On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 18, waging an information war, North Koreans who have escaped the country are smuggling media on USB sticks back to their homeland in hopes of helping others learn about life outside the country. Later, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention director Tom Frieden talks about new data on opioid overdoses. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Under Trump, White House staff shifts to right: Since winning the election six weeks ago, Donald Trump has nominated most of his cabinet and picked top White House staff, all significant players in shaping U.S. policy. He'll also have Republican majorities in both houses of Congress on his side. NewsHour Weekend's Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart to analyze the balance of power in Washington. Heroin deaths exceeded gun homicides in 2015: Last year, more than 30,000 people died from opioid overdoses, which cause almost two-thirds of all overdoses in the U.S., according to data released last week by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Those data also show that last year, heroin deaths went up 20 percent, exceeding gun homicides. Dr. Tom Frieden, director of the CDC, joins Alison Stewart. Defectors lift curtain on North Korea's information blackout: North Korea's totalitarian government exercises tight control of all media consumed within its borders to maintain power over nearly 25 million citizens. But some who have escaped the country are waging an information war, smuggling media on USB sticks in hopes of helping North Koreans learn about life outside the country. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy reports from South Korea.

Explore the life of Finnish-American modernist architectural giant Eero Saarinen (1910-1961), whose visionary buildings include National Historic Landmarks such as St. Louis' iconic Gateway Arch and the General Motors Technical Center in Michigan. Saarinen also designed New York's TWA Flight Center at John F. Kennedy International Airport, Yale University's Ingalls Rink and Morse and Ezra Stiles Colleges, Virginia's Dulles Airport, and modernist pedestal furniture like the Tulip chair. Travel with his son, director of photography Eric Saarinen, as he visits the sites of his father's work on a cathartic journey, shot in 6K with the latest in drone technology that showcases the architect's body of timeless work for the first time. Eero's sudden death at age 51 cut short one of the most influential careers in American architecture. Today, Saarinen's work stands apart and continues to inspire, especially amongst renewed interest in 20th-century architects and artists who exploded the comfortable constraints of the past to create a robust and daring American aesthetic. Produced and Directed by Peter Rosen. One hour.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Michael Chabon blends fact and fiction to create 'a truth': In his new book, "Moonglow: A Novel," Pulitzer Prize-winning author Michael Chabon blurs the line between truth and fiction, placing historical figures and true stories in a world of fantasy. He delves into a tale about war, family and technology in mid-century America; in doing so, he says he gives his readers "a truth," if not the truth. Chabon sits down with Jeffrey Brown to discuss.

For this episode on Sunday, Nov. 6, two days before Election Day, the FBI clears Hillary Clinton of a second probe into her private email server. Later, the push for a national popular vote over the Electoral College. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Charting the course to victory from swing state Ohio: No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio, and the same has been true of Democrats since John F. Kennedy. How are voters in the state feeling in the final days of the election? The NewsHour's John Yang, who is covering the Clinton campaign, joins Hari Sreenivasan from Cleveland, Ohio. Will Trump take the battleground state of Iowa? During the last two decades, Iowa has largely voted for Democratic presidential candidates. But this year Republican Donald Trump is expected to take the state. The NewsHour's Jeffrey Brown, who is covering the Trump campaign, joins Alison Stewart from Sioux City, Iowa, to explain what has changed in the battleground state. An expert's preview of election night: As this year's hard-fought presidential race enters its final days, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump are campaigning for a path to the 270 electoral votes needed to take the White House. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield offers a close look at the key results and trends to watch for, hour by hour. This system calls for popular vote to determine winner: Four times in U.S. history, the winner of the nationwide popular vote has lost the Electoral College and the general election. But a proposal called the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact would automatically allocate participating states' Electoral College votes to whoever wins the national popular vote. Hari Sreenivasan reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Sharon Jones, soul and blues singer, dies at 60: Sharon Jones, a powerful soul and blues singer who achieved mid-life fame as lead singer for the Dap-Kings and who returned to touring this year after fighting cancer, has died. The NewsHour's Christopher Booker reports. How Trump's opposition to NAFTA affects Canada: During his campaign, President-elect Donald Trump opposed NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, which began in 1994 and opened up trade between the U.S., Canada and Mexico. He stated that the treaty sent U.S. jobs out of the country, particularly to Mexico. Alexander Panetta, a Washington correspondent for The Canadian Press, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Could the fight against ISIS give Kurds more autonomy? Kurdish fighters are on the front lines in the conflict against the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria, fighting alongside Iraqi forces. But will this fight bring the Kurds closer to independence, something they have sought in several countries for decades? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay has the story, the first of two reports from Iraq.

Then, from celebrations in the streets to condolences from powerful politicians, the world reacts to the death of communist leader and Cuban revolutionary Fidel Castro. Lisa Desjardins anchors from New York. Fidel Castro, who led Cuba for a half-century, dies at 90: Communist leader Fidel Castro ruled the island of Cuba with an iron fist for almost half a century until he handed over power to his brother eight years ago. Hari Sreenivasan reports on his life and times and his ongoing discord with the U.S. How Fidel Castro maintained a communist stronghold: Fidel Castro was the father of a revolution that delivered healthcare and education, but repressed dissidents and political freedoms over the course of nearly 50 years of rule. Adjunct senior fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations Carla Robbins and William LeoGrande, professor of government focusing on Latin American politics at American University, join Lisa Desjardins. World reacts to death of communist leader Fidel Castro: Fidel Castro's death provoked mixed reactions from Cubans and political leaders around the world, including President Barack Obama, President-elect Donald Trump and Russian President Vladimir Putin. Castro was both reviled and revered, making Saturday a day of celebration and mourning. Lisa Desjardins reports.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart. How similar are

Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years. Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. Chefs in Europe experiment with insects: In Europe, adventurous eaters are calling crickets, mealworms and grasshoppers a new "super food" due to their high levels of essential amino and fatty acids. Eating insects also has ecological benefits because they can be easier to farm than other animals. But they are still uncommon in food throughout Europe and the U.S. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman reports. Preserving the history of America's first black filmmakers: In the early part of the 20th century, black filmmakers were forced to work outside the white Hollywood mainstream -- and produced around 500 films, mainly for black audiences. To preserve this history, the company Kino Lorber released a five-disc collection this year containing 20 hours of these films. On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 31, the number of people killed by police in the United States dropped slightly in 2016, and DNA testing is bringing clarity to some in the African-American community. Also, learn how one journalist is facing PTSD after years of covering traumatic events. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The number of people killed by police dropped slightly in 2016: This year the number of people killed by police stands at 957, down slightly from 991 in 2015, according to the Washington Post. While white men accounted for the most deaths by police, black men were three times more likely to be killed when population rates were factored in. Washington Post Reporter Kimbriell Kelly, one of the authors of the year-end report, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Years after transatlantic slavery, DNA tests give clarity: DNA ancestry tests in the last decade have helped some African-Americans reconcile with aspects of their identities that might have been obscured during the transatlantic slave trade. Alondra Nelson chronicles this journey in her book, "The Social Life of DNA: Race, Reparations and Reconciliation After the Genome." Nelson joins Hari Sreenivasan. Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality-not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

In Northern New Mexico a range of mountains rises up from the high desert, a wild, rugged land of the Faraway Nearby. The volcanic Jemez Mountains are isolated from all other ranges -- an island in the sky, surrounded by a desert sea. In Sky Island, filmmaker John Grabowska profiles this enchanting landscape and our place within it, with climate change effects already dramatically altering the desert and alpine ecosystems. The film features narration by Pulitzer Prize winner N. Scott Momaday and acclaimed actress Meryl Streep, with a sweeping orchestral score by Academy Award winner Todd Boekelheide.

Cory Mann is a quirky Tlingit businessman hustling to make a dollar in Juneau Alaska. He gets hungry for smoked salmon, nostalgic for his childhood, and decides to spend a summer smoking fish at his family's traditional fish camp. The unusual story of his life and the untold history of his people interweave with the process of preparing traditional food as he struggles to pay his bills, keep the IRS off his back, and keep his business afloat. By turns tragic, bizarre, or just plain ridiculous, Smokin' Fish, tells the story of one man's attempts to navigate the messy zone of collision between the modern world and an ancient culture.

The Obama Legacy: From hope and change to achievements and setbacks: President Barack Obama was elected by promising hope and change, but during his eight years in the White House he learned that governing isn't always easy. His domestic agenda focused on a weak economy and expanding access to health care. His foreign policy doctrine was about negotiation over conflict. Despite successes, Obama's critics can point to setbacks like the rise of ISIS and Russia's growing influence. As the nation's first black president enters his final month in office, we explore his legacy, what he accomplished and what remains undone.

Explore the life of Finnish-American modernist architectural giant Eero Saarinen (1910-1961), whose visionary buildings include National Historic Landmarks such as St. Louis' iconic Gateway Arch and the General Motors Technical Center in Michigan. Saarinen also designed New York's TWA Flight Center at John F. Kennedy International Airport, Yale University's Ingalls Rink and Morse and Ezra Stiles Colleges, Virginia's Dulles Airport, and modernist pedestal furniture like the Tulip chair. Travel with his son, director of photography Eric Saarinen, as he visits the sites of his father's work on a cathartic journey, shot in 6K with the latest in drone technology that showcases the architect's body of timeless work for the first time. Eero's sudden death at age 51 cut short one of the most influential careers in American architecture. Today, Saarinen's work stands apart and continues to inspire, especially amongst renewed interest in 20th-century architects and artists who exploded the comfortable constraints of the past to create a robust and daring American aesthetic. Produced and Directed by Peter Rosen. One hour.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 24, 'Othello: The Remix' is bringing a classic Shakespeare tale to audiences through hip-hop. Later, a historic skate park in Portland is facing the pressures of gentrification. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Iconic Portland skate park on the front lines of gentrification: When skaters built a park in an industrial area of Portland beneath the Burnside Bridge 26 years ago without the city's permission, they did not anticipate the major housing developments that are taking shape there today. Now, what has become a subculture cornerstone is now under pressure -- even as some developers say they will respect that history. NewsHour Weekend's Christopher Booker reports. 'Othello: The Remix' gives Shakespeare the hip-hop treatment: At the Westside Theatre in New York City, audiences are watching "Othello: the Remix," a retelling of William Shakespeare's classic play that transforms the protagonist into a rising hip-hop star. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano sits down with the Q Brothers, the rap and theater artists who created the show, and other cast members.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 2, revelations about presidential candidate Donald Trump's tax history show that a business loss of $916 million in 1995 may have allowed him to not pay federal income taxes for years. Later, a look at shifting demographics among Latino voters in the swing state of Florida. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. What do three pages of Trump tax returns show us? On Saturday night, The New York Times published an analysis of several pages of Donald Trump's 1995 tax return, where he declared business losses so large he may have avoided paying federal taxes for years. Trump is the first major party presidential candidate in 40 years to refuse to release his tax returns. David Barstow, who co-authored the story, joins Hari Sreenivasan. What do Florida voters want from a president? With 29 electoral votes, the swing state of Florida has drawn the attention of both presidential candidates, who are trying to determine the most important issues for the state's diverse electorate. Susan MacManus, a political science professor at the University of South Florida, joins Hari Sreenivasan. How a shifting Latino vote in Florida could influence the election: The battleground state of Florida is again considered an influential toss-up in this year's presidential election. One constituency there is getting a lot of attention from both candidates: Latino voters that have flooded into central Florida during the last decade, creating a potential swing area. NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Ivette Feliciano reports.

On this episode for Saturday, Oct. 15, a look at the state of the Republican party three weeks ahead of the election. Then, children in the U.S. are dying from gun accidents every other day. Later, learn how car makers are racing to be the first with an affordable all-electric vehicle. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Why are Republicans split about Trump? The 2005 video released last week of Donald Trump speaking about groping women, followed by a series of women accusing Trump of sexual assault, is costing him support in his own party. To discuss the schism among Republican leaders, national political reporter for The Hill Jonathan Swan joins Hari Sreenivasan. A child dies every other day from gun accidents in U.S. A joint investigation by the Associated Press and the USA Today Network has found that in the first six months of this year, gun accidents killed at least one child in the U.S. every other day. Both the shooters and victims were most likely to be three years old. Ryan Foley, one of the reporters on the story for the AP in Iowa, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Companies race to make electric cars mainstream: When Tesla Motors announced in March it would build a new, all-electric car at a starting price of $35,000, it was a turning point for the company. General Motors is also developing an all-electric sedan and hopes to market it early next year. Will increased competition and new options spur more sales? On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 22, Iraqi forces advance on Mosul in a campaign to retake the country's second largest city from ISIS, and with less than three weeks left until Election Day, Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton are making their closing arguments to voters. Also, learn how robots in South Korea may transform America's future workforce. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. With campaign winding down, Clinton leads polls: More than 5 million people have already cast ballots in the presidential race through early voting in 34 states and recent polls show Hillary Clinton in the lead. For more election analysis, NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Hari Sreenivasan. South Africa to leave the International Criminal Court: South Africa announced it will withdraw from the International Criminal Court, whose oversight includes 124 member nations. Burundi's parliament has also voted to leave the court, which was established in 2002 to investigate and prosecute war crimes. Andrew Meldrum, the acting Africa Editor for the Associated Press, joins Hari Sreenivasan from Johannesburg. Will South Korea's robot revolution hurt American jobs? South Korea is among the countries working to increase automation in the manufacturing sector, with some large companies seeing robots as a cost-effective way to replace expensive human labor. But how will the expansion of this technology affect American workers? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy reports.

On this episode for Sunday, Oct. 23, assessing a merger between telecom giant AT&T and Time Warner. Later, senate Republicans are enduring a balancing act to keep control of the House in the weeks leading up to Election Day. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Humanitarian concerns grow in Mosul: Iraqi government troops and Peshmerga fighters launched a new offensive on towns and villages around Mosul, the country's second largest city that is also controlled by the Islamic State. The U.N. warns that the offensive could displace as many as a million people. Katharina Ritz with the International Red Cross in Baghdad joins Hari Sreenivasan via Skype to discuss. What does AT&T, Time Warner merger mean? AT&T, the nation's second largest cell phone carrier, is buying Time Warner for $85.4 billion and will gain control of TV networks like HBO, TNT and CNN in the biggest deal of its kind since Comcast acquired NBC Universal five years ago. Wall Street Journal reporter Keach Hagey joins Hari Sreenivasan to talk about how the deal might affect clients. GOP incumbent walks line in PA on supporting Trump: Even if Hillary Clinton wins the White House, she could face difficulties on Capitol Hill, if Republicans continue to control the House of Representatives and Senate. One of the most vulnerable Republican incumbents is Sen. Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield went to the Keystone State to look at Toomey's challenge.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 17, President-elect Donald Trump wraps up his post-election tour. Later, Cubans are scrambling to accommodate a new surge in American tourists. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. In North Carolina, new laws to limit governor's power: Last month, incumbent Republican Gov. Pat McCrory lost the governor's race to Democrat Roy Cooper. The election spurred Republican state lawmakers to call a special legislative session and pass laws that limit the power of the incoming governor. Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the University of North Carolina Law School in Chapel Hill, joins Alison Stewart. As Aleppo lies in ruins, thousands wait to escape: In Syria, the evacuation of civilians from Aleppo continues as thousands of people wait to leave the besieged city. Once the most populous city in the country, previously rebel-held Aleppo is now largely in ruins after a protracted assault by Syrian government forces. Anne Barnard, a reporter with The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart from Beirut for more. In Cuba, American tourists increase demand for hotels: Two years ago, President Barack Obama restored diplomatic relations with Cuba. Since then, Cold War-era travel restrictions that prohibited most Americans from visiting were lifted, leading to a surge of U.S. tourists and a scramble to accommodate them. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman looks at the growing hospitality industry in Cuba.

Sharon Jones, soul and blues singer, dies at 60: Sharon Jones, a powerful soul and blues singer who achieved mid-life fame as lead singer for the Dap-Kings and who returned to touring this year after fighting cancer, has died. The NewsHour's Christopher Booker reports. How Trump's opposition to NAFTA affects Canada: During his campaign, President-elect Donald Trump opposed NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, which began in 1994 and opened up trade between the U.S., Canada and Mexico. He stated that the treaty sent U.S. jobs out of the country, particularly to Mexico. Alexander Panetta, a Washington correspondent for The Canadian Press, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Could the fight against ISIS give Kurds more autonomy? Kurdish fighters are on the front lines in the conflict against the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria, fighting alongside Iraqi forces. But will this fight bring the Kurds closer to independence, something they have sought in several countries for decades? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay has the story, the first of two reports from Iraq.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 25, preserving America's first black filmmakers who were forced to work outside of white Hollywood. Later, adventurous eaters in Europe are calling crickets, mealworms, grasshoppers and other insects the newest "super food." Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Chefs in Europe experiment with insects: In Europe, adventurous eaters are calling crickets, mealworms and grasshoppers a new "super food" due to their high levels of essential amino and fatty acids. Eating insects also has ecological benefits because they can be easier to farm than other animals. But they are still uncommon in food throughout Europe and the U.S. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman reports. Preserving the history of America's first black filmmakers: In the early part of the 20th century, black filmmakers were forced to work outside the white Hollywood mainstream -- and produced around 500 films, mainly for black audiences. To preserve this history, the company Kino Lorber released a five-disc collection this year containing 20 hours of these films. Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public. There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.

