Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment." Go beyond the oft-told tales of gangsters, rum-runners, flappers and speakeasies to experience the rise, rule and fall of the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Since the early years of the American Republic, alcohol has been embedded in the fabric of American culture. But by 1830, the average American over 15 years old consumes nearly seven gallons of pure alcohol a year, three times as much as we drink today. Alcohol abuse wreaks havoc on the lives of many families. As a wave of spiritual fervor for reform sweeps the country, many women and men begin to see alcohol as a scourge. After the Civil War, the country's population swells with immigrants, who bring their drinking customs with them from Ireland, Germany, Italy and other European countries. The temperance campaign ignites, spearheaded by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Carrie Nation and her Home Defenders Army bring publicity by attacking Kansas bars with stones and hatchets, and the Anti-Saloon League (ASL) forms to push for an amendment to the Constitution outlawing alcohol nationally. Most politicians dare not defy the ASL, and in 1917 the 18th Amendment sails through both Houses of Congress; it is ratified by the states in just 13 months. When the Amendment is signed into law, Prohibitionists rejoice that America has become officially dry. But Americans are about to discover that making Prohibition the law of the land has been one thing; enforcing it will be another.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. In 1920, Prohibition goes into effect, making it illegal to manufacture, transport or sell intoxicating liquor. This episode examines the problems of enforcement, as millions of law-abiding Americans become lawbreakers overnight. While a significant portion of the country is willing to adapt to the new law, others are shocked at how inconsistent the Volstead Act actually is. As weaknesses in the law and its enforcement become clear, millions find ways to exploit it. Drys had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place, but the law has many victims. Honest policemen are killed on the job, unlucky drinkers are poisoned by adulterated liquor and overzealous federal agents violate civil rights just to make a bust. Alcoholism still exists, and may even be increasing, as women begin to drink in the speakeasies that replace the male-only saloon. Despite the growing discontent with Prohibition and its consequences, few politicians dare to speak out against the law, fearful of its powerful protector, the Anti-Saloon League.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Support for Prohibition diminishes in the mid-1920s as the playfulness of sneaking around for a drink gives way to disenchantment with its glaring unintended consequences. By criminalizing one of the nation's largest industries, the law has given savvy gangsters a way to make huge profits, and as they grow in power, rival outfits wreak havoc in cities across the country. The burgeoning tabloid newspaper industry fans the frenzy with sensational headlines and front-page photographs of murder scenes, while Al Capone holds press conferences and signs autographs. The wealthy Pauline Sabin begins publicly decrying that Prohibition has divided the nation into "wets, dries, and hypocrites." Nearly a century before, women had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place for their children. But by the late 1920s many American women believe that the "Noble Experiment" has failed. Sabin unifies women of all classes, refuting the notion that all women support Prohibition and denouncing the law itself as the greatest threat to their families. Sabin and others argue that repeal will bring in tax revenue and provide desperately needed jobs. After the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, Congress easily passes the 21st Amendment, which repeals the 18th, and the states quickly ratify it. In December of 1933, Americans can legally buy a drink for the first time in 13 years.

A New Medellin: The city of Medellin in Colombia has undergone a dramatic transformation in recent years. Once known for its murders and drug trafficking, Medellin's crime is dropping rapidly, and sleek new buildings, better public transportation options, help for small businesses, and improved policies aimed at reducing poverty and inequality are the first hopeful signs that, while there are still many challenging issues, the city may have left its violent legacy behind. We talk with a Catholic priest, an architect, and an urban affairs scholar about the city's changes.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

This acclaimed film tells the story of ACT UP and TAG (Treatment Action Group), two groups whose activism and innovation turned AIDS from a death sentence into a manageable condition. Despite having no scientific training, these determined activists infiltrated the pharmaceutical industry to help identify promising new drugs and move them from experimental trials to patients. With unfettered access to a treasure trove of never-before-seen archival footage, the film reveals the controversial actions, heated meetings, heartbreaking failures and exultant breakthroughs of heroes in the making. Filmmaker Byron Hurt sets out to learn more about soul food and its relevance to black cultural identity. His exploration was inspired by his father's lifelong love affair with the high-fat, calorie-rich traditional diet and his unwillingness to give it up even in the face of a life-threatening health crisis. As Hurt discovers, the relationship between African Americans and dishes such as ribs and grits and fried chicken is culturally based, deep-rooted, complex and often deadly. Through candid interviews with soul-food cooks, historians and scholars, as well as doctors and everyday people, "Soul Food Junkies" puts this culinary tradition under the microscope to examine its positive and negative consequences.

