you an eye witness report on Haiti, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Let the American people decide how much money is enough. Sunshine really does work if you allow it to." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "The Roberts court has turned back the clock on our democracy by over a century." In one major decision the Supreme Court rolls back decades of campaign finance limits. While political upheaval of another kind rocks the capital after Massachusetts voters picked Republican Scott Brown. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I think they sent a very, very powerful message that business as usual is not going to be the way we do it." How much will the 41st Republican senator weaken the president's agenda? President Barack Obama said, "It's just nice being out of Washington. Let me say. There're some nice people in Washington, but they can drive you crazy." And amid aftershocks and confusion, the world copes with the devastation in Haiti. Covering the week, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Democrats and Republicans jockey for position in Washington, while Americans at home grow increasingly disenchanted with the spectacle. We look at the fallout, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I understand that McConnell and Reid are out doing snow angels on the South Lawn together." Well, not exactly. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Why are we going to talk about a bill that can't pass?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "What we need to do is start over." Bipartisanship remains elusive on the issues of the day, including how to fix health care and how to create jobs. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We feel that the American people need a message. The message that they need is that we're doing something about jobs." But as Americans clearly lose patience with their government, some are lining up to capitalize on that discontent. Former Gov. Sarah Palin said, "How's that hopey, changey stuff working out for you?" While discontent of another type roils Iran. We look at the week with the reporters covering the stories: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Bipartisanship remains elusive on the issues of the day, including how to fix health care and how to create jobs. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We feel that the American people need a message. The message that they need is that we're doing something about jobs." But as Americans clearly lose patience with their government, some are lining up to capitalize on that discontent. Former Gov. Sarah Palin said, "How's that hopey, changey stuff working out for you?" While discontent of another type roils Iran. We look at the week with the reporters covering the stories: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Democrats and Republicans jockey for position in Washington, while Americans at home grow increasingly disenchanted with the spectacle. We look at the fallout, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I understand that McConnell and Reid are out doing snow angels on the South Lawn together." Well, not exactly. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Why are we going to talk about a bill that can't pass?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "What we need to do is start over." Bipartisanship remains elusive on the issues of the day, including how to fix health care and how to create jobs. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We feel that the American people need a message. Is Washington broken? And if it is, who's supposed to fix it? How an Indiana senator shook up the capital, what it means for Democrats, Republicans, and for you, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Evan Bayh (D-IN) said, "We've got a lot of good people in Congress, but they're trapped in a dysfunctional system." If Congress is indeed dysfunctional, is the answer to flee? Rep. Lincoln Diaz-Balart (R-FL) said, "I will not seek a 10th term in the United States Congress this November." Rep. Patrick Kennedy (D-RI) said, "My life has taken a new direction and I will not be a candidate for reelection this year." With the White House agenda on the ropes, the President searches for the bright side. Pres. Barack Obama said, "One year later, it is largely thanks to the Recovery Act that a second depression is no longer a possibility." But has the opposition finally found its voice? Mitt Romney said, "The gold medal that was won last night by American Lindsey Vonn has been stripped. Yes, it was determined that President Obama has been going downhill faster than she has." (Laughter.) As Democrats and Republicans retreat to their corners, is the middle ground forever a lost? Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen.

Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Fans of health care overhaul in history. We'll tell you how it happened, what's in it, and why the fight's still not over, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Today, after almost a century of trying, today, after over a year of debate, today, after all the votes have been tallied, health insurance reform becomes law in the United States of America." It was a fight to the finish complete with sore losers and astonished winners. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, " Hell no, you can't." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "We will work in every way to repeal this legislation and start over." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I believe that this is what we came here to do." Changes to Medicare, extended coverage for young adults and the uninsured and for prescription drugs, plus a nearly billion dollar price tag. Also this week, big developments with old allies and former enemies, as tensions build between the U.S. and Israel over a settlement freeze. Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "It exposes daylight between Israel and the United States that others in the region hope to exploit." And the U.S. agrees to a nuclear deal with Russia. Covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Paul Richter of the Los Angeles Times.