The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

The sacred and the scientific clash on Hawaii's Mauna Kea: Over a thousand years ago, Polynesians followed the stars in the Mauna Kea sky on their path to Hawaii. Those stars are now of interest to astronomers, who believe the mountain's summit is the perfect spot to build a giant, cutting-edge telescope. But native Hawaiians view that peak as a sacred space. Science correspondent Miles O'Brien reports for the second in our series about the controversy.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 2, revelations about presidential candidate Donald Trump's tax history show that a business loss of $916 million in 1995 may have allowed him to not pay federal income taxes for years. Later, a look at shifting demographics among Latino voters in the swing state of Florida. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. What do three pages of Trump tax returns show us? On Saturday night, The New York Times published an analysis of several pages of Donald Trump's 1995 tax return, where he declared business losses so large he may have avoided paying federal taxes for years. Trump is the first major party presidential candidate in 40 years to refuse to release his tax returns. David Barstow, who co-authored the story, joins Hari Sreenivasan. What do Florida voters want from a president? With 29 electoral votes, the swing state of Florida has drawn the attention of both presidential candidates, who are trying to determine the most important issues for the state's diverse electorate. Susan MacManus, a political science professor at the University of South Florida, joins Hari Sreenivasan. How a shifting Latino vote in Florida could influence the election: The battleground state of Florida is again considered an influential toss-up in this year's presidential election. One constituency there is getting a lot of attention from both candidates: Latino voters that have flooded into central Florida during the last decade, creating a potential swing area. NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Ivette Feliciano reports.

Later, learn how members of Italy's 'art squad' are attempting to save priceless artworks after the town of Amatrice was decimated by an earthquake last month. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Is Ohio less important in this year's election? Ohio has long been known as a bellwether state when it comes to the race for the White House. No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio and no Democrat since John F. Kennedy has become president without a victory in the state. But this year the stakes may not be as high. Jonathan Martin of The New York Times joins Hari Sreenivasan from Washington, D.C. Oxford study could point to new treatments for HIV: This week, Oxford University researchers released a study that may impact treatments for HIV. The study looked at young children in South Africa with HIV and found that 10 percent of them never developed symptoms of AIDS. Philip Goulder, a professor of pediatrics at Oxford University who led the research team, joins Hari Sreenivasan. Saving treasured art after Italy's major earthquake: In August, a 6.2-magnitude earthquake shook central Italy, killing almost 300 people, leaving thousands homeless, and causing an estimated $5 billion in property damage. Today, rescue efforts center on saving the area's cultural artifacts. NewsHour Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 9, Republicans distance themselves from Donald Trump after his comments about women. Then, assessing the damage from Hurricane Matthew along the Atlantic Coast. Later, learn how the small number of women in Utah's Legislature is affecting policy in the state. William Brangham anchors from New York. In Florida, cleanup begins after Hurricane Matthew: Hurricane Matthew has been downgraded to a post-tropical cyclone after causing a trail of damage from Florida to North Carolina over the weekend, though it continues to flood the East Coast. At least 19 people in the U.S. have died as a result of the storm. The NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan visited residents of St. Augustine, Florida, to assess the damage. Clinton, Trump prepare for debate amid Republican exodus: As Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump prepare for tonight's second presidential debate, the number of Republicans who have withdrawn support for Trump continues to grow. The two candidates will meet in a town hall debate at Washington University in St. Louis. PBS NewsHour's John Yang joins William Brangham outside the debate hall for a preview. Why does Utah have so few female legislators? Nationally, about a quarter of all state legislators are women. But Utah's numbers are some of the lowest in the country, with six female senators in its 29-member Senate and 10 female representatives in its 75-member house. The NewsHour Weekend's Christopher Booker reports on the reasons for that imbalance. The challenges of a town hall debate: On Sunday night in St. Louis, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump meet for their second of three televised 90-minute debates. This time, the debate will follow a town meeting format, with voters joining the moderator in asking questions. As NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield reports, that format has tripped up many candidates before.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

Humanitarian concerns grow in Mosul: Iraqi government troops and Peshmerga fighters launched a new offensive on towns and villages around Mosul, the country's second largest city that is also controlled by the Islamic State. The U.N. warns that the offensive could displace as many as a million people. Katharina Ritz with the International Red Cross in Baghdad joins Hari Sreenivasan via Skype to discuss. What does AT&T, Time Warner merger mean? AT&T, the nation's second largest cell phone carrier, is buying Time Warner for $85.4 billion and will gain control of TV networks like HBO, TNT and CNN in the biggest deal of its kind since Comcast acquired NBC Universal five years ago. Wall Street Journal reporter Keach Hagey joins Hari Sreenivasan to talk about how the deal might affect clients. GOP incumbent walks line in PA on supporting Trump: Even if Hillary Clinton wins the White House, she could face difficulties on Capitol Hill, if Republicans continue to control the House of Representatives and Senate. One of the most vulnerable Republican incumbents is Sen. Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield went to the Keystone State to look at Toomey's challenge.

Breaking down U.S.'s role in Yemen's civil war: The U.S. military is investigating a possible third missile launch against U.S. navy ships patrolling the Red Sea within a week. The Pentagon said two previous missile launches came from Shiite rebels at war with Yemen's exiled, internationally-recognized government. Barbara Bodine, director of the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy at Georgetown University, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Can Trump expand beyond his base before third debate? With three weeks left in the presidential campaign, Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton leads Republican Donald Trump in opinion polls and donations. Meanwhile, Trump has expanded his claim that the election is 'rigged.' NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. California to vote on legalizing recreational marijuana: California, the first state to legalize medical marijuana 20 years ago, will vote in November on whether to legalize recreational use for people over the age of 21. With 39 million residents and the world's 6th-largest economy, California's status could resonate throughout the country. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Mike Taibbi reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 30, the FBI's announcement to review more emails related to Hillary Clinton looms less than two weeks ahead of Election Day. Later, presidential candidates are after the votes of Florida's most diverse block: millennials. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Last year's James Bond movie, "Spectre," opened with a Day of the Dead parade featuring floats, puppets, and skeletons. The sequence, filmed in Mexico City, became the inspiration for an annual parade designed to draw tourists, where ancient Aztec tradition intermingled with Halloween. Alison Stewart has more. Is FBI email probe this election's 'October surprise'? From the Kennedys getting Martin Luther King, Jr. out of jail to George W. Bush's youthful drunk driving arrest, the term "October surprise" has come to mean an event in the closing weeks of a presidential campaign that could affect the race. The FBI's announcement that it is reviewing more emails related to Clinton might be this election's October surprise. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart. As election nears, candidates court millennials: There are an estimated 83 million millennials in the U.S. -- and candidates want their vote. In the last presidential election, 45 percent of millennials turned out to vote, and the group tends to lean further left than other generations, according to the Pew Research Center. PBS NewsHour correspondent Christopher Booker reports from Florida on how the generation is connecting with the candidates.

Charting the course to victory from swing state Ohio: No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio, and the same has been true of Democrats since John F. Kennedy. How are voters in the state feeling in the final days of the election? The NewsHour's John Yang, who is covering the Clinton campaign, joins Hari Sreenivasan from Cleveland, Ohio. Will Trump take the battleground state of Iowa? During the last two decades, Iowa has largely voted for Democratic presidential candidates. But this year Republican Donald Trump is expected to take the state. The NewsHour's Jeffrey Brown, who is covering the Trump campaign, joins Alison Stewart from Sioux City, Iowa, to explain what has changed in the battleground state. An expert's preview of election night: As this year's hard-fought presidential race enters its final days, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump are campaigning for a path to the 270 electoral votes needed to take the White House. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield offers a close look at the key results and trends to watch for, hour by hour. This system calls for popular vote to determine winner: Four times in U.S. history, the winner of the nationwide popular vote has lost the Electoral College and the general election. But a proposal called the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact would automatically allocate participating states' Electoral College votes to whoever wins the national popular vote. Hari Sreenivasan reports.

On this episode for Sunday, Nov. 27, assessing the impact of recount efforts for the presidential election. Later, singer and songwriter Norah Jones talks about her latest album. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. With recount efforts brewing in three states, what now? While they do not anticipate the outcome of the election will change, Hillary Clinton's campaign has agreed to participate in an effort to recount ballots in states that were crucial to President-elect Donald Trump's win. NPR's political reporter Tamara Keith joins Alison Stewart for more analysis. Texas judge issues injunction, blocking overtime pay law: A federal judge in Texas has issued a preliminary injunction on a new nationwide rule that would nearly double the salary cap for workers eligible to receive overtime pay to $47,476 a year. The rule was supposed to take effect on Dec. 1. Yuki Noguchi, business desk reporter for NPR, joins Alison Stewart. This week, just back from Europe, singer and songwriter Norah Jones begins the East Coast leg of her concert tour to promote her latest album, "Day Breaks." The album builds on the style of her 2002 debut "Come Away With Me," with an emphasis on piano and a jazz ensemble. The NewsHour's Jeffrey Brown reports on Jones' career.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 17, President-elect Donald Trump wraps up his post-election tour. Later, Cubans are scrambling to accommodate a new surge in American tourists. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. In North Carolina, new laws to limit governor's power: Last month, incumbent Republican Gov. Pat McCrory lost the governor's race to Democrat Roy Cooper. The election spurred Republican state lawmakers to call a special legislative session and pass laws that limit the power of the incoming governor. Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the University of North Carolina Law School in Chapel Hill, joins Alison Stewart. As Aleppo lies in ruins, thousands wait to escape: In Syria, the evacuation of civilians from Aleppo continues as thousands of people wait to leave the besieged city. Once the most populous city in the country, previously rebel-held Aleppo is now largely in ruins after a protracted assault by Syrian government forces. Anne Barnard, a reporter with The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart from Beirut for more. In Cuba, American tourists increase demand for hotels: Two years ago, President Barack Obama restored diplomatic relations with Cuba. Since then, Cold War-era travel restrictions that prohibited most Americans from visiting were lifted, leading to a surge of U.S. tourists and a scramble to accommodate them. Hanukkah on the River (Originally published: Dec. 11, 2015): Jews will soon be celebrating Hanukkah, the eight-day festival of lights (December 24-January 1). Passages in the Talmud direct Jews to "publicize the miracle" of Hanukkah. We visited San Antonio, Texas, where the Jewish community holds an annual Hanukkah on the River celebration. Rabbi Chaim Block, executive director of the city's Chabad Center for Jewish Life & Learning, explained how members of the community fulfill the requirement to "publicize the miracle" with boat parades, children's workshops, and menorah lighting. "It's about bringing light into the darkness that surrounds us as we move through our daily lives," says Rabbi Block.

FBI reviews newly found Clinton emails as candidates make final pitch to voters: Hillary Clinton's email problem came back to forefront Friday as FBI Director James Comey told Congress it was reviewing new emails related to her use of a private email server. Comey recommended no charges be filed against the Democratic nominee in July, and today Clinton called for the FBI to release the "full and complete facts" because the election is just 11 days away and voters in many states have already cast their ballots. Donald Trump, who has spent several weeks on defense, renewed his attacks on Clinton's "corruption." Meanwhile, Democrats are hoping to regain control of the Senate, but will gridlock in Washington ever end?

Trump won't accept election results if he loses as Clinton expands campaign into red states: With less than 3 weeks left until Election Day, the bitter contest between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump escalated again into sharp, personal attacks during the final presidential debate of 2016. The Republican nominee said he may not accept the results of November's election and reserves the right to file a legal challenge. Clinton is leading in battleground state polls and is expanding her campaign into traditionally Republican states, but the former secretary of state is facing her own troubles with the continuing slow-drip Wikileaks release of hacked campaign emails and allegations this week of quid pro quo between the State Department and FBI. Plus, down-ballot Republicans have distanced themselves from some of Trump's most recent comments. As Election 2016 enters the final sprint, we get an update on the state of the race.

For this episode on Sunday, Nov. 6, two days before Election Day, the FBI clears Hillary Clinton of a second probe into her private email server. Later, the push for a national popular vote over the Electoral College. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Charting the course to victory from swing state Ohio: No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio, and the same has been true of Democrats since John F. Kennedy. How are voters in the state feeling in the final days of the election? The NewsHour's John Yang, who is covering the Clinton campaign, joins Hari Sreenivasan from Cleveland, Ohio. Will Trump take the battleground state of Iowa? During the last two decades, Iowa has largely voted for Democratic presidential candidates. But this year Republican Donald Trump is expected to take the state. The NewsHour's Jeffrey Brown, who is covering the Trump campaign, joins Alison Stewart from Sioux City, Iowa, to explain what has changed in the battleground state. An expert's preview of election night: As this year's hard-fought presidential race enters its final days, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump are campaigning for a path to the 270 electoral votes needed to take the White House. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield offers a close look at the key results and trends to watch for, hour by hour. This system calls for popular vote to determine winner: Four times in U.S. history, the winner of the nationwide popular vote has lost the Electoral College and the general election. But a proposal called the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact would automatically allocate participating states' Electoral College votes to whoever wins the national popular vote. On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 30, the FBI's announcement to review more emails related to Hillary Clinton looms less than two weeks ahead of Election Day. Later, presidential candidates are after the votes of Florida's most diverse block: millennials. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Last year's James Bond movie, "Spectre," opened with a Day of the Dead parade featuring floats, puppets, and skeletons. The sequence, filmed in Mexico City, became the inspiration for an annual parade designed to draw tourists, where ancient Aztec tradition intermingled with Halloween. Alison Stewart has more. Is FBI email probe this election's 'October surprise'? From the Kennedys getting Martin Luther King, Jr. out of jail to George W. Bush's youthful drunk driving arrest, the term "October surprise" has come to mean an event in the closing weeks of a presidential campaign that could affect the race. The FBI's announcement that it is reviewing more emails related to Clinton might be this election's October surprise. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart. As election nears, candidates court millennials: There are an estimated 83 million millennials in the U.S. -- and candidates want their vote. In the last presidential election, 45 percent of millennials turned out to vote, and the group tends to lean further left than other generations, according to the Pew Research Center. PBS NewsHour correspondent Christopher Booker reports from Florida on how the generation is connecting with the candidates.

Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Alison Stewart reports.

The 2005 video released last week of Donald Trump speaking about groping women, followed by a series of women accusing Trump of sexual assault, is costing him support in his own party. To discuss the schism among Republican leaders, national political reporter for The Hill Jonathan Swan joins Hari Sreenivasan. A child dies every other day from gun accidents in U.S. A joint investigation by the Associated Press and the USA Today Network has found that in the first six months of this year, gun accidents killed at least one child in the U.S. every other day. Both the shooters and victims were most likely to be three years old. Ryan Foley, one of the reporters on the story for the AP in Iowa, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart. How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years. Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more. Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba. Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart. Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 31, the number of people killed by police in the United States dropped slightly in 2016, and DNA testing is bringing clarity to some in the African-American community. Also, learn how one journalist is facing PTSD after years of covering traumatic events. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The number of people killed by police dropped slightly in 2016: This year the number of people killed by police stands at 957, down slightly from 991 in 2015, according to the Washington Post. While white men accounted for the most deaths by police, black men were three times more likely to be killed when population rates were factored in. Washington Post Reporter Kimbriell Kelly, one of the authors of the year-end report, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Years after transatlantic slavery, DNA tests give clarity: DNA ancestry tests in the last decade have helped some African-Americans reconcile with aspects of their identities that might have been obscured during the transatlantic slave trade. Alondra Nelson chronicles this journey in her book, "The Social Life of DNA: Race, Reparations and Reconciliation After the Genome." Nelson joins Hari Sreenivasan. A journalist's story of PTSD: Journalist Dean Yates followed stories of conflict in the Middle East and Southeast Asia for years in his job for Reuters, producing reporting around some of the region's most important events. Earlier this year, he was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder, a condition that can result from exposure to traumatic events. Yates, who wrote about his experience with PTSD for Reuters last month, joins Alison Stewart.

Old Skool Caf?: There is a supper club in San Francisco that not only serves good food but also trains former juvenile prison inmates to run it. More than three out of four of the staff have been in prison. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports on a former corrections officer, Susan Brown, who felt called to help former prisoners, especially juveniles, stay off the streets. She quit her job and started a small restaurant where 16-22-year-olds learn the skills needed to finish school and find jobs. More than 300 former inmates have completed the Old Skool program.

Church Security (Originally published: July 8, 2016): Churches and other houses of worship have traditionally kept their facilities open, even when worship services are not taking place. But recent shootings and incidents of gun violence have prompted some congregations to reassess how they can remain open and welcoming while still keeping members secure. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports on the issue and speaks with clergy, laity, and police in Fairfax, Virginia, and Oxford, Mississippi.

FBI reviews newly found Clinton emails as candidates make final pitch to voters: Hillary Clinton's email problem came back to forefront Friday as FBI Director James Comey told Congress it was reviewing new emails related to her use of a private email server. Comey recommended no charges be filed against the Democratic nominee in July, and today Clinton called for the FBI to release the "full and complete facts" because the election is just 11 days away and voters in many states have already cast their ballots. Donald Trump, who has spent several weeks on defense, renewed his attacks on Clinton's "corruption." Meanwhile, Democrats are hoping to regain control of the Senate, but will gridlock in Washington ever end?