Located alongside the Tennessee River, Muscle Shoals, Alabama, is the unlikely breeding ground for some of America's most creative and defiant music. Under the spiritual influence of the "Singing River," as Native Americans called it, the music of Muscle Shoals has helped create some of the most important and resonant songs of all time. At its heart is Rick Hall, who founded FAME Studios. Overcoming crushing poverty and staggering tragedies, Hall brought black and white together in Alabama's cauldron of racial hostility to create music for the generations. He is responsible for creating the "Muscle Shoals sound" and the Swampers, the house band at FAME that eventually left to start its own successful studio, Muscle Shoals Sound. In this joyful film, Greg Allman, Bono, Clarence Carter, Mick Jagger, Etta James, Alicia Keys, Keith Richards, Percy Sledge and others bear witness to Muscle Shoals' magnetism and mystery, and why it remains influential today.

Everybody's heard of it, but what does the world's most famous equation,  $E=mc^2$ , really mean? NOVA dramatizes the stories of the men and women whose innovative thinking across four centuries led finally to Einstein's bold breakthrough. Based on David Bodanis' bestseller,  $E=mc^2$ , "Einstein's Big Idea" celebrates the ingenuity and chronicles the human conflicts that ultimately unleashed the power of the atom, helping viewers gain a better understanding of the equation by tracking its history and the myriad ways it has changed the world. This engrossing docudrama from the award-winning producers of NOVA brims with stories of triumph and failure, love and politics, bitter rivalries and revenge, all drawn from the lives and times of the scientists who intersected with the equation. Ultimately, "Einstein's Big Idea" is the story of young, ambitious scientists caught up by the huge forces of nature they seek to understand. The film stars Aidan McArdle ("Not Only But Also", "Ella Enchanted") as Einstein, Shirley Henderson ("Harry Potter" and "Bridget Jones" franchises) as his wife, Mileva, and Emily Woof ("Oliver Twist", "The Woodlanders") as Lise Meitner.

A little-known casualty of the Cold War? U.S. nuclear workers: More than 33,000 men and women who worked at nuclear facilities have died from related illnesses, and more than 100,000 Americans were diagnosed with cancer and other diseases after helping build the country's nuclear stockpile. That toll had never fully been revealed until a year-long investigation by McClatchy News. Jeffrey Brown speaks to McClatchy's Lindsay Wise.