Fans of health care overhaul in history. We'll tell you how it happened, what's in it, and why the fight's still not over, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Today, after almost a century of trying, today, after over a year of debate, today, after all the votes have been tallied, health insurance reform becomes law in the United States of America." It was a fight to the finish complete with sore losers and astonished winners. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, " Hell no, you can't." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "We will work in every way to repeal this legislation and start over." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I believe that this is what we came here to do." Changes to Medicare, extended coverage for young adults and the uninsured and for prescription drugs, plus a nearly billion dollar price tag. Also this week, big developments with old allies and former enemies, as tensions build between the U.S. and Israel over a settlement freeze. Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "It exposes daylight between Israel and the United States that others in the region hope to exploit." And the U.S. agrees to a nuclear deal with Russia. Covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Paul Richter of the Los Angeles Times.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

Four hundred years ago, a Scottish king ascended the throne of a deeply divided England. Bubonic plague had broken out in the towns and cities. Within two years, political terrorists would be plotting to blow up Parliament. And many of the most fundamental assumptions about spiritual life were being called into question by the movement known as the Reformation. In that time of turmoil, some fifty scholars and clergymen began work on what would become the most influential and awe-inspiring book of English prose ever produced: the King James Bible. Think Tank is joined this week by Adam Nicolson, author of "God's Secretaries: The Making of the King James Bible."

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

Series Title: Amelia Earhart: American Experience
Length: 60 minutes
Airdate: 2/22/2010 9:00:00 PM
O.B. Date: 10/27/1993 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

Happy New Year, but before we look ahead, we take a look back, tonight on Washington Week. A thwarted attempt to blow a plane from the sky revives old fears about terrorism and the tradeoffs we make to feel safe. President Barack Obama said, "This was a serious reminder of the dangers that we face and the nature of those who threaten our homeland." Rep. Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) said, "The threat to the United States is real. I think this administration has downplayed it. They need to recognize it." At the end of the year and the end of a decade, a new scare. Michael Duffy of Time Magazine provides context. Then, a roundtable with three Washington Week panelists whose books tell us much about the year just passed and the year to come. Dan Balz, author of "The Battle for America 2008," the story of the election. Joan Biskupic, author of "American Original," a biography of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. And David Sanger, author of "The Inheritance," a look at the challenges of our foreign policy.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell

(R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Happy New Year, but before we look ahead, we take a look back, tonight on Washington Week. A thwarted attempt to blow a plane from the sky revives old fears about terrorism and the tradeoffs we make to feel safe. President Barack Obama said, "This was a serious reminder of the dangers that we face and the nature of those who threaten our homeland." Rep. Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) said, "The threat to the United States is real. I think this administration has downplayed it. They need to recognize it." At the end of the year and the end of a decade, a new scare. Michael Duffy of Time Magazine provides context. Then, a roundtable with three Washington Week panelists whose books tell us much about the year just passed and the year to come. Dan Balz, author of "The Battle for America 2008," the story of the election. Joan Biskupic, author of "American Original," a biography of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. And David Sanger, author of "The Inheritance," a look at the challenges of our foreign policy.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Segment Length: 00:00:00

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic, and the first to cross the North American continent alone. Her exploits as an aviator, her beauty and intelligence, her independence and charm made her a national heroine. Seemingly invincible, Earhart tirelessly traveled and lectured, a champion of aviation and equal opportunity for women. But her cheering public didn't know the cost of her courage. The record-breaking flights, the aerial exhibitions and races, the interviews to support her favorite causes, the endless speeches and promotional commitments, together with household responsibilities, health problems, and financial worries, combined to push Earhart to the point of exhaustion. In 1937, she set out to accomplish yet another first: to circle the earth along the equator on an east-west flight. Friends warned that her preparations were hurried, even careless. When her plane disappeared without a trace, the "First Lady of the Air" was instantly transformed into an American legend.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NINOS EN SU CASA. Both shows are designed for parents or anyone else who takes care of young kids: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The shows cover subjects such as: tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, speech and language delays. These series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help kids be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.