Trump won't accept election results if he loses as Clinton expands campaign into red states: With less than 3 weeks left until Election Day, the bitter contest between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump escalated again into sharp, personal attacks during the final presidential debate of 2016. The Republican nominee said he may not accept the results of November's election and reserves the right to file a legal challenge. Clinton is leading in battleground state polls and is expanding her campaign into traditionally Republican states, but the former secretary of state is facing her own troubles with the continuing slow-drip Wikileaks release of hacked campaign emails and allegations this week of quid pro quo between the State Department and FBI. Plus, down-ballot Republicans have distanced themselves from some of Trump's most recent comments. As Election 2016 enters the final sprint, we get an update on the state of the race.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Last year's James Bond movie, "Spectre," opened with a Day of the Dead parade featuring floats, puppets, and skeletons. The sequence, filmed in Mexico City, became the inspiration for an annual parade designed to draw tourists, where ancient Aztec tradition intermingled with Halloween. Alison Stewart has more. Is FBI email probe this election's 'October surprise'? From the Kennedys getting Martin Luther King, Jr. out of jail to George W. Bush's youthful drunk driving arrest, the term "October surprise" has come to mean an event in the closing weeks of a presidential campaign that could affect the race. The FBI's announcement that it is reviewing more emails related to Clinton might be this election's October surprise. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart. As election nears, candidates court millennials: There are an estimated 83 million millennials in the U.S. -- and candidates want their vote. In the last presidential election, 45 percent of millennials turned out to vote, and the group tends to lean further left than other generations, according to the Pew Research Center. Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

At the edge of the world, the Inupiaq people are fighting for survival. Kivalina documents life on this namesake island that teeters on the edge of the North Pacific. Once a nomadic people, the Inupiaq were relocated to Kivalina, Alaska, by the US government more than a century ago. Today, the community struggles to maintain itself in the face of forces largely beyond its control. Climate change threatens to drown the village under rising ocean levels. The neglect of a government thousands of miles away delays repairs to the crumbling sea wall that routinely fails to protect the island from the flooding caused by ever more frequent storms. And, as the melting ice opens up the north to resource extraction and tanker traffic, an oil spill would wipe out the whales and with it the community. The everyday lives of the Inupiaq people carry on under the weight of these impending disasters. Director Gina Abatemarco and her crew document traditional hunting and food preparation, coexisting with the frustrations of teenage boredom and bureaucratic intransigence. Kivalina shows the consequences of colonialism, economic exploitation, and bureaucratic neglect for this community while foregrounding the voices of the people themselves. Intimate and unflinching, the film shows the cultural as well as the environmental consequences of climate change.

By Blood chronicles American Indians of African descent as they battle to regain their tribal citizenship. The film explores the impact of this battle, which has manifested into a broader conflict about race, identity, and the sovereign rights of indigenous people. The film demonstrates both sides of the battle, the shared emotional impact of the issue, and the rising urgency of the debate: a Native American and African American history has been overlooked, and a tribal body feels as though their sovereignty is under siege.

Format: DOCUMENTARY
Segment Length: 01:56:46:00

Children of the Arctic is a year-in-the-life portrait of Native Alaskan teenagers coming of age in Barrow, Alaska - the northern-most community of the United States. For these teenagers growing up has become a little more complicated than it was for their ancestors who originally named this place "Ukpiagvik" ("where we hunt snowy owls"). They are the twenty-first century descendants of a culture that has endured for millennia on this isolated, but rapidly changing tundra. The harvest of the agvik (bowhead whale) remains the heart of their culture - in the fall, motor boats and modern methods are used, whereas, in the spring, whaling crews use the umiaq (a seal-skin boat made by hand) and ancient traditional methods.

In March 2005, Adama Bah a 16-year-old Muslim girl growing up in Harlem was detained by the FBI after she was accused of being a potential suicide bomber. Although no evidence was ever produced to support the claim, Adama had to wear an ankle bracelet and live under partial house arrest after she was released from detention. As Adama nervously awaits the outcome of a pending deportation order, the film follows the efforts of a Muslim activist, an ex-FBI agent, and Adama's 10-year-old brother as they each attempt to unravel the web of post-9/11 politics surrounding her arrest and the potential collapse of her family and future.

What motivates an individual towards an extreme act of compassion? The documentary tells the story of two unique and engaging characters. One is Ellie, who embarks on an unpredictable journey of twists and turns, determined to give away one of her kidneys. Five hundred miles away, Kathy endures nightly dialysis and loses hope of receiving a transplant until Ellie reads her profile on an online website. Both women face unexpected challenges as their parallel stories unfold over the course of four years. Why are we unnerved by the idea of such an extreme gift?

A couple of dancers appear one morning in a High School. It's Monday and they announce to a group of youngsters that they have five days to get up on stage and dance. A short time but a big challenge. The dance compels these youngsters to break through their roles exactly at the time of their lives when the social roles are being forged. The handsome boy is no longer the most admired, the timid one takes a step forward. Wilfried van Popple and Amaya Lubeigt are the choreographers. Professional dancers who have decided now to work with people who have never danced before. This is the challenge: five days, a class of teenagers, a microcosm in which occurs a little big bang.

A couple of dancers appear one morning in a High School. It's Monday and they announce to a group of youngsters that they have five days to get up on stage and dance. A short time but a big challenge. The dance compels these youngsters to break through their roles exactly at the time of their lives when the social roles are being forged. The handsome boy is no longer the most admired, the timid one takes a step forward. Wilfried van Popple and Amaya Lubeigt are the choreographers. Professional dancers who have decided now to work with people who have never danced before. This is the challenge: five days, a class of teenagers, a microcosm in which occurs a little big bang.

Turkish soap operas are incredibly popular - and not just in Turkey. Throughout the Middle East, North Africa, the Balkans and Asia, millions of viewers are glued to every episode of series such as Noor, Fatmagul, Suleiman and Life Goes On. The Turkish cities used as locations have become tourist attractions, and huge numbers of parents name their children after the main characters. Kismet seeks out the secrets behind the soaps, which while breaking taboos also count many strict Christians and Muslims among their loyal audience. The film alternates interviews with the stars, directors, and scriptwriters with analyses by sociologists and portraits of faithful fans - most of them female - from Abu Dhabi, Cairo, Athens, Mostar, Sofia and Istanbul. The soaps transcend cultural and religious boundaries, and their devotees see them as much more than a temporary escape from their often-dismal social reality. They may swoon at the hotly debated romantic intrigues, but they are also emboldened by the female characters, all of whom are strong, independent fighters. Alongside illustrative scenes from the series, the documentary brings us the personal stories of women who followed in the footsteps of their heroines to fight for their rights, and to ultimately break free of oppressed lives.

Charismatic cleric Abdul Aziz Ghazi, an ISIS supporter and Taliban ally, is waging jihad against the Pakistani state. His dream is to impose a strict version of Shariah law throughout the country, as a model for the world. A flashpoint in Aziz's holy war took place in 2007, when the government leveled his flagship mosque to the ground, killing his mother, brother, only son and 150 students. With unprecedented access, Among the Believers follows Aziz on his very personal quest to create an Islamic utopia, during the bloodiest period in Pakistan's modern history. The film also follows the lives of two teenage students who have attended madrassahs (Islamic seminaries) run by Aziz's Red Mosque network. Throughout the film, their paths diverge: Talha, 12, detaches from his moderate Muslim family and decides to become a jihadi preacher. Zarina, also 12, escapes her madrassah and joins a regular school. Over the next few years, Zarina's education is threatened by frequent Taliban attacks on schools like her own. Aziz's foil is nuclear physicist and leading educational activist Dr. Pervez Hoodbhoy. He passionately opposes Aziz through his public appearances, lectures, and the media. Opposition against Aziz comes to a head in December, 2014, when Aziz insults a grieving nation by trying to justify the brutal massacre of 132 school children in Peshawar by the Taliban. The attack ignites a movement to end extremism in Pakistan's mosques and madrassahs. Led by Hoodbhoy and others, Pakistan's moderate majority focuses on Aziz and calls for his arrest. Intimate and shocking, Among the Believers offers rare insights into the ideological battles shaping Pakistan and the Muslim world.

Georgiana Halmac turns 15 this winter. She lives with her six brothers and sisters in a social housing condo on the outskirts of Bacau, Romania. Their mother Liliana was forced to leave her family behind to go to Turin, Italy, to earn money. She won't be back before summer. During their mother's absence, Georgiana has been catapulted into the role of head of the family, responsible for her siblings. Her adolescence is cut brutally short. Caught between puberty and responsibility, Georgiana moves ahead, improvising as she goes. Phone conversations with her mom are her only guidelines. Intimate scenes from the daily life of the seven siblings show us - in an uncensored, fly-on-the-wall style - how real events are experienced and interpreted with great imagination by the children. You can't help being amazed by their ingenuity, while also realizing how precarious their daily equilibrium is.

Georgiana Halmac turns 15 this winter. She lives with her six brothers and sisters in a social housing condo on the outskirts of Bacau, Romania. Their mother Liliana was forced to leave her family behind to go to Turin, Italy, to earn money. She won't be back before summer. During their mother's absence, Georgiana has been catapulted into the role of head of the family, responsible for her siblings. Her adolescence is cut brutally short. Caught between puberty and responsibility, Georgiana moves ahead, improvising as she goes. Phone conversations with her mom are her only guidelines. Intimate scenes from the daily life of the seven siblings show us - in an uncensored, fly-on-the-wall style - how real events are experienced and interpreted with great imagination by the children. You can't help being amazed by their ingenuity, while also realizing how precarious their daily equilibrium is.

A Goat for a Vote follows three students in Kenya competing to become the next school president. Winning the election will not only earn them power and respect, but guarantees a role within Kenyan society in the future. Magdalene has to prove herself in a boy-dominated school which has never been led by a girl. She has the impossible task to unite all girls in her fight for equal rights. Harry, from the poor side of town, hopes to win so he will be able to take care of his family in the future. He struggles against the popular Said, who is a natural born leader with a disarming smile. The endless enthusiasm and motivation of these three candidates guarantees that this will be a fierce election battle.

Tashi Bista dreams of installing a makeshift wind turbine in Namdok, a remote village nestled high amongst the Himalayas of Nepal. Battered by wind and cold, Namdok, has been in darkness for centuries. Wearing Ray Bans to shield his eyes from the dust and just a leather jacket to insulate him from the bitter cold he surveys the village. Tashi Bista, the sturdiest activist in town provides a fresh perspective to alternative energy. He grew up in this region without electrical power. He is determined to bring lights to Namdok in an effort to prove himself to the skeptical village community. Tashi's Turbine is a character driven film that shows the impact of one man's dream for light, in a village waiting for development.

Inuit hunter Hivshu, a.k.a. Robert E. Peary II, traces the story of his great grandfather the famous Arctic explorer, and the mystery of his Eskimo ancestors who Peary brought back to New York as part of an exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History in 1897. Using archival footage, photos and audio recordings the film chronicles Peary's exploration of the Arctic and his still controversial 1909 claim to be the first man to reach the North Pole. The film also explores the activities of Peary and Franz Boas, the "father" of American anthropology, who viewed the Eskimos as barbarians, as "living fossils" for scientific study, focusing on the fate of the six Eskimos who traveled to New York with Peary, including the sole survivor, Minik, a six-year-old boy.

Segment Length: 00:59:10:00

Inuit hunter Hivshu, a.k.a. Robert E. Peary II, traces the story of his great grandfather the famous Arctic explorer, and the mystery of his Eskimo ancestors who Peary brought back to New York as part of an exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History in 1897. Using archival footage, photos and audio recordings the film chronicles Peary's exploration of the Arctic and his still controversial 1909 claim to be the first man to reach the North Pole. The film also explores the activities of Peary and Franz Boas, the "father" of American anthropology, who viewed the Eskimos as barbarians, as "living fossils" for scientific study, focusing on the fate of the six Eskimos who traveled to New York with Peary, including the sole survivor, Minik, a six-year-old boy.

An intimate view of life for the last compressor divers from the Badjao tribe in Mabul Island. As the Badjao's old way of life quickly heads toward extinction, Alexan-Mabul Island's last compressor diver tries to pass on their traditions to 10-year-old Sari. He tells his nephew wondrous tales about their ancestors and the secrets of the sea, weaving truth and fantasy. Sari, however, is torn between becoming a fisherman like his uncle and living a more modern life on land. Modern civilization has been driving the Badjao off the seas between Borneo, the Philippines and Indonesia. Without IDs or citizenship, the authorities want them to live on dry land in filthy slums overrun by garbage and rodents. Nearby, tourists stay in luxurious vacation resorts.

In 1975 the murderous regime of Cambodia's Pol Pot forced Dr. Haing S. Ngor and thousands of others into labor camps. Dr. Ngor escaped after years of torture and eventually recreated his experiences for the theatrical film, The Killing Fields, a role that won him an Oscar. This is the story of Haing Ngor: one of the most recognized survivors of the Cambodian genocide and a man who became a worldwide ambassador for justice in his homeland, only to be murdered in a Los Angeles Chinatown alley. With a fascinating blend of animation and rare archival material -- anchored by Ngor's powerful autobiography -- the years of tyrannical rule by the Khmer Rouge are explored with a transcontinental journey of loss and reconciliation.

A couple of dancers appear one morning in a High School. It's Monday and they announce to a group of youngsters that they have five days to get up on stage and dance. A short time but a big challenge. The dance compels these youngsters to break through their roles exactly at the time of their lives when the social roles are being forged. The handsome boy is no longer the most admired, the timid one takes a step forward. Wilfried van Popple and Amaya Lubeigt are the choreographers. Professional dancers who have decided now to work with people who have never danced before. This is the challenge: five days, a class of teenagers, a microcosm in which occurs a little big bang.

Turkish soap operas are incredibly popular - and not just in Turkey. Throughout the Middle East, North Africa, the Balkans and Asia, millions of viewers are glued to every episode of series such as Noor, Fatmagul, Suleiman and Life Goes On. The Turkish cities used as locations have become tourist attractions, and huge numbers of parents name their children after the main characters. Kismet seeks out the secrets behind the soaps, which while breaking taboos also count many strict Christians and Muslims among their loyal audience. The film alternates interviews with the stars, directors, and scriptwriters with analyses by sociologists and portraits of faithful fans - most of them female - from Abu Dhabi, Cairo, Athens, Mostar, Sofia and Istanbul. The soaps transcend cultural and religious boundaries, and their devotees see them as much more than a temporary escape from their often-dismal social reality. They may swoon at the hotly debated romantic intrigues, but they are also emboldened by the female characters, all of whom are strong, independent fighters. Alongside illustrative scenes from the series, the documentary brings us the personal stories of women who followed in the footsteps of their heroines to fight for their rights, and to ultimately break free of oppressed lives.

Three episodes from the Postcards from the Great Divide series examine the partisan split among the electorate in Minnesota, Florida and Texas. In THE BIG SORT by Heather Courtney, the political gulf between blue voters who choose to live in "creative-class" urban oases, as red voters remain in rural areas. Minnesota native Aaron Spading, once a conservative church-goer has turned far-left, a blue dot in a sea of red. In POST OBAMA DRAMA, by Cyndee Readdean and Deborah Hardt, African-Americans in Florida turned out in record numbers for Barack Obama In 2008 and 2012, but will they turn out for Hillary Clinton in this must-win state? In THE GIANT STILL SLEEPS by Miguel Alvarez, pundits seem convinced that a purple Texas is just around the corner due to its burgeoning Latino population, yet the state gets redder and redder. One factor is that Latino turnout remains low.

Three episodes from the Postcards from the Great Divide series examine the partisan split among the electorate in Washington, Nevada and Wisconsin. In PURPLE REIGN by Laura Nix, we follow a GOP strategist in the supposedly left-leaning state of Washington, as he works with socially moderate candidates, including a Latino former marine, to win swing districts and change the statehouse balance of power. SWINGING NEVADA by Laura Pacheco and Jackie Mow looks at Nevada, once solidly Republican. But things have changed as more Latinos have moved in. So what's the GOP strategy to win a changing purple state? WHATEVER HAPPENED TO WISCONSIN NICE? by Brad Lichtenstein, explores how the Badger State has become an ideological battleground in recent years and what to expect for the state's political future.

Four documentary shorts from the Veterans Coming Home project look at the military-civilian divide in America. "Recruiting in Times Square" goes inside the recruitment process, and the unlikely candidates who enlist, including new Americans. "From War to the Happiest Place on Earth" features an Army veteran who has a picture perfect life and job but wrestles with the demons of post-traumatic stress disorder. "Invisible Wounds" explores the trauma of military sexual assault, and one survivor who seeks justice and healing. And it's not easy being a queer pacifist Vietnam veteran in "LGBT Rights and Vets for Peace." These stories reflect the diverse post-war experience of our veterans, as civilians ask how we can truly support our troops.

Three documentary shorts from the Veterans Coming Home look at challenges our veterans face when they leave the military, and why their struggles matter to veterans and civilians alike. In VETERAN'S COURT, an innovative court of law in Phoenix that also serves as rehabilitation to keep vets who've been incarcerated from returning to jail. A VETERAN FIGHTS HOMELESSNESS IN SAN FRANCISCO is one man's personal mission to help vets with no place to call home - a reality he knows all too well. And in VETERAN'S BOND, the powerful ties soldiers have to one another, from two Afghanistan veterans who reconnect years after combat. These stories reveal the continuing courage of our veterans long after military service ends.

Three documentary shorts from the Veterans Coming Home look at challenges our veterans face when they leave the military, and why their struggles matter to veterans and civilians alike. In VETERAN'S COURT, an innovative court of law in Phoenix that also serves as rehabilitation to keep vets who've been incarcerated from returning to jail. A VETERAN FIGHTS HOMELESSNESS IN SAN FRANCISCO is one man's personal mission to help vets with no place to call home - a reality he knows all too well. And in VETERAN'S BOND, the powerful ties soldiers have to one another, from two Afghanistan veterans who reconnect years after combat. These stories reveal the continuing courage of our veterans long after military service ends.