Why it took 36 years to compensate Iran hostage victims: In 1979, the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was overrun by militant Iranian students who took 53 people captive for 444 days. The ordeal left a long-lasting toll and no chance of Iranian compensation. Now Congress has changed that under the new massive spending legislation: Survivors or their families will get up to $4.4 million each. Gwen Ifill learns more from David Herszenhorn of The New York Times.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. In 1920, Prohibition goes into effect, making it illegal to manufacture, transport or sell intoxicating liquor. This episode examines the problems of enforcement, as millions of law-abiding Americans become lawbreakers overnight. While a significant portion of the country is willing to adapt to the new law, others are shocked at how inconsistent the Volstead Act actually is. As weaknesses in the law and its enforcement become clear, millions find ways to exploit it. Drys had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place, but the law has many victims. Honest policemen are killed on the job, unlucky drinkers are poisoned by adulterated liquor and overzealous federal agents violate civil rights just to make a bust. Alcoholism still exists, and may even be increasing, as women begin to drink in the speakeasies that replace the male-only saloon. Despite the growing discontent with Prohibition and its consequences, few politicians dare to speak out against the law, fearful of its powerful protector, the Anti-Saloon League.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment." Go beyond the oft-told tales of gangsters, rum-runners, flappers and speakeasies to experience the rise, rule and fall of the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Since the early years of the American Republic, alcohol has been embedded in the fabric of American culture. But by 1830, the average American over 15 years old consumes nearly seven gallons of pure alcohol a year, three times as much as we drink today. Alcohol abuse wreaks havoc on the lives of many families. As a wave of spiritual fervor for reform sweeps the country, many women and men begin to see alcohol as a scourge. After the Civil War, the country's population swells with immigrants, who bring their drinking customs with them from Ireland, Germany, Italy and other European countries. The temperance campaign ignites, spearheaded by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Carrie Nation and her Home Defenders Army bring publicity by attacking Kansas bars with stones and hatchets, and the Anti-Saloon League (ASL) forms to push for an amendment to the Constitution outlawing alcohol nationally. Most politicians dare not defy the ASL, and in 1917 the 18th Amendment sails through both Houses of Congress; it is ratified by the states in just 13 months. When the Amendment is signed into law, Prohibitionists rejoice that America has become officially dry. But Americans are about to discover that making Prohibition the law of the land has been one thing; enforcing it will be another.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Support for Prohibition diminishes in the mid-1920s as the playfulness of sneaking around for a drink gives way to disenchantment with its glaring unintended consequences. By criminalizing one of the nation's largest industries, the law has given savvy gangsters a way to make huge profits, and as they grow in power, rival outfits wreak havoc in cities across the country. The burgeoning tabloid newspaper industry fans the frenzy with sensational headlines and front-page photographs of murder scenes, while Al Capone holds press conferences and signs autographs. The wealthy Pauline Sabin begins publicly decrying that Prohibition has divided the nation into "wets, dries, and hypocrites." Nearly a century before, women had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place for their children. But by the late 1920s many American women believe that the "Noble Experiment" has failed. Sabin unifies women of all classes, refuting the notion that all women support Prohibition and denouncing the law itself as the greatest threat to their families. Sabin and others argue that repeal will bring in tax revenue and provide desperately needed jobs. After the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, Congress easily passes the 21st Amendment, which repeals the 18th, and the states quickly ratify it. In December of 1933, Americans can legally buy a drink for the first time in 13 years.

Saint Kateri and Native American Catholics: November is Native American Heritage Month. An estimated 25 percent of Native Americans are Catholic, but there are also longstanding tensions between the Catholic Church and some indigenous tribes. Early missionary efforts were often tied to colonization and its devastating effects on native cultures. For some Native Americans, their complicated relationship with the Catholic Church is symbolized in its first Native American saint, Kateri Tekakwitha. Managing editor Kim Lawton visits the annual Tekakwitha Conference to ask Native Americans what Saint Kateri's legacy means to them.

On Sunday, October 30, 1938, the night before Halloween, millions of Americans gathered around their radios and heard a news bulletin about strange explosions on Mars, followed by other reports that led them to believe an alien invasion was in progress. Relive the thrill of Orson Welles' infamous radio dramatization of H.G. Wells' War of the Worlds, 75 years after it set off one of the biggest mass hysteria events in U.S. history. The film examines the elements that made America ripe for the hoax: America's longtime fascination with life on Mars; the emergence of radio as a powerful new medium; the shocking Hindenburg explosion of 1937; and Welles himself, the 23-year-old wunderkind director of the drama and mischief-maker supreme.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Located alongside the Tennessee River, Muscle Shoals, Alabama, is the unlikely breeding ground for some of America's most creative and defiant music. Under the spiritual influence of the "Singing River," as Native Americans called it, the music of Muscle Shoals has helped create some of the most important and resonant songs of all time. At its heart is Rick Hall, who founded FAME Studios. Overcoming crushing poverty and staggering tragedies, Hall brought black and white together in Alabama's cauldron of racial hostility to create music for the generations. He is responsible for creating the "Muscle Shoals sound" and the Swampers, the house band at FAME that eventually left to start its own successful studio, Muscle Shoals Sound. In this joyful film, Greg Allman, Bono, Clarence Carter, Mick Jagger, Etta James, Alicia Keys, Keith Richards, Percy Sledge and others bear witness to Muscle Shoals' magnetism and mystery, and why it remains influential today.