America has 165,000 women enlisted and active, and an additional 35, 000 serving as officers - but our female soldiers are still fighting a battle of perception. Five shorts from the Veterans Coming Home Project looks at women in the military. From Nashville Public Television, WIFE, MOTHER, SOLDIER is the story of a female vet who held the line on the battlefield while her civilian husband held the line at home. FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE TEAM profiles an Army veteran and recruiter who missed the close bonds of military service - then found that camaraderie in the all-female sport of roller derby. From Wisconsin Public Television, PEACEFULLY ORGANIC looks at the difficult struggle many soldiers face in transitioning back to civilian life. In AMERICA'S FUNNIEST VETS ARE SERIOUS ABOUT SERVICE, a veteran uses comedy to share her story, including the harassment she endured in the military. And ON THE HOME FRONT reflects on the career of an Army intelligence officer who received a Bronze star for her military service - a recognition that doesn't always translate to the civilian world, especially for female veterans.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 2, revelations about presidential candidate Donald Trump's tax history show that a business loss of $916 million in 1995 may have allowed him to not pay federal income taxes for years. Later, a look at shifting demographics among Latino voters in the swing state of Florida. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. What do three pages of Trump tax returns show us? On Saturday night, The New York Times published an analysis of several pages of Donald Trump's 1995 tax return, where he declared business losses so large he may have avoided paying federal taxes for years. Trump is the first major party presidential candidate in 40 years to refuse to release his tax returns. David Barstow, who co-authored the story, joins Hari Sreenivasan. What do Florida voters want from a president? With 29 electoral votes, the swing state of Florida has drawn the attention of both presidential candidates, who are trying to determine the most important issues for the state's diverse electorate. Susan MacManus, a political science professor at the University of South Florida, joins Hari Sreenivasan. How a shifting Latino vote in Florida could influence the election: The battleground state of Florida is again considered an influential toss-up in this year's presidential election. One constituency there is getting a lot of attention from both candidates: Latino voters that have flooded into central Florida during the last decade, creating a potential swing area. NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Ivette Feliciano reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Alison Stewart reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. 'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

Obama discusses Trump on last foreign trip: U.S. President Barack Obama will complete the last scheduled foreign trip of his presidency today when he returns home from the Asian Pacific Economic Cooperation summit in Lima, Peru. Joining Alison Stewart to discuss is Gardiner Harris, White House correspondent for The New York Times, who said Obama spent the week reassuring people about President-elect Donald Trump. Survival and sadness in Iraq's Christian towns: The majority of Iraq's Christians have fled the predominantly Muslim country as the Islamic State occupied their towns in and around Mosul. Christians have lived in the region since the start of Christianity itself, but today they number less than 250,000. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay reports on how they are coping in the war-torn country.

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public. There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.

Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. Sharon Jones, soul and blues singer, dies at 60: Sharon Jones, a powerful soul and blues singer who achieved mid-life fame as lead singer for the Dap-Kings and who returned to touring this year after fighting cancer, has died. The NewsHour's Christopher Booker reports. How Trump's opposition to NAFTA affects Canada: During his campaign, President-elect Donald Trump opposed NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, which began in 1994 and opened up trade between the U.S., Canada and Mexico. He stated that the treaty sent U.S. jobs out of the country, particularly to Mexico. Alexander Panetta, a Washington correspondent for The Canadian Press, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Could the fight against ISIS give Kurds more autonomy? Kurdish fighters are on the front lines in the conflict against the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria, fighting alongside Iraqi forces. But will this fight bring the Kurds closer to independence, something they have sought in several countries for decades? Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Alison Stewart reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. 'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

How Obama, Trump and Congress are responding to Russian hacks in the U.S. election: U.S. intelligence agencies blame Russia for a series of hacks meant to undermine the presidential election. President Obama said the U.S. will respond in a yet-to-be-determined way. But President-elect Donald Trump still questions the intelligence assessment and the belief by some that Russian President Vladimir Putin directed the attacks to bolster Trump's campaign. Trump also announced his choice for secretary of state: ExxonMobil CEO Rex Tillerson who has close ties with Russia. In his year-end press conference, President Obama also addressed the ongoing humanitarian crisis in Syria and the options being considered by the White House.

A narrow frontier between warm and cold latitudes extends 500 miles from the Alaskan mainland, separating the tempestuous Bering Sea from the Pacific: the Alaska Peninsula, a cloud-cloaked land of active volcanoes, rolling tundra and the greatest concentration of the largest bears on earth. The writings of naturalist Loren Eiseley inspire this cinematic essay on a landscape where bears outnumber people and the sockeye salmon run is the most prolific in the world. At the base of the peninsula lies Katmai National Park, a wilderness larger than Yellowstone and Yosemite - combined. Farther down the peninsula, a giant volcanic caldera emerges on the horizon, so remote that more people climb Everest than visit Aniakchak National Monument. Alaska is warming at more than twice the rate of the rest of the planet. In KATMAI: ALASKA'S WILD PENINSULA, filmmaker John Grabowska profiles the remote Alaska Peninsula and asks how climate change will affect this magnificent land of wilderness and wildlife.

For thousands of years, wolves hunted buffalo across the vast North American plains until the westward settlement of the continent saw the virtual extinction of these vast herds and their eternal predators, the wolves. However, this ancient relationship was not lost altogether and continues uninterrupted in just one location -- on the northern edge of the continent's central plains in a place named Wood Buffalo National Park. Today the ancestors of those ancient buffalo and wolves still engage in epic life and death dramas across this northern land. Packs of wolves up to 30 strong hunt the largest land mammals on the continent -- buffalo. By getting to know a specific pack of wolves and the individuals that make up the pack, we get a sense of how these two animal species (wolves and buffalo) live together in what seems like a forgotten corner of the world.

In Tampa, Florida, in February 2013, a giant hole opened up under the bedroom floor of Jeffrey Bush, swallowing the 36-year-old as he slept. His body was never found. Bush was a victim of a sinkhole - a growing worldwide hazard that lurks wherever limestone and other water-soluble rocks underpin the soil. When carbon dioxide in the air dissolves in rainwater, it forms a weak acid that attacks the soft rocks, riddling them with holes like Swiss cheese. Sinkholes can occur gradually when the surface subsides into bowl-shaped depressions or suddenly, when the ground gives way - often catastrophically. Sinkholes have swallowed highways, apartment buildings, horses, camels, even golfers, with monster-size holes cracking the earth from Siberia to Louisiana. With compelling eyewitness video of dramatic collapses, and following scientists as they explore the underlying forces behind these natural disasters, NOVA travels the globe to investigate what it's like to have your world vanish beneath your feet.

On this edition for Saturday Oct. 8, Hurricane Matthew continues its path of destruction along the Eastern Seaboard and just four weeks before the election will a decades-old recording of Donald Trump's offensive remarks about women upend the presidential race? William Brangham anchors from New York. Hurricane Matthew brings damage along Atlantic coast: Hurricane Matthew has weakened to a Category 1 storm but still remains a threat to the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas as it continues to crawl up the Eastern Seaboard. The storm has killed at least three people in North Carolina and left 800,000 people in Florida without power on Saturday. NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan joins William Brangham from Florida. Republicans denounce Trump after vulgar comments: Some Republican officials are calling for presidential candidate Donald Trump to drop his bid for the presidency after an 11-year-old video that was released on Friday showed him making vulgar, sexual remarks about groping women. William Brangham reports. How will Trump's comments about women affect the race? A video from 2005, released on Friday, shows Republican candidate Donald Trump making lewd comments about groping women, leading to calls from other Republicans to drop his bid for president. But Trump said on Saturday he will "never" quit the race. POLITICO columnist Roger Simon joins William Brangham to discuss the impact of Trump's statements on the race. Haiti reeling after Hurricane Matthew destruction: The island of Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, has borne the brunt of damage from Hurricane Matthew. Nearly 900 people have been killed by the storm, and thousands more have been displaced. Journalist Ingrid Arneson joins William Brangham via Skype from Haiti's capital Port-au-Prince.

Later, learn how members of Italy's 'art squad' are attempting to save priceless artworks after the town of Amatrice was decimated by an earthquake last month. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Is Ohio less important in this year's election? Ohio has long been known as a bellwether state when it comes to the race for the White House. No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio and no Democrat since John F. Kennedy has become president without a victory in the state. But this year the stakes may not be as high. Jonathan Martin of The New York Times joins Hari Sreenivasan from Washington, D.C. Oxford study could point to new treatments for HIV: This week, Oxford University researchers released a study that may impact treatments for HIV. The study looked at young children in South Africa with HIV and found that 10 percent of them never developed symptoms of AIDS. Philip Goulder, a professor of pediatrics at Oxford University who led the research team, joins Hari Sreenivasan. Saving treasured art after Italy's major earthquake: In August, a 6.2-magnitude earthquake shook central Italy, killing almost 300 people, leaving thousands homeless, and causing an estimated $5 billion in property damage. Today, rescue efforts center on saving the area's cultural artifacts. NewsHour Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 9, Republicans distance themselves from Donald Trump after his comments about women. Then, assessing the damage from Hurricane Matthew along the Atlantic Coast. Later, learn how the small number of women in Utah's Legislature is affecting policy in the state. William Brangham anchors from New York. In Florida, cleanup begins after Hurricane Matthew: Hurricane Matthew has been downgraded to a post-tropical cyclone after causing a trail of damage from Florida to North Carolina over the weekend, though it continues to flood the East Coast. At least 19 people in the U.S. have died as a result of the storm. The NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan visited residents of St. Augustine, Florida, to assess the damage. Clinton, Trump prepare for debate amid Republican exodus: As Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump prepare for tonight's second presidential debate, the number of Republicans who have withdrawn support for Trump continues to grow. The two candidates will meet in a town hall debate at Washington University in St. Louis. PBS NewsHour's John Yang joins William Brangham outside the debate hall for a preview. Why does Utah have so few female legislators? Nationally, about a quarter of all state legislators are women. But Utah's numbers are some of the lowest in the country, with six female senators in its 29-member Senate and 10 female representatives in its 75-member house. The NewsHour Weekend's Christopher Booker reports on the reasons for that imbalance. The challenges of a town hall debate: On Sunday night in St. Louis, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump meet for their second of three televised 90-minute debates. This time, the debate will follow a town meeting format, with voters joining the moderator in asking questions. As NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield reports, that format has tripped up many candidates before.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 25, preserving America's first black filmmakers who were forced to work outside of white Hollywood. Later, adventurous eaters in Europe are calling crickets, mealworms, grasshoppers and other insects the newest "super food." Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Chefs in Europe experiment with insects: In Europe, adventurous eaters are calling crickets, mealworms and grasshoppers a new "super food" due to their high levels of essential amino and fatty acids. Eating insects also has ecological benefits because they can be easier to farm than other animals. But they are still uncommon in food throughout Europe and the U.S. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman reports. Preserving the history of America's first black filmmakers: In the early part of the 20th century, black filmmakers were forced to work outside the white Hollywood mainstream -- and produced around 500 films, mainly for black audiences. To preserve this history, the company Kino Lorber released a five-disc collection this year containing 20 hours of these films. Executive producer Paul Miller joins NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians

see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality-not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. This Week PBS' To The Contrary presents a special documentary about LGBT and the United Methodist Church. The United Methodist Church remains officially opposed to homosexuality, same sex marriage, and self-avowed gay pastors. It's official rulebook - the book of discipline states - "The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching." But not all United Methodist congregations agree with the church's view on the issue. The fight on this issue is testing the faith more than ever and Dividing the United Methodist Church.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart. How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years. Also, learn how one journalist is facing PTSD after years of covering traumatic events. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The number of people killed by police dropped slightly in 2016: This year the number of people killed by police stands at 957, down slightly from 991 in 2015, according to the Washington Post. While white men accounted for the most deaths by police, black men were three times more likely to be killed when population rates were factored in. Washington Post Reporter Kimbriell Kelly, one of the authors of the year-end report, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Years after transatlantic slavery, DNA tests give clarity: DNA ancestry tests in the last decade have helped some African-Americans reconcile with aspects of their identities that might have been obscured during the transatlantic slave trade. Alondra Nelson chronicles this journey in her book, "The Social Life of DNA: Race, Reparations and Reconciliation After the Genome." Nelson joins Hari Sreenivasan. A journalist's story of PTSD: Journalist Dean Yates followed stories of conflict in the Middle East and Southeast Asia for years in his job for Reuters, producing reporting around some of the region's most important events. Earlier this year, he was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder, a condition that can result from exposure to traumatic events. Yates, who wrote about his experience with PTSD for Reuters last month, joins Alison Stewart.

Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public. There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.

Bethlehem's Holy Family Hospital: In the midst of all the political and religious tensions in the city of Bethlehem, the Catholic Order of Malta oversees Holy Family Hospital, just up the hill from the Church of the Nativity. Members of the medical staff are primarily Christian, and most of the patients are Muslim, but the hospital serves everyone, especially mothers, their newborn babies, and all children who need special care. "Our philosophy," said one of the leading doctors, "is that poor people deserve the best." The Order of Malta has been caring for the sick and the poor in the Middle East for more than 900 years.

Join us on our discovery of Europe's Christmas Markets, where the town center, market square or just the narrow, cobblestone streets of the cities and towns of Europe come alive in winter with festively decorated wooden stalls offering all sorts of treats and delights. As we travel through Germany, France and Switzerland we visit cities and towns and learn of their history, see their major sights, and visit their charming markets. Besides being a visual treat, the show is also a musical treat, as T the Kingston Trio provides special folk arrangements of traditional Christmas carols to add to the magic and enchantment of the medieval and castle towns we visit. In our visit to Bernkastel-Kues we see the town hall decorated as an advent calendar, and learn of the traditional beverage of the markets, the Gluhwein. In Nuremberg we visit the imposing castle, and one of the most famous of all the Christmas markets. You can almost smell the roasting sausages and gingerbread sold in the stalls. In Rothenburg we learn of the traditional wooden Christmas decorations from the son of the founder of the Kathe Wolfhart Christmas store, and wander along the ramparts the the fairy tale village. Then we have a quick stop in the wine town of Rudesheim. A unique visit is made to the ancient town of Michelstadt and its Christmas market. And then into France, to see how the French celebrate the season in Strasbourg. We conclude our travels in Switzerland, with the sights and sounds of the holidays in Basel and and the alpine city of Lucerne. This show is a true Christmas treat, as we experience Europe at a time of community, conviviality and color. It will fill your senses with the warmth and the fun of the holiday season, with some geography and history lessons to boot!

Alison Stewart anchors from New York. In North Carolina, new laws to limit governor's power: Last month, incumbent Republican Gov. Pat McCrory lost the governor's race to Democrat Roy Cooper. The election spurred Republican state lawmakers to call a special legislative session and pass laws that limit the power of the incoming governor. Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the University of North Carolina Law School in Chapel Hill, joins Alison Stewart. As Aleppo lies in ruins, thousands wait to escape: In Syria, the evacuation of civilians from Aleppo continues as thousands of people wait to leave the besieged city. Once the most populous city in the country, previously rebel-held Aleppo is now largely in ruins after a protracted assault by Syrian government forces. Anne Barnard, a reporter with The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart from Beirut for more. In Cuba, American tourists increase demand for hotels: Two years ago, President Barack Obama restored diplomatic relations with Cuba. Since then, Cold War-era travel restrictions that prohibited most Americans from visiting were lifted, leading to a surge of U.S. tourists and a scramble to accommodate them. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman looks at the growing hospitality industry in Cuba.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 4, people mourn the death of Cuban communist leader Fidel Castro in the city of Santiago at his funeral. Later, a new documentary recounts how Rwanda was the first country to prosecute mass rape as a war crime in international court. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more. Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba. Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart. Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 24, 'Othello: The Remix' is bringing a classic Shakespeare tale to audiences through hip-hop. Later, a historic skate park in Portland is facing the pressures of gentrification. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Iconic Portland skate park on the front lines of gentrification: When skaters built a park in an industrial area of Portland beneath the Burnside Bridge 26 years ago without the city's permission, they did not anticipate the major housing developments that are taking shape there today. Now, what has become a subculture cornerstone is now under pressure -- even as some developers say they will respect that history. NewsHour Weekend's Christopher Booker reports. 'Othello: The Remix' gives Shakespeare the hip-hop treatment: At the Westside Theatre in New York City, audiences are watching "Othello: the Remix," a retelling of William Shakespeare's classic play that transforms the protagonist into a rising hip-hop star. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano sits down with the Q Brothers, the rap and theater artists who created the show, and other cast members.

Hiring the Homeless: While many cities in the U.S. have moved to criminalize homelessness, imposing fees for lying down, camping and begging, Albuquerque, New Mexico has taken a different approach. It has initiated a program it calls There's a Better Way, picking up homeless individuals and transporting them to jobs that pay them in cash at the end of a five-hour work period. As correspondent Lucky Severson reports, the program is now in its second year and Mayor Richard Berry is confident it works. But some critics think the mayor's approach has created an increase in the number of panhandlers and homeless.

Greek fishing village welcomes migrants, while others turn them away: Amidst the wave of anti-migrant sentiment coursing through Europe, one village has shown a rare level of hospitality to those making the journey across the Mediterranean. In Skala Sykaminia, located on the Greek island of Lesbos, Nobel-nominated villagers rescue and shelter migrants -- whereas neighboring towns see the refugees as a threat. Special correspondent Malcolm Brabant reports.

On this episode for Sunday, Oct. 23, assessing a merger between telecom giant AT&T and Time Warner. Later, senate Republicans are enduring a balancing act to keep control of the House in the weeks leading up to Election Day. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Humanitarian concerns grow in Mosul: Iraqi government troops and Peshmerga fighters launched a new offensive on towns and villages around Mosul, the country's second largest city that is also controlled by the Islamic State. The U.N. warns that the offensive could displace as many as a million people. Katharina Ritz with the International Red Cross in Baghdad joins Hari Sreenivasan via Skype to discuss. What does AT&T, Time Warner merger mean? AT&T, the nation's second largest cell phone carrier, is buying Time Warner for $85.4 billion and will gain control of TV networks like HBO, TNT and CNN in the biggest deal of its kind since Comcast acquired NBC Universal five years ago. Wall Street Journal reporter Keach Hagey joins Hari Sreenivasan to talk about how the deal might affect clients. GOP incumbent walks line in PA on supporting Trump: Even if Hillary Clinton wins the White House, she could face difficulties on Capitol Hill, if Republicans continue to control the House of Representatives and Senate. One of the most vulnerable Republican incumbents is

Sen. Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield went to the Keystone State to look at Toomey's challenge.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 17, President-elect Donald Trump wraps up his post-election tour. Later, Cubans are scrambling to accommodate a new surge in American tourists. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. In North Carolina, new laws to limit governor's power: Last month, incumbent Republican Gov. Pat McCrory lost the governor's race to Democrat Roy Cooper. The election spurred Republican state lawmakers to call a special legislative session and pass laws that limit the power of the incoming governor. Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the University of North Carolina Law School in Chapel Hill, joins Alison Stewart. As Aleppo lies in ruins, thousands wait to escape: In Syria, the evacuation of civilians from Aleppo continues as thousands of people wait to leave the besieged city. Once the most populous city in the country, previously rebel-held Aleppo is now largely in ruins after a protracted assault by Syrian government forces. Anne Barnard, a reporter with The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart from Beirut for more. In Cuba, American tourists increase demand for hotels: Two years ago, President Barack Obama restored diplomatic relations with Cuba. Since then, Cold War-era travel restrictions that prohibited most Americans from visiting were lifted, leading to a surge of U.S. tourists and a scramble to accommodate them. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman looks at the growing hospitality industry in Cuba.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 18, waging an information war, North Koreans who have escaped the country are smuggling media on USB sticks back to their homeland in hopes of helping others learn about life outside the country. Later, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention director Tom Frieden talks about new data on opioid overdoses. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Under Trump, White House staff shifts to right: Since winning the election six weeks ago, Donald Trump has nominated most of his cabinet and picked top White House staff, all significant players in shaping U.S. policy. He'll also have Republican majorities in both houses of Congress on his side. NewsHour Weekend's Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart to analyze the balance of power in Washington. Heroin deaths exceeded gun homicides in 2015: Last year, more than 30,000 people died from opioid overdoses, which cause almost two-thirds of all overdoses in the U.S., according to data released last week by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Those data also show that last year, heroin deaths went up 20 percent, exceeding gun homicides. Dr. Tom Frieden, director of the CDC, joins Alison Stewart. Defectors lift curtain on North Korea's information blackout: North Korea's totalitarian government exercises tight control of all media consumed within its borders to maintain power over nearly 25 million citizens. But some who have escaped the country are waging an information war, smuggling media on USB sticks in hopes of helping North Koreans learn about life outside the country. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy reports from South Korea.

Salt Lake City Refugee Resettlement (Originally published: June 17, 2016): Earlier this year, at least 30 US governors said they don't want Syrian refugees to come to their states. Conservative, red-state Utah, however, not only welcomes refugees but also, over the years, has resettled 60,000 of them. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from Salt Lake City on why Utah has a history of welcoming strangers and what religious groups are doing to help out.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

The 'thrill of the chase' in perpetuating fake news: This election cycle saw its fair share of so-called "fake news." On December 4, an armed man walked into a Washington, DC, pizza joint, claiming he needed to investigate a story he had heard: that Hillary Clinton and her former campaign manager were hosting a child sex ring there. Hari Sreenivasan speaks with The Washington Post's Marc Fisher about how and why this fiction spread as fact.

The 'thin legitimacy' of social media as a news source: Due to the proliferation of social media, getting people to read serious journalism is harder than ever, says New York University professor Jay Rosen. Anyone with a smartphone can produce content, and Facebook doesn't have an editor in chief -- so it's up to consumers to be selective about their news sources. This is Rosen's Brief But Spectacular take on journalism in today's digital world.

While white men accounted for the most deaths by police, black men were three times more likely to be killed when population rates were factored in. Washington Post Reporter Kimbriell Kelly, one of the authors of the year-end report, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Years after transatlantic slavery, DNA tests give clarity: DNA ancestry tests in the last decade have helped some African-Americans reconcile with aspects of their identities that might have been obscured during the transatlantic slave trade. Alondra Nelson chronicles this journey in her book, "The Social Life of DNA: Race, Reparations and Reconciliation After the Genome." Nelson joins Hari Sreenivasan. A journalist's story of PTSD: Journalist Dean Yates followed stories of conflict in the Middle East and Southeast Asia for years in his job for Reuters, producing reporting around some of the region's most important events. Earlier this year, he was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder, a condition that can result from exposure to traumatic events. Yates, who wrote about his experience with PTSD for Reuters last month, joins Alison Stewart.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 25, preserving America's first black filmmakers who were forced to work outside of white Hollywood. Later, adventurous eaters in Europe are calling crickets, mealworms, grasshoppers and other insects the newest "super food." Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Chefs in Europe experiment with insects: In Europe, adventurous eaters are calling crickets, mealworms and grasshoppers a new "super food" due to their high levels of essential amino and fatty acids. Eating insects also has ecological benefits because they can be easier to farm than other animals. But they are still uncommon in food throughout Europe and the U.S. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman reports. Preserving the history of America's first black filmmakers: In the early part of the 20th century, black filmmakers were forced to work outside the white Hollywood mainstream -- and produced around 500 films, mainly for black audiences. To preserve this history, the company Kino Lorber released a five-disc collection this year containing 20 hours of these films. Executive producer Paul Miller joins NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy.

Larry Brilliant: Dr. Larry Brilliant first achieved notice as a young hippie doctor in San Francisco in 1969. As correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Brilliant became a disciple of an Indian guru and worked on helping to eradicate smallpox, a disease that once killed millions of people every year. Today, Brilliant is a guru to many elites in Silicon Valley and a philanthropist who embraces the ethical wisdom of many faiths, working to combat global threats and scourges such as pandemics, climate change, and nuclear proliferation. His new memoir is called Sometimes Brilliant: The Impossible Adventure of a Spiritual Seeker and Visionary Physician Who Helped Conquer the Worst Disease in History.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 2, revelations about presidential candidate Donald Trump's tax history show that a business loss of $916 million in 1995 may have allowed him to not pay federal income taxes for years. Later, a look at shifting demographics among Latino voters in the swing state of Florida. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. What do three pages of Trump tax returns show us? On Saturday night, The New York Times published an analysis of several pages of Donald Trump's 1995 tax return, where he declared business losses so large he may have avoided paying federal taxes for years. Trump is the first major party presidential candidate in 40 years to refuse to release his tax returns. David Barstow, who co-authored the story, joins Hari Sreenivasan. What do Florida voters want from a president? With 29 electoral votes, the swing state of Florida has drawn the attention of both presidential candidates, who are trying to determine the most important issues for the state's diverse electorate. Susan MacManus, a political science professor at the University of South Florida, joins Hari Sreenivasan. How a shifting Latino vote in Florida could influence the election: The battleground state of Florida is again considered an influential toss-up in this year's presidential election. One constituency there is getting a lot of attention from both candidates: Latino voters that have flooded into central Florida during the last decade, creating a potential swing area. NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Ivette Feliciano reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 25, preserving America's first black filmmakers who were forced to work outside of white Hollywood. Later, adventurous eaters in Europe are calling crickets, mealworms, grasshoppers and other insects the newest "super food." Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Chefs in Europe experiment with insects: In Europe, adventurous eaters are calling crickets, mealworms and grasshoppers a new "super food" due to their high levels of essential amino and fatty acids. Eating insects also has ecological benefits because they can be easier to farm than other animals. But they are still uncommon in food throughout Europe and the U.S. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman reports. Preserving the history of America's first black filmmakers: In the early part of the 20th century, black filmmakers were forced to work outside the white Hollywood mainstream -- and produced around 500 films, mainly for black audiences. To preserve this history, the company Kino Lorber released a five-disc collection this year containing 20 hours of these films. Executive producer Paul Miller joins NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 31, the number of people killed by police in the United States dropped slightly in 2016, and DNA testing is bringing clarity to some in the African-American community. Also, learn how one journalist is facing PTSD after years of covering traumatic events. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The number of people killed by police dropped slightly in 2016: This year the number of people killed by police stands at 957, down slightly from 991 in 2015, according to the Washington Post. While white men accounted for the most deaths by police, black men were three times more likely to be killed when population rates were factored in. Washington Post Reporter Kimbriell Kelly, one of the authors of the year-end report, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Years after transatlantic slavery, DNA tests give clarity: DNA ancestry tests in the last decade have helped some African-Americans reconcile with aspects of their identities that might have been obscured during the transatlantic slave trade. Alondra Nelson chronicles this journey in her book, "The Social Life of DNA: Race, Reparations and Reconciliation After the Genome." Nelson joins Hari Sreenivasan. A journalist's story of PTSD: Journalist Dean Yates followed stories of conflict in the Middle East and Southeast Asia for years in his job for Reuters, producing reporting around some of the region's most important events. Earlier this year, he was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder, a condition that can result from exposure to traumatic events. Yates, who wrote about his experience with PTSD for Reuters last month, joins Alison Stewart.

Larry Brilliant: Dr. Larry Brilliant first achieved notice as a young hippie doctor in San Francisco in 1969. As correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Brilliant became a disciple of an Indian guru and worked on helping to eradicate smallpox, a disease that once killed millions of people every year. Today, Brilliant is a guru to many elites in Silicon Valley and a philanthropist who embraces the ethical wisdom of many faiths, working to combat global threats and scourges such as pandemics, climate change, and nuclear proliferation. His new memoir is called Sometimes Brilliant: The Impossible Adventure of a Spiritual Seeker and Visionary Physician Who Helped Conquer the Worst Disease in History.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality-not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

Cory Mann is a quirky Tlingit businessman hustling to make a dollar in Juneau Alaska. He gets hungry for smoked salmon, nostalgic for his childhood, and decides to spend a summer smoking fish at his family's traditional fish camp. The unusual story of his life and the untold history of his people interweave with the process of preparing traditional food as he struggles to pay his bills, keep the IRS off his back, and keep his business afloat. By turns tragic, bizarre, or just plain ridiculous, Smokin' Fish, tells the story of one man's attempts to navigate the messy zone of collision between the modern world and an ancient culture.

The Obama Legacy: From hope and change to achievements and setbacks: President Barack Obama was elected by promising hope and change, but during his eight years in the White House he learned that governing isn't always easy. His domestic agenda focused on a weak economy and expanding access to health care. His foreign policy doctrine was about negotiation over conflict. Despite successes, Obama's critics can point to setbacks like the rise of ISIS and Russia's growing influence. As the nation's first black president enters his final month in office, we explore his legacy, what he accomplished and what remains undone.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

Later, learn how members of Italy's 'art squad' are attempting to save priceless artworks after the town of Amatrice was decimated by an earthquake last month. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Is Ohio less important in this year's election? Ohio has long been known as a bellwether state when it comes to the race for the White House. No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio and no Democrat since John F. Kennedy has become president without a victory in the state. But this year the stakes may not be as high. Jonathan Martin of The New York Times joins Hari Sreenivasan from Washington, D.C. Oxford study could point to new treatments for HIV: This week, Oxford University researchers released a study that may impact treatments for HIV. The study looked at young children in South Africa with HIV and found that 10 percent of them never developed symptoms of AIDS. Philip Goulder, a professor of pediatrics at Oxford University who led the research team, joins Hari Sreenivasan. On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 2, revelations about presidential candidate Donald Trump's tax history show that a business loss of $916 million in 1995 may have allowed him to not pay federal income taxes for years. Later, a look at shifting demographics among Latino voters in the swing state of Florida. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. What do three pages of Trump tax returns show us? On Saturday night, The New York Times published an analysis of several pages of Donald Trump's 1995 tax return, where he declared business losses so large he may have avoided paying federal taxes for years. Trump is the first major party presidential candidate in 40 years to refuse to release his tax returns. David Barstow, who co-authored the story, joins Hari Sreenivasan. What do Florida voters want from a president? With 29 electoral votes, the swing state of Florida has drawn the attention of both presidential candidates, who are trying to determine the most important issues for the state's diverse electorate. Susan MacManus, a political science professor at the University of South Florida, joins Hari Sreenivasan. How a shifting Latino vote in Florida could influence the election: The battleground state of Florida is again considered an influential toss-up in this year's presidential election. One constituency there is getting a lot of attention from both candidates: Latino voters that have flooded into central Florida during the last decade, creating a potential swing area. On this edition for Saturday Oct. 8, Hurricane Matthew continues its path of destruction along the Eastern Seaboard and just four weeks before the election will a decades-old recording of Donald Trump's offensive remarks about women upend the presidential race? William Brangham anchors from New York. Hurricane Matthew brings damage along Atlantic coast: Hurricane Matthew has weakened to a Category 1 storm but still remains a threat to the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas as it continues to crawl up the Eastern Seaboard. The storm has killed at least three people in North Carolina and left 800,000 people in Florida without power on Saturday. NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan joins William Brangham from Florida. Republicans denounce Trump after vulgar comments: Some Republican officials are calling for presidential candidate Donald Trump to drop his bid for the presidency after an 11-year-old video that was released on Friday showed him making vulgar, sexual remarks about groping women. William Brangham reports. How will Trump's comments about women affect the race? A video from 2005, released on Friday, shows Republican candidate Donald Trump making lewd comments about groping women, leading to calls from other Republicans to drop his bid for president. But Trump said on Saturday he will "never" quit the race. POLITICO columnist Roger Simon joins William Brangham to discuss the impact of Trump's statements on the race. Haiti reeling after Hurricane Matthew destruction: The island of Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, has borne the brunt of damage from Hurricane Matthew. Nearly 900 people have been killed by the storm, and thousands more have been displaced. Journalist Ingrid Arneson joins William Brangham via Skype from Haiti's capital Port-au-Prince.

In Florida, cleanup begins after Hurricane Matthew: Hurricane Matthew has been downgraded to a post-tropical cyclone after causing a trail of damage from Florida to North Carolina over the weekend, though it continues to flood the East Coast. At least 19 people in the U.S. have died as a result of the storm. The NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan visited residents of St. Augustine, Florida, to assess the damage. Clinton, Trump prepare for debate amid Republican exodus: As Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump prepare for tonight's second presidential debate, the number of Republicans who have withdrawn support for Trump continues to grow. The two candidates will meet in a town hall debate at Washington University in St. Louis. PBS NewsHour's John Yang joins William Brangham outside the debate hall for a preview. Why does Utah have so few female legislators? Nationally, about a quarter of all state legislators are women. But Utah's numbers are some of the lowest in the country, with six female senators in its 29-member Senate and 10 female representatives in its 75-member house. The NewsHour Weekend's Christopher Booker reports on the reasons for that imbalance. The challenges of a town hall debate: On Sunday night in St. Louis, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump meet for their second of three televised 90-minute debates. This time, the debate will follow a town meeting format, with voters joining the moderator in asking questions. As

The 2005 video released last week of Donald Trump speaking about groping women, followed by a series of women accusing Trump of sexual assault, is costing him support in his own party. To discuss the schism among Republican leaders, national political reporter for The Hill Jonathan Swan joins Hari Sreenivasan. A child dies every other day from gun accidents in U.S. A joint investigation by the Associated Press and the USA Today Network has found that in the first six months of this year, gun accidents killed at least one child in the U.S. every other day. Both the shooters and victims were most likely to be three years old. Ryan Foley, one of the reporters on the story for the AP in Iowa, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Companies race to make electric cars mainstream: When Tesla Motors announced in March it would build a new, all-electric car at a starting price of $35,000, it was a turning point for the company. General Motors is also developing an all-electric sedan and hopes to market it early next year. Will increased competition and new options spur more sales? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent John Larson reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 30, the FBI's announcement to review more emails related to Hillary Clinton looms less than two weeks ahead of Election Day. Later, presidential candidates are after the votes of Florida's most diverse block: millennials. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Last year's James Bond movie, "Spectre," opened with a Day of the Dead parade featuring floats, puppets, and skeletons. The sequence, filmed in Mexico City, became the inspiration for an annual parade designed to draw tourists, where ancient Aztec tradition intermingled with Halloween. Alison Stewart has more. Is FBI email probe this election's 'October surprise'? From the Kennedys getting Martin Luther King, Jr. out of jail to George W. Bush's youthful drunk driving arrest, the term "October surprise" has come to mean an event in the closing weeks of a presidential campaign that could affect the race. The FBI's announcement that it is reviewing more emails related to Clinton might be this election's October surprise. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart. As election nears, candidates court millennials: There are an estimated 83 million millennials in the U.S. -- and candidates want their vote. In the last presidential election, 45 percent of millennials turned out to vote, and the group tends to lean further left than other generations, according to the Pew Research Center. PBS NewsHour correspondent Christopher Booker reports from Florida on how the generation is connecting with the candidates.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Alison Stewart reports.