Before he started his film career, Michael B. Jordan was the youngest African American actor to be contracted with ABC's daytime drama series, All My Children, and starred in two critically acclaimed TV series (The Wire and Friday Night Lights). The Southern California native attended New Jersey's Newark High School and has been described by a Hollywood Reporter film critic as giving off "vibes of a very young Denzel Washington." In 2013, he delivered his breakthrough performance in the Ryan Coogler film, Fruitvale Station, in which he portrayed Oscar Grant, an unarmed father who was killed by a police officer at an Oakland train station in 2009. Jordan reunites with Coogler in the highly anticipated new film Creed, a new chapter in the beloved Rocky saga.

Born and raised in Miami, Florida to a French mother and a Haitian father, Cécile McLorin Salvant started classical piano studies at just five years old, and began singing at the young age of eight. She'd go on to develop her voice under the tutelage of private instructors, and later with Edward Walker at the University of Miami. In 2007, Cécile moved to France to study law and classical and baroque voice at the Darius Milhaud Conservatory. In 2009, after a series of concerts in Paris, she recorded her first album Cécile, and she won the Thelonious Monk competition in Washington D.C. the following year. Cécile's 2013 album WomanChild was nominated for a Grammy for Best Jazz Vocal Album. She's out now with an acclaimed new project, titled For One to Love.

The author of an astounding 29 New York Times bestsellers, Patricia Cornwell is the world's #1 bestselling crime writer. To date, her books have sold some 100 million copies in thirty-six languages in over 120 countries. Amazingly, however, she reportedly never wanted to be a writer, but her natural ability to create fantasies and compelling characters won out. This year marks the 25th anniversary of the creation of her signature character, Dr. Kay Scarpetta, the woman who launched a national obsession with forensic research, serving as the inspiration for shows like C.S.I and N.C.I.S. Cornwell is out now with the latest novel in the Scarpetta franchise, titled Depraved Heart.

Misty Copeland rose to stardom despite not starting ballet until age 13 and, by age 15, was winning awards. She joined the Studio Company of the American Ballet Theatre (one of the three leading classical companies in the U.S.) in 2000, became a member of the corps de ballet in 2001 and was appointed a soloist in 2007. She has been named to the President's Council on Fitness, Sports, and Nutrition and co-wrote an inspiring memoir, Life in Motion, that has been optioned for adaptation as a feature film. She also co-authored the award-winning children's book Firebird. In June 2015, Misty was promoted to principal dancer, making her the first African-American woman to ever be promoted to the position in the company's 75-year history.

On Sunday, October 30, 1938, the night before Halloween, millions of Americans gathered around their radios and heard a news bulletin about strange explosions on Mars, followed by other reports that led them to believe an alien invasion was in progress. Relive the thrill of Orson Welles' infamous radio dramatization of H.G. Wells' War of the Worlds, 75 years after it set off one of the biggest mass hysteria events in U.S. history. The film examines the elements that made America ripe for the hoax: America's longtime fascination with life on Mars; the emergence of radio as a powerful new medium; the shocking

Hindenburg explosion of 1937; and Welles himself, the 23-year-old wunderkind director of the drama and mischief-maker supreme.

The National Football League, a multibillion-dollar commercial juggernaut, presides over America's indisputable national pastime. But the NFL is under assault as thousands of former players and a host of scientists claim the league has covered up how football inflicted long-term brain injuries on many players. In this special investigation, FRONTLINE and prize-winning journalists Steve Fainaru and Mark Fainaru-Wada of ESPN reveal the hidden story of the NFL and brain injuries, drawn from their forthcoming book League of Denial: The NFL, Concussions and the Battle for Truth (Crown Archetype, October 2013). What did the NFL know and when did it know it? What's the truth about the risks to players? What can be done? The FRONTLINE investigation details how, for years, the league denied and worked to refute scientific evidence that the violent collisions at the heart of the game are linked to an alarming incidence of early onset dementia, catastrophic brain damage, death, and other devastating consequences for some of football's all-time greats.