On this episode for Sunday, Oct. 23, assessing a merger between telecom giant AT&T and Time Warner. Later, senate Republicans are enduring a balancing act to keep control of the House in the weeks leading up to Election Day. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Humanitarian concerns grow in Mosul: Iraqi government troops and Peshmerga fighters launched a new offensive on towns and villages around Mosul, the country's second largest city that is also controlled by the Islamic State. The U.N. warns that the offensive could displace as many as a million people. Katharina Ritz with the International Red Cross in Baghdad joins Hari Sreenivasan via Skype to discuss. What does AT&T, Time Warner merger mean? AT&T, the nation's second largest cell phone carrier, is buying Time Warner for $85.4 billion and will gain control of TV networks like HBO, TNT and CNN in the biggest deal of its kind since Comcast acquired NBC Universal five years ago. Wall Street Journal reporter Keach Hagey joins Hari Sreenivasan to talk about how the deal might affect clients. GOP incumbent walks line in PA on supporting Trump: Even if Hillary Clinton wins the White House, she could face difficulties on Capitol Hill, if Republicans continue to control the House of Representatives and Senate. One of the most vulnerable Republican incumbents is Sen. Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield went to the Keystone State to look at Toomey's challenge.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

Breaking down U.S.'s role in Yemen's civil war: The U.S. military is investigating a possible third missile launch against U.S. navy ships patrolling the Red Sea within a week. The Pentagon said two previous missile launches came from Shiite rebels at war with Yemen's exiled, internationally-recognized government. Barbara Bodine, director of the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy at Georgetown University, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Can Trump expand beyond his base before third debate? With three weeks left in the presidential campaign, Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton leads Republican Donald Trump in opinion polls and donations. Meanwhile, Trump has expanded his claim that the election is 'rigged.' NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. California to vote on legalizing recreational marijuana: California, the first state to legalize medical marijuana 20 years ago, will vote in November on whether to legalize recreational use for people over the age of 21. With 39 million residents and the world's 6th-largest economy, California's status could resonate throughout the country. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Mike Taibbi reports.

Charting the course to victory from swing state Ohio: No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio, and the same has been true of Democrats since John F. Kennedy. How are voters in the state feeling in the final days of the election? The NewsHour's John Yang, who is covering the Clinton campaign, joins Hari Sreenivasan from Cleveland, Ohio. Will Trump take the battleground state of Iowa? During the last two decades, Iowa has largely voted for Democratic presidential candidates. But this year Republican Donald Trump is expected to take the state. The NewsHour's Jeffrey Brown, who is covering the Trump campaign, joins Alison Stewart from Sioux City, Iowa, to explain what has changed in the battleground state. An expert's preview of election night: As this year's hard-fought presidential race enters its final days, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump are campaigning for a path to the 270 electoral votes needed to take the White House. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield offers a close look at the key results and trends to watch for, hour by hour. This system calls for popular vote to determine winner: Four times in U.S. history, the winner of the nationwide popular vote has lost the Electoral College and the general election. But a proposal called the National Popular Vote Interstate Compact would automatically allocate participating states' Electoral College votes to whoever wins the national popular vote. Hari Sreenivasan reports.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart. How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years. Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. In North Carolina, new laws to limit governor's power: Last month, incumbent Republican Gov. Pat McCrory lost the governor's race to Democrat Roy Cooper. The election spurred Republican state lawmakers to call a special legislative session and pass laws that limit the power of the incoming governor. Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the University of North Carolina Law School in Chapel Hill, joins Alison Stewart. As Aleppo lies in ruins, thousands wait to escape: In Syria, the evacuation of civilians from Aleppo continues as thousands of people wait to leave the besieged city. Once the most populous city in the country, previously rebel-held Aleppo is now largely in ruins after a protracted assault by Syrian government forces. Anne Barnard, a reporter with The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart from Beirut for more. In Cuba, American tourists increase demand for hotels: Two years ago, President Barack Obama restored diplomatic relations with Cuba. Since then, Cold War-era travel restrictions that prohibited most Americans from visiting were lifted, leading to a surge of U.S. tourists and a scramble to accommodate them. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. 'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 18, waging an information war, North Koreans who have escaped the country are smuggling media on USB sticks back to their homeland in hopes of helping others learn about life outside the country. Later, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention director Tom Frieden talks about new data on opioid overdoses. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Under Trump, White House staff shifts to right: Since winning the election six weeks ago, Donald Trump has nominated most of his cabinet and picked top White House staff, all significant players in shaping U.S. policy. He'll also have Republican majorities in both houses of Congress on his side. NewsHour Weekend's Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart to analyze the balance of power in Washington. Heroin deaths exceeded gun homicides in 2015: Last year, more than 30,000 people died from opioid overdoses, which cause almost two-thirds of all overdoses in the U.S., according to data released last week by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Those data also show that last year, heroin deaths went up 20 percent, exceeding gun homicides. Dr. Tom Frieden, director of the CDC, joins Alison Stewart. Defectors lift curtain on North Korea's information blackout: North Korea's totalitarian government exercises tight control of all media consumed within its borders to maintain power over nearly 25 million citizens. But some who have escaped the country are waging an information war, smuggling media on USB sticks in hopes of helping North Koreans learn about life outside the country. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy reports from South Korea.

Election 2016: Candidates' Religious Backgrounds: Hillary Clinton is a United Methodist. Donald Trump identifies himself as a Presbyterian. Tim Kaine is a Roman Catholic, and Mike Pence describes himself as "Christian, conservative and Republican-in that order." In this week's special election report, correspondent Kim Lawton examines the religious backgrounds of the major party candidates and how that influences their politics.

Election 2016: Catholic Voters: As part of the program's ongoing election coverage, correspondent Kim Lawton looks at Catholic voters in 2016. In 2012, they were almost evenly divided between candidates Barack Obama and Mitt Romney. Sharp divisions and political polarizations persist in this election cycle as well. Lawton reports on the issues Catholic voters are emphasizing and the efforts of both the Trump and Clinton campaigns to reach out to them. She talks with voters at a Catholic parish in Arlington, Virginia, and with faculty and students at the Catholic University of America. Says Professor Stephen Schneck, director of Catholic University's Institute for Policy Research & Catholic Studies: "A good number of us find ourselves a little bit at sea given the ugliness, really, of this presidential campaign. What's a Catholic to do? What's a Christian to do?"

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public. There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.

Religious Debate and the Campaign: With less than four weeks until the election, faith groups continue to respond to the turmoil of the presidential campaigns. The release of a tape with sexually offensive comments from Donald Trump has provoked vigorous debate among many evangelicals, conservative Catholics and Mormons. Host Bob Abernethy and Religion News Service reporter David Gibson discuss some of the religious reactions and their likely effects.

Shaun Casey on Religion and Diplomacy: This week, the US State Department sponsored a conference in Washington on the intersection of religion and diplomacy. Clergy, faith-based activists, academics, and diplomats attended. Critics have long charged that the US government has not done a good job in acknowledging the role of religion in foreign policy. Three years ago, Secretary of State John Kerry established a new office to address the problem. Correspondent Kim Lawton talks with the head of that office, US Special Representative for Religion and Global Affairs Shaun Casey.

According to the Council on American-Islamic Relations, 85 percent of American Muslims who responded to its recent poll believe Islamophobia and anti-Muslim sentiment have increased in the past year. Florida's 170,000 Muslim Americans could very well be a critical factor in determining who carries this battleground state.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality-not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

U.S. sanctions Russia for election hacks, Kerry rebukes Israeli settlements and Trump expresses frustration with Obama's policies: The Obama administration announced new economic sanctions against Russia in response to the Kremlin's involvement in computer hacking meant to disrupt the presidential election. President-elect Trump said the U.S. should "get on with our lives." While Russia has not yet retaliated for the sanctions, Vladimir Putin may respond in the future. Also this week, Secretary of State John Kerry delivered a sharp rebuke of Israel for continuing to build settlements in the West Bank. The disagreement is the latest strain on the relationship between President Obama and Netanyahu, but once again Trump expressed his frustration with his successor's policy.

The Obama Legacy: From hope and change to achievements and setbacks: President Barack Obama was elected by promising hope and change, but during his eight years in the White House he learned that governing isn't always easy. His domestic agenda focused on a weak economy and expanding access to health care. His foreign policy doctrine was about negotiation over conflict. Despite successes, Obama's critics can point to setbacks like the rise of ISIS and Russia's growing influence. As the nation's first black president enters his final month in office, we explore his legacy, what he accomplished and what remains undone.

How Obama, Trump and Congress are responding to Russian hacks in the U.S. election: U.S. intelligence agencies blame Russia for a series of hacks meant to undermine the presidential election. President Obama said the U.S. will respond in a yet-to-be-determined way. But President-elect Donald Trump still questions the intelligence assessment and the belief by some that Russian President Vladimir Putin directed the attacks to bolster Trump's campaign. Trump also announced his choice for secretary of state: ExxonMobil CEO Rex Tillerson who has close ties with Russia. In his year-end press conference, President Obama also addressed the ongoing humanitarian crisis in Syria and the options being considered by the White House.

The Trump Transition: A deep dive into his unconventional cabinet picks: President-elect Donald Trump continued to announce the team that will help implement his new agenda in the White House, but several of his picks are raising concerns among his critics. Trump tapped a climate change denier to lead the EPA, a minimum wage critic to lead the Labor Department and three retired generals to key national security posts. What do Trump's choices signal about his key policy priorities and the shift in American foreign policy when he is sworn in as president?

Trump takes victory lap and strikes deal to save American jobs while Democrats debate the way forward: President-elect Donald Trump visited Indiana this week to celebrate the announcement from manufacturing company Carrier that they will keep nearly 1,000 jobs in the U.S. He then kicked off his post-election "Thank You Tour" in Ohio, where he told energized rally attendees that he would come through on his many campaign promises. Meanwhile, Democrats continue to question the election results. Rep. Nancy Pelosi was reelected to another term as House minority leader, but she faced a challenge that raises serious questions for the party's path forward.

FBI reviews newly found Clinton emails as candidates make final pitch to voters: Hillary Clinton's email problem came back to forefront Friday as FBI Director James Comey told Congress it was reviewing new emails related to her use of a private email server. Comey recommended no charges be filed against the Democratic nominee in July, and today Clinton called for the FBI to release the "full and complete facts" because the election is just 11 days away and voters in many states have already cast their ballots. Donald Trump, who has spent several weeks on defense, renewed his attacks on Clinton's "corruption." Meanwhile, Democrats are hoping to regain control of the Senate, but will gridlock in Washington ever end?

Trump won't accept election results if he loses as Clinton expands campaign into red states: With less than 3 weeks left until Election Day, the bitter contest between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump escalated again into sharp, personal attacks during the final presidential debate of 2016. The Republican nominee said he may not accept the results of November's election and reserves the right to file a legal challenge. Clinton is leading in battleground state polls and is expanding her campaign into traditionally Republican states, but the former secretary of state is facing her own troubles with the continuing slow-drip Wikileaks release of hacked campaign emails and allegations this week of quid pro quo between the State Department and FBI. Plus, down-ballot Republicans have distanced themselves from some of Trump's most recent comments. As Election 2016 enters the final sprint, we get an update on the state of the race.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

This inner city school is a bridge to empowerment for children of color: In one of the poorest and most violent neighborhoods in Brooklyn, in one of the most segregated school systems in the country, principal Nadia Lopez is trying to help kids defy the odds. Lopez talks to special correspondent Charlayne Hunter-Gault about how she's adopted teaching methods and curricula with an understanding of where the students come from and what they need to succeed.

On this edition for Saturday Oct. 8, Hurricane Matthew continues its path of destruction along the Eastern Seaboard and just four weeks before the election will a decades-old recording of Donald Trump's offensive remarks about women upend the presidential race? William Brangham anchors from New York. Hurricane Matthew brings damage along Atlantic coast: Hurricane Matthew has weakened to a Category 1 storm but still remains a threat to the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas as it continues to crawl up the Eastern Seaboard. The storm has killed at least three people in North Carolina and left 800,000 people in Florida without power on Saturday. NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan joins William Brangham from Florida. Republicans denounce Trump after vulgar comments: Some Republican officials are calling for presidential candidate Donald Trump to drop his bid for the presidency after an 11-year-old video that was released on Friday showed him making vulgar, sexual remarks about groping women. William Brangham reports. How will Trump's comments about women affect the race? A video from 2005, released on Friday, shows Republican candidate Donald Trump making lewd comments about groping women, leading to calls from other Republicans to drop his bid for president. But Trump said on Saturday he will "never" quit the race. POLITICO columnist Roger Simon joins William Brangham to discuss the impact of Trump's statements on the race. Haiti reeling after Hurricane Matthew destruction: The island of Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, has borne the brunt of damage from Hurricane Matthew. Nearly 900 people have been killed by the storm, and thousands more have been displaced. Journalist Ingrid Arneson joins William Brangham via Skype from Haiti's capital Port-au-Prince.

Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

Hiring the Homeless: While many cities in the U.S. have moved to criminalize homelessness, imposing fees for lying down, camping and begging, Albuquerque, New Mexico has taken a different approach. It has initiated a program it calls There's a Better Way, picking up homeless individuals and transporting them to jobs that pay them in cash at the end of a five-hour work period. As correspondent Lucky Severson reports, the program is now in its second year and Mayor Richard Berry is confident it works. But some critics think the mayor's approach has created an increase in the number of panhandlers and homeless.

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public. There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.

F.A.R.M. Caf?: Located in Boone, North Carolina, the FARM Caf? is a volunteer-operated restaurant whose mission is to Feed All Regardless of Means-anyone who needs a free meal and who can in return offer the caf? an hour of volunteer work. It's the ministry of executive chef Renee Boughman, who felt called five years ago to feed the hungry. The FARM Cafe "gives people the chance to practice being human," says Boughman. "Everybody feels that sense of coming to the table together, dining together, sharing the meal together."

Three reasons little kids shouldn't play football: Keith Strudler wants to see the end of football played by very young children -- and not just because of the danger of concussions. He argues that the sport teaches kids to act rough and selfish, as well as that masculinity is strength, while femininity is cheering from the sidelines. Older players are able to separate the sport from life, he says, but for younger ones, that's not easy.

Restoring the Buffalo: One hundred years ago, the US government oversaw the slaughter of millions of buffalo in its effort to settle the West. That meant separating Indian tribes from their historic dependence on the buffalo, or bison, for food, shelter, and also for their spirituality. American Indians

see buffalo and all living things as sacred. Now, in cooperation with Canada, the US government has returned buffalo to the Blackfoot tribes, who say they are celebrating their long-denied sense of feeling whole again. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports from northern Montana, where Ervin Carlson, president of the Intertribal Buffalo Council says, "They're just a part of our being, our spirituality-not only the buffalo, but all animals are very spiritual to the Indian people."

Hour one examines how Judaism and the Roman empire shaped Jesus' life. Jesus was an ordinary Jewish resident of his time, but new archaeological findings show that Jesus was probably not the humble village peasant often portrayed. Nazareth, where he grew up, was about four miles from the cosmopolitan urban center of Sepphoris, one of the Roman provincial cities. While Rome defined one dimension of Jesus' world, the other was symbolized by the great Temple in Jerusalem. Jesus was born, lived, and died a Jew, and he was influenced by the diversity and tensions of Judaism at that time. Jesus was most likely arrested and executed by Roman authorities whose principal concern was to keep peace in the empire. Rome had little tolerance for those it judged disruptive of the Pax Romana (Roman peace), punishing them in many ways, including crucifixion. The death of Jesus was a Roman act; there was little if any notice taken by Jewish people. Jesus was another victim of the Pax Romana.

Hour three follows the story of the first attempts to write the life of Jesus - The Gospels. The Gospels were products of social and religious reconstruction in the period after the war, ranging from roughly 70 to after 100 C.E. The program looks at how these stories were passed down before they were written and how the writing of each Gospel reflects the experiences and circumstances of early Christians. They do not all tell the same story of Jesus because each one is responding to a different audience and circumstances. For example, Matthew's gospel is clearly written for a Jewish Christian audience; it is the most Jewish of all the gospels. During this time, a growing tension appeared between the emergent Christian groups and their Jewish neighbors. The result was a process of debate, identity, and separation that shaped both religious traditions forever. And there were still other external forces, including a second, devastating Jewish war, the Bar Kochbah revolt, which erupted in 132 C.E.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

In 2012, they were almost evenly divided between candidates Barack Obama and Mitt Romney. Sharp divisions and political polarizations persist in this election cycle as well. Lawton reports on the issues Catholic voters are emphasizing and the efforts of both the Trump and Clinton campaigns to reach out to them. She talks with voters at a Catholic parish in Arlington, Virginia, and with faculty and students at the Catholic University of America. Says Professor Stephen Schneck, director of Catholic University's Institute for Policy Research & Catholic Studies: "A good number of us find ourselves a little bit at sea given the ugliness, really, of this presidential campaign. Cole was in Washington recently doing research on the Quran, particularly on the meaning of peace in its verses and in the late antique world in which Muslims believe it was revealed to the Prophet Muhammad. In the midst of violence, war, and terror around the modern world, what does the Quran have to say about peace and harmony? We spoke with Cole at the Library of Congress, where he observed, "The Quran says one of the names of God is peace. If God is peace, and if the revelation of the Quran to Muhammad is peace, then peace is pretty central to this book."

Three Rivers Spirituality: Throughout history, many people of faith have found spiritual energy in certain remote places around the world. One such place in the U.S. is at the convergence of three rivers in Michigan, where correspondent Judy Valente spoke with retreatants about the spiritual healing they have experienced, and where they told her they are able to practice "the presence of God."