China Environmental Ethics: Industrial pollution is a major problem in China, where massive, low-cost manufacturing has taken priority over environmental protection. But that may finally be changing as awareness about the impact of China's rapid industrialization grows. One of the people working to increase that awareness is Chinese activist Ma Jun. He founded a nongovernmental organization, the Institute of Public and Environmental Affairs, to fight factory pollution by means of transparency, accessible data, and public information. The IPE and its American partner, the Natural Resources Defense Council, say Western consumers have a moral responsibility and ethical obligation to help solve China's pollution problem, since the world made a decision to concentrate so much of its manufacturing in one country. In partnership with the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting.

Located alongside the Tennessee River, Muscle Shoals, Alabama, is the unlikely breeding ground for some of America's most creative and defiant music. Under the spiritual influence of the "Singing River," as Native Americans called it, the music of Muscle Shoals has helped create some of the most important and resonant songs of all time. At its heart is Rick Hall, who founded FAME Studios. Overcoming crushing poverty and staggering tragedies, Hall brought black and white together in Alabama's cauldron of racial hostility to create music for the generations. He is responsible for creating the "Muscle Shoals sound" and the Swampers, the house band at FAME that eventually left to start its own successful studio, Muscle Shoals Sound. In this joyful film, Greg Allman, Bono, Clarence Carter, Mick Jagger, Etta James, Alicia Keys, Keith Richards, Percy Sledge and others bear witness to Muscle Shoals' magnetism and mystery, and why it remains influential today.

Faith-Based Activism on Climate Change (originally published: June 19, 2015): In the bayous of south Louisiana, faith-based activists are trying to help vulnerable communities already affected by climate change. Most scientists say climate change has led to rising sea levels that are accelerating erosion and land loss, leading in turn to the displacement of local residents. Last summer, Pope Francis released his much anticipated encyclical on climate change, and while many environmental advocates support the pope's contributions to the current debate, there are also some critics who say political and scientific issues are beyond his purview.

How has the Paris attack shifted the U.S. fight against ISIS, refugee policy and the 2016 campaign? One week after the terror attacks in Paris left 130 people dead, the United States and global community have intensified the resolve to defeat ISIS and prevent future attacks. In state houses across the country and in the U.S. House of Representatives, the conversation has shifted to refugee policy and preventing all Syrian refugees from entering the country until security measures can be stepped up. 2016 presidential candidates are weighing in as well with Republican frontrunner Donald Trump calling for a national database to track Muslims. Gwen Ifill explores how the attack shifted U.S. foreign policy and the race for the White House with Pete Williams of NBC News, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics, Ed O'Keefe of The Washington Post and Susan Davis of NPR.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment." Go beyond the oft-told tales of gangsters, rum-runners, flappers and speakeasies to experience the rise, rule and fall of the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Since the early years of the American Republic, alcohol has been embedded in the fabric of American culture. But by 1830, the average American over 15 years old consumes nearly seven gallons of pure alcohol a year, three times as much as we drink today. Alcohol abuse wreaks havoc on the lives of many families. As a wave of spiritual fervor for reform sweeps the country, many women and men begin to see alcohol as a scourge. After the Civil War, the country's population swells with immigrants, who bring their drinking customs with them from Ireland, Germany, Italy and other European countries. The temperance campaign ignites, spearheaded by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Carrie Nation and her Home Defenders Army bring publicity by attacking Kansas bars with stones and hatchets, and the Anti-Saloon League (ASL) forms to push for an amendment to the Constitution outlawing alcohol nationally. Most politicians dare not defy the ASL, and in 1917 the 18th Amendment sails through both Houses of Congress; it is ratified by the states in just 13 months. When the Amendment is signed into law, Prohibitionists rejoice that America has become officially dry. But Americans are about to discover that making Prohibition the law of the land has been one thing; enforcing it will be another.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. In 1920, Prohibition goes into effect, making it illegal to manufacture, transport or sell intoxicating liquor. This episode examines the problems of enforcement, as millions of law-abiding Americans become lawbreakers overnight. While a significant portion of the country is willing to adapt to the new law, others are shocked at how inconsistent the Volstead Act actually is. As weaknesses in the law and its enforcement become clear, millions find ways to exploit it. Drys had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place, but the law has many victims. Honest policemen are killed on the job, unlucky drinkers are poisoned by adulterated liquor and overzealous federal agents violate civil rights just to make a bust. Alcoholism still exists, and may even be increasing, as women begin to drink in the speakeasies that replace the male-only saloon. Despite the growing discontent with Prohibition and its consequences, few politicians dare to speak out against the law, fearful of its powerful protector, the Anti-Saloon League.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Support for Prohibition diminishes in the mid-1920s as the playfulness of sneaking around for a drink gives way to disenchantment with its glaring unintended consequences. By criminalizing one of the nation's largest industries, the law has given savvy gangsters a way to make huge profits, and as they grow in power, rival outfits wreak havoc in cities across the country. The burgeoning tabloid newspaper industry fans the frenzy with sensational headlines and front-page photographs of murder scenes, while Al Capone holds press conferences and signs autographs. The wealthy Pauline Sabin begins publicly decrying that Prohibition has divided the nation into "wets, drys, and hypocrites." Nearly a century before, women had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place for their children. But by the late 1920s many American women believe that the "Noble Experiment" has failed. Sabin unifies women of all classes, refuting the notion that all women support Prohibition and denouncing the law itself as the greatest threat to their families. Sabin and others argue that repeal will bring in tax revenue and provide desperately needed jobs. After the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, Congress easily passes the 21st Amendment, which repeals the 18th, and the states quickly ratify it. In December of 1933, Americans can legally buy a drink for the first time in 13 years.

A New Medellin: The city of Medellin in Colombia has undergone a dramatic transformation in recent years. Once known for its murders and drug trafficking, Medellin's crime is dropping rapidly, and sleek new buildings, better public transportation options, help for small businesses, and improved policies aimed at reducing poverty and inequality are the first hopeful signs that, while there are still many challenging issues, the city may have left its violent legacy behind. We talk with a Catholic priest, an architect, and an urban affairs scholar about the city's changes.

The author of an astounding 29 New York Times bestsellers, Patricia Cornwell is the world's #1 bestselling crime writer. To date, her books have sold some 100 million copies in thirty-six languages in over 120 countries. Amazingly, however, she reportedly never wanted to be a writer, but her natural ability to create fantasies and compelling characters won out. This year marks the 25th anniversary of the creation of her signature character, Dr. Kay Scarpetta, the woman who launched a national obsession with forensic research, serving as the inspiration for shows like C.S.I and N.C.I.S. Cornwell is out now with the latest novel in the Scarpetta franchise, titled Depraved Heart.

Chaos erupted in the House Republican conference this week after Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy decided to end his bid to replace outgoing Speaker John Boehner. The vote was postponed at the GOP looked for a candidate who could garner support from the establishment and the Party's right flank. Party leaders openly courted Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, who has said multiple times he doesn't want the job. Morning Consult's Reid Wilson reports on the scramble in the House. Plus, Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton announced her opposition to the Pacific trade agreement pushed by her former boss President Obama. The Washington Post's Anne Gearan reports on Clinton's efforts to distance herself from Obama. And Politico's Michael Crowley reports on the Pentagon's decision to end a program that trained Syrian rebels to fight ISIS. The $500 million dollar program trained only a handful of recruits. At the same time, Russia is amplifying its presence in Syria. Meanwhile, the Supreme Court returns for the new term with cases on issues ranging from affirmative action to voting rights. Joan Biskupic of Reuters discusses whether the more liberal wins of the SCOTUS' last session were an irregularity or a pattern set to stick around.

Oregon Shooting Renews Push For Gun Laws, Republican House Leadership Shakeup and Russian Airstrikes in Syria: After a gunman opened fire at a community college in Oregon killing nine people, President Obama made an impassioned appeal for stronger gun control policy. Despite Obama's plea, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics says there seems to be no appetite to bring up new gun legislation on Capitol Hill and if any change occurs it'll be a project for the next president. After the announced resignation of House Speaker John Boehner, Republicans on Capitol Hill are preparing to elect a new leader. The likely next-Speaker Kevin McCarthy has come under fire from Democrats after he initially told Fox News that the investigation into the Benghazi attacks and Hillary Clinton's role was politically motivated. Another government shutdown was avoided after a battle over federal funding for Planned Parenthood heated up. NPR's Susan Davis discusses how the debate will start up again in December. And after meeting with President Obama at the UN General Assembly in New York this week, Russian President Vladimir Putin and his government launched airstrikes in Syria just days later. Despite the assertions of the Kremlin, it appears the attacks are being carried out against anti-Assad forces in the region and not against ISIS. The New York Times' Peter Baker and The Daily Beast's Nancy Youssef discuss how Putin's defense of Assad's government may be an inadvertent defense of his own.