Bethlehem's Holy Family Hospital: In the midst of all the political and religious tensions in the city of Bethlehem, the Catholic Order of Malta oversees Holy Family Hospital, just up the hill from the Church of the Nativity. Members of the medical staff are primarily Christian, and most of the patients are Muslim, but the hospital serves everyone, especially mothers, their newborn babies, and all children who need special care. "Our philosophy," said one of the leading doctors, "is that poor people deserve the best." The Order of Malta has been caring for the sick and the poor in the Middle East for more than 900 years.

Hanukkah on the River (Originally published: Dec. 11, 2015): Jews will soon be celebrating Hanukkah, the eight-day festival of lights (December 24-January 1). Passages in the Talmud direct Jews to "publicize the miracle" of Hanukkah. We visited San Antonio, Texas, where the Jewish community holds an annual Hanukkah on the River celebration. Rabbi Chaim Block, executive director of the city's Chabad Center for Jewish Life & Learning, explained how members of the community fulfill the requirement to "publicize the miracle" with boat parades, children's workshops, and menorah lighting. "It's about bringing light into the darkness that surrounds us as we move through our daily lives," says Rabbi Block.

This Week PBS' To The Contrary presents a special documentary about LGBT and the United Methodist Church. The United Methodist Church remains officially opposed to homosexuality, same sex marriage, and self-avowed gay pastors. It's official rulebook - the book of discipline states - "The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching." But not all United Methodist congregations agree with the church's view on the issue. The fight on this issue is testing the faith more than ever and Dividing the United Methodist Church.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

In Tampa, Florida, in February 2013, a giant hole opened up under the bedroom floor of Jeffrey Bush, swallowing the 36-year-old as he slept. His body was never found. Bush was a victim of a sinkhole - a growing worldwide hazard that lurks wherever limestone and other water-soluble rocks underpin the soil. When carbon dioxide in the air dissolves in rainwater, it forms a weak acid that attacks the soft rocks, riddling them with holes like Swiss cheese. Sinkholes can occur gradually when the surface subsides into bowl-shaped depressions or suddenly, when the ground gives way - often catastrophically. Sinkholes have swallowed highways, apartment buildings, horses, camels, even golfers, with monster-size holes cracking the earth from Siberia to Louisiana. With compelling eyewitness video of dramatic collapses, and following scientists as they explore the underlying forces behind these natural disasters, NOVA travels the globe to investigate what it's like to have your world vanish beneath your feet.

Around 3,600 years ago, reliefs in Egyptian tombs and temples depict pharaohs and warriors proudly riding into battle on horse-drawn chariots. Some historians claim that the chariot launched a technological and strategic revolution, and was the secret weapon behind Egypt's greatest era of conquest known as the New Kingdom. But was the Egyptian chariot really a revolutionary design? How decisive a role did it play in the bloody battles of the ancient world? In Building Pharaoh's Chariot, a team of archaeologists, engineers, woodworkers, and horse trainers join forces to build and test two highly accurate replicas of Egyptian royal chariots. They discover astonishingly advanced features, including spoked wheels, springs, shock absorbers, anti-roll bars, and even a convex shaped rear mirror, leading one of them to compare the level of design to the engineering standards of 1930's-era Buicks! By driving our pair of replicas to their limits in the desert outside Cairo, NOVA's experts test the claim that the chariot marks a crucial turning point in ancient military history.

How Obama, Trump and Congress are responding to Russian hacks in the U.S. election: U.S. intelligence agencies blame Russia for a series of hacks meant to undermine the presidential election. President Obama said the U.S. will respond in a yet-to-be-determined way. But President-elect Donald Trump still questions the intelligence assessment and the belief by some that Russian President Vladimir Putin directed the attacks to bolster Trump's campaign. Trump also announced his choice for secretary of state: ExxonMobil CEO Rex Tillerson who has close ties with Russia. In his year-end press conference, President Obama also addressed the ongoing humanitarian crisis in Syria and the options being considered by the White House.

U.S. sanctions Russia for election hacks, Kerry rebukes Israeli settlements and Trump expresses frustration with Obama's policies: The Obama administration announced new economic sanctions against Russia in response to the Kremlin's involvement in computer hacking meant to disrupt the presidential election. President-elect Trump said the U.S. should "get on with our lives." While Russia has not yet retaliated for the sanctions, Vladimir Putin may respond in the future. Also this week, Secretary of State John Kerry delivered a sharp rebuke of Israel for continuing to build settlements in the West Bank. The disagreement is the latest strain on the relationship between President Obama and Netanyahu, but once again Trump expressed his frustration with his successor's policy.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more. Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba. Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart. Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. Later, learn how car makers are racing to be the first with an affordable all-electric vehicle. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Why are Republicans split about Trump? The 2005 video released last week of Donald Trump speaking about groping women, followed by a series of women accusing Trump of sexual assault, is costing him support in his own party. To discuss the schism among Republican leaders, national political reporter for The Hill Jonathan Swan joins Hari Sreenivasan. A child dies every other day from gun accidents in U.S. A joint investigation by the Associated Press and the USA Today Network has found that in the first six months of this year, gun accidents killed at least one child in the U.S. every other day. Both the shooters and victims were most likely to be three years old. Ryan Foley, one of the reporters on the story for the AP in Iowa, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 29, will the latest FBI probe of Hillary Clinton's emails tighten the presidential race? And how will new voter ID laws in nine states influence this year's election? Also, South Carolina is using an aggressive strategy to revive its manufacturing sector, but is it creating tension between job creation and job quality? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Why the FBI announced it is looking at more Clinton-related emails: Hillary Clinton's campaign is calling on the FBI to reveal all it knows about a new batch of emails that could be related to the investigation of a private email server she used as President Obama's Secretary of State. For more on the probe, Politico's investigative reporter Ken Vogel joins Alison Stewart. How are controversial voter ID laws affecting voters? This election, nine states are enforcing new laws requiring eligible voters to present government-issued photo IDs at the polls. And other factors, including voter purging in Ohio and possible voting machine malfunctions, could also affect voters. Wendy Weiser, of The Brennan Center for Justice at New York University Law School, joins Alison Stewart. South Carolina's manufacturing revival lures new business: Like other states, South Carolina has seen its traditional industries decimated by automation and globalization, as low-skilled factory jobs disappeared or migrated to low-cost labor countries. Now, the state is building a robust, high-skilled factory base, returning manufacturing jobs to the state. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Patricia Sabga reports.

Explore the life of Finnish-American modernist architectural giant Eero Saarinen (1910-1961), whose visionary buildings include National Historic Landmarks such as St. Louis' iconic Gateway Arch and the General Motors Technical Center in Michigan. Saarinen also designed New York's TWA Flight Center at John F. Kennedy International Airport, Yale University's Ingalls Rink and Morse and Ezra Stiles Colleges, Virginia's Dulles Airport, and modernist pedestal furniture like the Tulip chair. Travel with his son, director of photography Eric Saarinen, as he visits the sites of his father's work on a cathartic journey, shot in 6K with the latest in drone technology that showcases the architect's body of timeless work for the first time. Eero's sudden death at age 51 cut short one of the most influential careers in American architecture. Today, Saarinen's work stands apart and continues to inspire, especially amongst renewed interest in 20th-century architects and artists who exploded the comfortable constraints of the past to create a robust and daring American aesthetic. Produced and Directed by Peter Rosen. One hour.

How the country's oldest city weathered Hurricane Matthew: To get a sense of the damage caused by Hurricane Matthew, Hari Sreenivasan traveled to St. Augustine, Florida. The city, billed as the oldest in the country, was devastated by last week's storm. We tour one of its hardest-hit areas, where sewage litters the streets and residents were just allowed back on Saturday. As for the city as a whole, only half its residents were able to evacuate.

Is crumbling infrastructure inhibiting American productivity? In recent decades, American productivity growth has slowed. Yale University's Jacob Hacker has a possible explanation: the country's outdated and deteriorating infrastructure. Hacker, co-author of "American Amnesia," argues the U.S. has forgotten the role government plays in engineering prosperity, and that public investment got us where we are today. Economics correspondent Paul Solman reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex

Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Alison Stewart reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 4, people mourn the death of Cuban communist leader Fidel Castro in the city of Santiago at his funeral. Later, a new documentary recounts how Rwanda was the first country to prosecute mass rape as a war crime in international court. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more. Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba. Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart. Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 1, Russia warns the United States over Syria and the strongest hurricane in a decade is barreling through the Caribbean. Later, learn how members of Italy's 'art squad' are attempting to save priceless artworks after the town of Amatrice was decimated by an earthquake last month. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Is Ohio less important in this year's election? Ohio has long been known as a bellwether state when it comes to the race for the White House. No Republican has ever won the presidency without winning Ohio and no Democrat since John F. Kennedy has become president without a victory in the state. But this year the stakes may not be as high. Jonathan Martin of The New York Times joins Hari Sreenivasan from Washington, D.C. Oxford study could point to new treatments for HIV: This week, Oxford University researchers released a study that may impact treatments for HIV. The study looked at young children in South Africa with HIV and found that 10 percent of them never developed symptoms of AIDS. Philip Goulder, a professor of pediatrics at Oxford University who led the research team, joins Hari Sreenivasan. Saving treasured art after Italy's major earthquake: In August, a 6.2-magnitude earthquake shook central Italy, killing almost 300 people, leaving thousands homeless, and causing an estimated $5 billion in property damage. Today, rescue efforts center on saving the area's cultural artifacts. NewsHour Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay reports.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 12, protests against President-Elect Donald Trump continue in cities across the country, and the latest from Iraq in the battle for Mosul. Also, looking ahead to the top priorities of a Trump administration, and predicting the outcome of the election without polls. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Trump promises to make infrastructure a major focus: Donald Trump has signaled that infrastructure will be a major issue in his administration. He has also promised to create 25 million jobs through infrastructure spending, tax reduction, trade deal reform and lifting restrictions on American energy development. Laura Bliss of CityLab and Binyamin Appelbaum, a correspondent for The New York Times, join Alison Stewart. How to (accurately) predict a presidential election: In all presidential elections since 1984, American University history Professor Allan Lichtman has correctly predicted the outcome based on his own system. It consists of 13 true/false statements that measure whether the incumbent party will retain or lose the White House. He joined Alison Stewart by Skype from Doha, Qatar. ISIS executes civilians as Iraqi forces gain ground in Mosul: As Iraqi forces continue to gain ground in Mosul against Islamic State militants, thousands of residents are attempting to flee the city. The United Nations reports that ISIS is carrying out mass executions of civilians. Alex Milutinovic, who is directing relief efforts in Iraq for the International Rescue Committee, joins Alison Stewart to discuss the plight of those civilians. 'Junk science' law exonerates woman of murder: A 68-year-old Texas woman, who in 1993 was convicted of murder by arson of her uncle, was found not guilty on Wednesday through a new 'junk science' law in Texas that reopens cases if there is new scientific evidence contradicting the conviction. Alison Stewart reports.

On this episode for Sunday, Oct. 23, assessing a merger between telecom giant AT&T and Time Warner. Later, senate Republicans are enduring a balancing act to keep control of the House in the weeks leading up to Election Day. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Humanitarian concerns grow in Mosul: Iraqi government troops and Peshmerga fighters launched a new offensive on towns and villages around Mosul, the country's second largest city that is also controlled by the Islamic State. The U.N. warns that the offensive could displace as many as a million people. Katharina Ritz with the International Red Cross in Baghdad joins Hari Sreenivasan via Skype to discuss. What does AT&T, Time Warner merger mean? AT&T, the nation's second largest cell phone carrier, is buying Time Warner for $85.4 billion and will gain control of TV networks like HBO, TNT and CNN in the biggest deal of its kind since Comcast acquired NBC

Universal five years ago. Wall Street Journal reporter Keach Hagey joins Hari Sreenivasan to talk about how the deal might affect clients. GOP incumbent walks line in PA on supporting Trump: Even if Hillary Clinton wins the White House, she could face difficulties on Capitol Hill, if Republicans continue to control the House of Representatives and Senate. One of the most vulnerable Republican incumbents is Sen. Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield went to the Keystone State to look at Toomey's challenge.

On this edition for Saturday, Oct. 22, Iraqi forces advance on Mosul in a campaign to retake the country's second largest city from ISIS, and with less than three weeks left until Election Day, Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton are making their closing arguments to voters. Also, learn how robots in South Korea may transform America's future workforce. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. With campaign winding down, Clinton leads polls: More than 5 million people have already cast ballots in the presidential race through early voting in 34 states and recent polls show Hillary Clinton in the lead. For more election analysis, NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Hari Sreenivasan. South Africa to leave the International Criminal Court: South Africa announced it will withdraw from the International Criminal Court, whose oversight includes 124 member nations. Burundi's parliament has also voted to leave the court, which was established in 2002 to investigate and prosecute war crimes. Andrew Meldrum, the acting Africa Editor for the Associated Press, joins Hari Sreenivasan from Johannesburg. Will South Korea's robot revolution hurt American jobs? South Korea is among the countries working to increase automation in the manufacturing sector, with some large companies seeing robots as a cost-effective way to replace expensive human labor. But how will the expansion of this technology affect American workers? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Karla Murthy reports.

On this episode for Sunday, Oct. 16, where the presidential candidates are with their campaigns and what to expect in the three weeks before Election Day. Then, California is preparing for a vote on whether to legalize recreational marijuana, which could set the stage for a national movement. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Breaking down U.S.'s role in Yemen's civil war: The U.S. military is investigating a possible third missile launch against U.S. navy ships patrolling the Red Sea within a week. The Pentagon said two previous missile launches came from Shiite rebels at war with Yemen's exiled, internationally-recognized government. Barbara Bodine, director of the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy at Georgetown University, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Can Trump expand beyond his base before third debate? With three weeks left in the presidential campaign, Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton leads Republican Donald Trump in opinion polls and donations. Meanwhile, Trump has expanded his claim that the election is 'rigged.' NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. California to vote on legalizing recreational marijuana: California, the first state to legalize medical marijuana 20 years ago, will vote in November on whether to legalize recreational use for people over the age of 21. With 39 million residents and the world's 6th-largest economy, California's status could resonate throughout the country. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Mike Taibbi reports.

On this episode for Saturday, Dec. 10, the CIA has determined that covert Russian hacking was in fact an attempt to help Donald Trump win the White House. And later, a comparison of President-elect Donald Trump and Ronald Reagan. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The Washington Post reported that the CIA has determined that Russian hacking was, in fact, an attempt to help President-elect Donald Trump win the White House. Trump's team questioned the report's credibility in a statement Friday. Greg Miller of the Washington Post, who helped break the story, joins Alison Stewart. How similar are Trump and Reagan? Donald Trump often invoked Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail this year, and did so again as President-elect last week at a North Carolina rally as he described his plans for the military. But just how similar are the two men? As NewsHour Weekend Correspondent Jeff Greenfield explains, their differences are a testimony to how much our political landscape has changed over the past 35 years. Red Cross study shows shifting global views on war: The International Committee of the Red Cross this week released a survey of more than 17,000 people in 16 countries. The survey, which asked respondents about treatment of soldiers and civilians, showed a difference in the way people look at war based on whether or not they live in a conflict zone. Alison Stewart discusses the findings with Yves Daccord, director-general of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

On this episode, for Sunday, Nov. 20, President-elect Donald Trump continues to interview candidates for top jobs in his administration. Later, as the campaign to defeat ISIS in Mosul continues, Iraqi Christians fight for their survival. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Obama discusses Trump on last foreign trip: U.S. President Barack Obama will complete the last scheduled foreign trip of his presidency today when he returns home from the Asian Pacific Economic Cooperation summit in Lima, Peru. Joining Alison Stewart to discuss is Gardiner Harris, White House correspondent for The New York Times, who said Obama spent the week reassuring people about President-elect Donald Trump. Survival and sadness in Iraq's Christian towns: The majority of Iraq's Christians have fled the predominantly Muslim country as the Islamic State occupied their towns in and around Mosul. Christians have lived in the region since the start of Christianity itself, but today they number less than 250,000. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay reports on how they are coping in the war-torn country.

On this edition for Saturday, Nov. 19, we remember Gwen Ifill's remarkable career with excerpts of a few of her most memorable interviews. Also, learn how President-elect Donald's Trump's opposition to NAFTA could affect U.S. neighbors. Later, in the first of two reports from Iraq, could ethnic Kurds' battle against ISIS help give them long-sought autonomy? Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Sharon Jones, soul and blues singer, dies at 60: Sharon Jones, a powerful soul and blues singer who achieved mid-life fame as lead singer for the Dap-Kings and who returned to touring this year after fighting cancer, has died. The NewsHour's Christopher Booker reports. How Trump's opposition to NAFTA affects Canada: During his campaign, President-elect Donald Trump opposed NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, which began in 1994 and opened up trade between the U.S., Canada and Mexico. He stated that the treaty sent U.S. jobs out of the country, particularly to Mexico. Alexander Panetta, a Washington correspondent for The Canadian Press, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Could the fight against ISIS give Kurds more autonomy? Kurdish fighters are on the front lines in the conflict against the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria, fighting alongside Iraqi forces. But will this fight bring the Kurds closer to independence, something they have sought in several countries for decades? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Christopher Livesay has the story, the first of two reports from Iraq.

What a Trump administration means for foreign relations: European Union foreign ministers met in Brussels on Sunday to discuss the incoming Trump administration, which could impact NATO and the U.S.-Iran nuclear deal, among other agreements with foreign powers. David Sanger, national security correspondent for The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart. Trump begins building team for transition: As President-elect Donald Trump begins his transition to the most powerful office in the world, how will his administration move on from a contentious race? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart for more analysis. Could the Electoral College system ever change? President-Elect Donald Trump captured the White House by winning the Electoral College, even as Hillary Clinton won about half a million votes more than Trump. In response, some are calling for a national popular vote to decide the election. Josh Tucker, a politics professor at New York University, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Hollande pays tribute one year after Paris attacks: Today marks one year since a coordinated attack in Paris carried out by terrorists killed 130 people and wounded more than 400. French President Francois Hollande and Mayor Anne Hidalgo paid tribute today at the Bataclan concert hall, where part of the attack took place. The NewsHour's Christopher Booker reports.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 11, reactions to the CIA assessment that Russian hackers tried to influence the U.S. presidential election and Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson emerges as the front-runner for secretary of state. Later, learn how America's first offshore wind turbines near Rhode Island could have larger implications for the U.S. energy sector. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. U.S. builds first offshore wind farm: In the U.S. today, wind power accounts for about five percent of all electricity generation, but a new project aims to change that. A $300 million installation off the coast of Block Island, Rhode Island, takes the renewable energy technology out to sea. Gov. Gina Raimondo anticipates the project is the beginning of a new industry, but some locals are skeptical. Mike Taibbi reports. What's next for U.S. monetary policy: It is widely anticipated that chair of the Federal Reserve Board Janet Yellen will announce an interest rate increase this week during the board's last meeting of the year. Binyamin Appelbaum, economic reporter at The New York Times, also expects discussions about a shift in monetary policies with the next presidential administration. Appelbaum joins Alison Stewart. 'Not That Jewish' is a comic roadmap to Jewish-American life: Monica Piper has worked in nearly every corner of comedy, including stand-up and television. Now, she's lent her comedic pen to "Not That Jewish," a one-woman Off-Broadway show, starring Piper as herself. It chronicles the origins of her life in comedy and her quest to understand what it means to be a Jewish-American woman. Christopher Booker has more.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 17, President-elect Donald Trump wraps up his post-election tour. Later, Cubans are scrambling to accommodate a new surge in American tourists. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. In North Carolina, new laws to limit governor's power: Last month, incumbent Republican Gov. Pat McCrory lost the governor's race to Democrat Roy Cooper. The election spurred Republican state lawmakers to call a special legislative session and pass laws that limit the power of the incoming governor. Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the University of North Carolina Law School in Chapel Hill, joins Alison Stewart. As Aleppo lies in ruins, thousands wait to escape: In Syria, the evacuation of civilians from Aleppo continues as thousands of people wait to leave the besieged city. Once the most populous city in the country, previously rebel-held Aleppo is now largely in ruins after a protracted assault by Syrian government forces. Anne Barnard, a reporter with The New York Times, joins Alison Stewart from Beirut for more. In Cuba, American tourists increase demand for hotels: Two years ago, President Barack Obama restored diplomatic relations with Cuba. Since then, Cold War-era travel restrictions that prohibited most Americans from visiting were lifted, leading to a surge of U.S. tourists and a scramble to accommodate them. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Amy Guttman looks at the growing hospitality industry in Cuba.

On this edition for Saturday, Dec. 31, the number of people killed by police in the United States dropped slightly in 2016, and DNA testing is bringing clarity to some in the African-American community. Also, learn how one journalist is facing PTSD after years of covering traumatic events. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. The number of people killed by police dropped slightly in 2016: This year the number of people killed by police stands at 957, down slightly from 991 in 2015, according to the Washington Post. While white men accounted for the most deaths by police, black men were three times more likely to be killed when population rates were factored in. Washington Post Reporter Kimbriell Kelly, one of the authors of the year-end report, joins Alison Stewart to discuss. Years after transatlantic slavery, DNA tests give clarity: DNA ancestry tests in the last decade have helped some African-Americans reconcile with aspects of their identities that might have been obscured during the transatlantic slave trade. Alondra Nelson chronicles this journey in her book, "The Social Life of DNA: Race, Reparations and Reconciliation After the Genome." Nelson joins Hari Sreenivasan. A journalist's story of PTSD: Journalist Dean Yates followed stories of conflict in the Middle East and Southeast Asia for years in his job for Reuters, producing reporting around some of the region's most important events. Earlier this year, he was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder, a condition that can result from exposure to traumatic events. Yates, who wrote about his experience with PTSD for Reuters last month, joins Alison Stewart.

Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public. There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.

The Trump Transition: A deep dive into his unconventional cabinet picks: President-elect Donald Trump continued to announce the team that will help implement his new agenda in the White House, but several of his picks are raising concerns among his critics. Trump tapped a climate change denier to lead the EPA, a minimum wage critic to lead the Labor Department and three retired generals to key national security posts. What do Trump's choices signal about his key policy priorities and the shift in American foreign policy when he is sworn in as president?

U.S. sanctions Russia for election hacks, Kerry rebukes Israeli settlements and Trump expresses frustration with Obama's policies: The Obama administration announced new economic sanctions against Russia in response to the Kremlin's involvement in computer hacking meant to disrupt the presidential election. President-elect Trump said the U.S. should "get on with our lives." While Russia has not yet retaliated for the sanctions, Vladimir Putin may respond in the future. Also this week, Secretary of State John Kerry delivered a sharp rebuke of Israel for continuing to build settlements in the West Bank. The disagreement is the latest strain on the relationship between President Obama and Netanyahu, but once again Trump expressed his frustration with his successor's policy.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

On this edition for Saturday Oct. 8, Hurricane Matthew continues its path of destruction along the Eastern Seaboard and just four weeks before the election will a decades-old recording of Donald Trump's offensive remarks about women upend the presidential race? William Brangham anchors from New York. Hurricane Matthew brings damage along Atlantic coast: Hurricane Matthew has weakened to a Category 1 storm but still remains a threat to the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas as it continues to crawl up the Eastern Seaboard. The storm has killed at least three people in North Carolina and left 800,000 people in Florida without power on Saturday. NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan joins William Brangham from Florida. Republicans denounce Trump after vulgar comments: Some Republican officials are calling for presidential candidate Donald Trump to drop his bid for the presidency after an 11-year-old video that was released on Friday showed him making vulgar, sexual remarks about groping women. William Brangham reports. How will Trump's comments about women affect the race? A video from 2005, released on Friday, shows Republican candidate Donald Trump making lewd comments about groping women, leading to calls from other Republicans to drop his bid for president. But Trump said on Saturday he will "never" quit the race. POLITICO columnist Roger Simon joins William Brangham to discuss the impact of Trump's statements on the race. Haiti reeling after Hurricane Matthew destruction: The island of Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, has borne the brunt of damage from Hurricane Matthew. Nearly 900 people have been killed by the storm, and thousands more have been displaced. Journalist Ingrid Arneson joins William Brangham via Skype from Haiti's capital Port-au-Prince.

On this episode for Saturday, Oct. 15, a look at the state of the Republican party three weeks ahead of the election. Then, children in the U.S. are dying from gun accidents every other day. Later, learn how car makers are racing to be the first with an affordable all-electric vehicle. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Why are Republicans split about Trump? The 2005 video released last week of Donald Trump speaking about groping women, followed by a series of women accusing Trump of sexual assault, is costing him support in his own party. To discuss the schism among Republican leaders, national political reporter for The Hill Jonathan Swan joins Hari Sreenivasan. A child dies every other day from gun accidents in U.S. A joint investigation by the Associated Press and the USA Today Network has found that in the first six months of this year, gun accidents killed at least one child in the U.S. every other day. Both the shooters and victims were most likely to be three years old. Ryan Foley, one of the reporters on the story for the AP in Iowa, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Companies race to make electric cars mainstream: When Tesla Motors announced in March it would build a new, all-electric car at a starting price of $35,000, it was a turning point for the company. General Motors is also developing an all-electric sedan and hopes to market it early next year. Will increased competition and new options spur more sales? On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 9, Republicans distance themselves from Donald Trump after his comments about women. Then, assessing the damage from Hurricane Matthew along the Atlantic Coast. Later, learn how the small number of women in Utah's Legislature is affecting policy in the state. William Brangham anchors from New York. In Florida, cleanup begins after Hurricane Matthew: Hurricane Matthew has been downgraded to a post-tropical cyclone after causing a trail of damage from Florida to North Carolina over the weekend, though it continues to flood the East Coast. At least 19 people in the U.S. have died as a result of the storm. The NewsHour Weekend's Hari Sreenivasan visited residents of St. Augustine, Florida, to assess the damage. Clinton, Trump prepare for debate amid Republican exodus: As Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump prepare for tonight's second presidential debate, the number of Republicans who have withdrawn support for Trump continues to grow. The two candidates will meet in a town hall debate at Washington University in St. Louis. PBS NewsHour's John Yang joins William Brangham outside the debate hall for a preview. Why does Utah have so few female legislators? Nationally, about a quarter of all state legislators are women. But Utah's numbers are some of the lowest in the country, with six female senators in its 29-member Senate and 10 female representatives in its 75-member house. The NewsHour Weekend's Christopher Booker reports on the reasons for that imbalance. The challenges of a town hall debate: On Sunday night in St. Louis, Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump meet for their second of three televised 90-minute debates. This time, the debate will follow a town meeting format, with voters joining the moderator in asking questions. As NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield reports, that format has tripped up many candidates before.

On this edition for Sunday, Oct. 30, the FBI's announcement to review more emails related to Hillary Clinton looms less than two weeks ahead of Election Day. Later, presidential candidates are after the votes of Florida's most diverse block: millennials. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Last year's James Bond movie, "Spectre," opened with a Day of the Dead parade featuring floats, puppets, and skeletons. The sequence, filmed in Mexico City, became the inspiration for an annual parade designed to draw tourists, where ancient Aztec tradition intermingled with Halloween. Alison Stewart has more. Is FBI email probe this election's 'October surprise'? From the Kennedys getting Martin Luther King, Jr. out of jail to George W. Bush's youthful drunk driving arrest, the term "October surprise" has come to mean an event in the closing weeks of a presidential campaign that could affect the race. The FBI's announcement that it is reviewing more emails related to Clinton might be this election's October surprise. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart. As election nears, candidates court millennials: There are an estimated 83 million millennials in the U.S. -- and candidates want their vote. In the last presidential election, 45 percent of millennials turned out to vote, and the group tends to lean further left than other generations, according to the Pew Research Center. PBS NewsHour correspondent Christopher Booker reports from Florida on how the generation is connecting with the candidates.

On this edition for Sunday, Dec. 4, people mourn the death of Cuban communist leader Fidel Castro in the city of Santiago at his funeral. Later, a new documentary recounts how Rwanda was the first country to prosecute mass rape as a war crime in international court. Alison Stewart anchors from New York. Emergency responders in Oakland brace for more casualties: In Oakland, firefighters and police on Sunday had only gone through less than half the remains of a warehouse that burned down during a party earlier this weekend, and the number of dead continued to rise. Alison Stewart has more. Fidel Castro interred in Cuban ceremony: Fidel Castro was laid to rest on Sunday during a private ceremony that capped nine days of mourning in Cuba. Castro ruled the island nation for 49 years before he stepped down in 2008. His remains were carried in a military procession to a cemetery in the city of Santiago. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Nick Schifrin joins Alison Stewart from Cuba. Ignored building codes at center of Oakland warehouse fire talks: Emergency responders on Sunday were still searching through the carcass of a burnt-out warehouse in Oakland for bodies after it caught fire during a party over the weekend and killed at least 33 people. KQED reporter Devin Katayama joins Alison Stewart. Rwanda was first to prosecute mass rape as war crime: A new documentary takes an in-depth look at the difficulties of prosecuting mass rape in international courts. "The Uncondemned," in theaters this month, reviews the landmark case in Rwanda that changed how mass rape could be prosecuted as an act of genocide. NewsHour Weekend's Ivette Feliciano spoke with filmmaker Michele Mitchell and has more on the case.

Liberian Entrepreneur Chid Liberty: In Liberia, a country still recovering from civil war and the ebola crisis, most people remain in poverty, partly because the economy has been largely dependent on exporting raw materials, not finished products. But a creative American is changing that. His name is Chid Liberty, born in Liberia and raised in Wisconsin. He says he was happy in the US until he felt a call to go back to Liberia and start a sustainable, fair-trade company that pays local women competitive wages and gives them the dignity of a job. Correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports on this social entrepreneur's successes, in spite of Liberia's many problems. "I realized," says Liberty, "that without going back to Liberia I would never really know who I am." Today Chid Liberty is in the fashion business, manufacturing school uniforms for the children of Liberia and a retail clothing line called Uniform, and giving Africa what it needs: decent jobs making products from African resources-in Africa.

Campaigns build on debate momentum and Congress overrides Obama veto: In the days after Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump's first debate, Trump faces continued questions about his treatment of women, including a former Miss Universe who says Trump called her "Miss Piggy." Clinton had prepared for the debate by readying attacks on Trump's vulnerabilities. Trump and Clinton will face off again in nine days, but the two vice presidential candidates will debate next week.

Trump denies allegations of sexual assault and Wikileaks releases hacked Clinton campaign emails: With just three weeks before the election, this has been a week of controversy on the campaign trail. Several women have accused Republican nominee Donald Trump of unwanted sexual contact, a charge the former reality TV star has denied forcefully. Trump is lashing out at his accusers, Hillary Clinton, the media and his own party. Speaker Paul Ryan was one of several high-profile Congressional Republicans to back away from the nominee this week. Meanwhile, Wikileaks released thousands of hacked Clinton campaign emails that reinforce voters' concerns about her secrecy. The campaign accused Russia of being behind the attacks.

Trump's comments about women caught on tape as candidates prepare for second debate: With one month left in the 2016 election, a 10-year-old tape of a "hot mic" conversation with Donald Trump was released showing lewd comments about women. "I apologize if anyone was offended," Trump said Friday after the tape of him discussing groping and adultery was released. How will Republican Party leaders and candidates running for Congressional seats react to the latest Trump controversy? Plus, Trump is set to take the stage for his second debate with Hillary Clinton on Sunday. How have both candidates altered their strategy from the first debate last week?

Last year's James Bond movie, "Spectre," opened with a Day of the Dead parade featuring floats, puppets, and skeletons. The sequence, filmed in Mexico City, became the inspiration for an annual parade designed to draw tourists, where ancient Aztec tradition intermingled with Halloween. Alison Stewart has more. Is FBI email probe this election's 'October surprise'? From the Kennedys getting Martin Luther King, Jr. out of jail to George W. Bush's youthful drunk driving arrest, the term "October surprise" has come to mean an event in the closing weeks of a presidential campaign that could affect the race. The FBI's announcement that it is reviewing more emails related to Clinton might be this election's October surprise. NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent Jeff Greenfield joins Alison Stewart. As election nears, candidates court millennials: There are an estimated 83 million millennials in the U.S. -- and candidates want their vote. In the last presidential election, 45 percent of millennials turned out to vote, and the group tends to lean further left than other generations, according to the Pew Research Center. PBS NewsHour correspondent Christopher Booker reports from Florida on how the generation is connecting with the candidates.

On this episode for Saturday, Oct. 15, a look at the state of the Republican party three weeks ahead of the election. Then, children in the U.S. are dying from gun accidents every other day. Later, learn how car makers are racing to be the first with an affordable all-electric vehicle. Hari Sreenivasan anchors from New York. Why are Republicans split about Trump? The 2005 video released last week of Donald Trump speaking about groping women, followed by a series of women accusing Trump of sexual assault, is costing him support in his own party. To discuss the schism among Republican leaders, national political reporter for The Hill Jonathan Swan joins Hari Sreenivasan. A child dies every other day from gun accidents in U.S. A joint investigation by the Associated Press and the USA Today Network has found that in the first six months of this year, gun accidents killed at least one child in the U.S. every other day. Both the shooters and victims were most likely to be three years old. Ryan Foley, one of the reporters on the story for the AP in Iowa, joins Hari Sreenivasan to discuss. Companies race to make electric cars mainstream: When Tesla Motors announced in March it would build a new, all-electric car at a starting price of $35,000, it was a turning point for the company. General Motors is also developing an all-electric sedan and hopes to market it early next year. Will increased competition and new options spur more sales? NewsHour Weekend Special Correspondent John Larson reports.

Old Skool Caf?: There is a supper club in San Francisco that not only serves good food but also trains former juvenile prison inmates to run it. More than three out of four of the staff have been in prison. Correspondent Lucky Severson reports on a former corrections officer, Susan Brown, who felt called to help former prisoners, especially juveniles, stay off the streets. She quit her job and started a small restaurant where 16-22-year-olds learn the skills needed to finish school and find jobs. More than 300 former inmates have completed the Old Skool program.

Creating Working Schools in Liberia: What obligation does a state have to educate its children? West Africa's Liberia was founded by freed American slaves in the 1840s. In recent years, two long wars and an Ebola epidemic all but destroyed the country, not least its school system. Two years ago, not one of 25,000 high school graduates passed the country's college entrance exam. Now, as correspondent Fred de Sam Lazaro reports, Liberian educators are trying to rebuild their schools by experimenting with a new system: part private, run by a for-profit American company, and part public There are uniforms, computers for teachers with built-in lesson plans, and a longer school day. But these moves have all drawn controversy, and critics of Liberia's partnership with so-called "school in a box" programs, especially the teachers' union, say teachers need smaller classes and more money to discourage rampant absenteeism.