Democrats Spar in First Debate, Obama Slows Afghan Troop Withdrawal and 2016 Fundraising Reports: The five Democratic White House hopefuls squared off in their Party's first debate of the 2016 Election with issues ranging from gun control, foreign policy and Hillary Clinton's State Department emails. Dan Balz of The Washington Post says that despite Clinton's strong showing at the debate, Joe Biden continues to weigh a 2016 run. President Obama announced this week his decision to delay the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Afghanistan which will push American occupation within the country well into 2016. Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics speaks on the "disappointment" Obama could feel at having to hand off Afghanistan and Iraq to his successor. And the third quarter presidential fundraising reports show Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders standing atop the field with more cash on hand than the entire Republican field.

Hillary Clinton faced another congressional committee this week concerning the 2012 Benghazi attacks that killed four Americans. Despite the 11 hour hearing and sometimes pointed exchanges between committee members, Josh Gerstein of Politico says that while the hearing was a setback her email scandal isn't over with a looming FBI investigation coming to the forefront. Vice President Joe Biden announced he will not run for president. His announcement came this week amongst a flurry of speculation about his White House aspirations. Biden cited that despite his family's support he did not believe that there would be enough time to make a viable bid. The Wall Street Journal's Carol Lee says that if Biden had chosen to run he would become the "standard bearer of Obama's legacy." Rep. Paul Ryan announced that he will pursue the House Speaker candidacy. Ryan nailed down key endorsements from conservative groups of leading congressman like the House Freedom Caucus. CNN's Manu Raju explains how despite his constant assertions of not wanting the job Ryan relented by setting forth a string of conditions, one of them being Ryan's desire to see more unity within the GOP. And Molly Ball of The Atlantic discusses Donald Trump's unorthodox campaign for the Republican nomination.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt sets out to learn more about soul food and its relevance to black cultural identity. His exploration was inspired by his father's lifelong love affair with the high-fat, calorie-rich traditional diet and his unwillingness to give it up even in the face of a life-threatening health crisis. As Hurt discovers, the relationship between African Americans and dishes such as ribs and grits and fried chicken is culturally based, deep-rooted, complex and often deadly. Through candid interviews with soul-food cooks, historians and scholars, as well as doctors and everyday people, "Soul Food Junkies" puts this culinary tradition under the microscope to examine its positive and negative consequences.

Before he started his film career, Michael B. Jordan was the youngest African American actor to be contracted with ABC's daytime drama series, All My Children, and starred in two critically acclaimed TV series (The Wire and Friday Night Lights). The Southern California native attended New Jersey's Newark High School and has been described by a Hollywood Reporter film critic as giving off "vibes of a very young Denzel Washington." In 2013, he delivered his breakthrough performance in the Ryan Coogler film, Fruitvale Station, in which he portrayed Oscar Grant, an unarmed father who was killed by a police officer at an Oakland train station in 2009. Jordan reunites with Coogler in the highly anticipated new film Creed, a new chapter in the beloved Rocky saga.

Misty Copeland rose to stardom despite not starting ballet until age 13 and, by age 15, was winning awards. She joined the Studio Company of the American Ballet Theatre (one of the three leading classical companies in the U.S.) in 2000, became a member of the corps de ballet in 2001 and was appointed a soloist in 2007. She has been named to the President's Council on Fitness, Sports, and Nutrition and co-wrote an inspiring memoir, Life in Motion, that has been optioned for adaptation as a feature film. She also co-authored the award-winning children's book Firebird. In June 2015, Misty was promoted to principal dancer, making her the first African-American woman to ever be promoted to the position in the company's 75-year history.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

IF YOU BUILD IT follows designer-activists Emily Pilloton and Matthew Miller to rural Bertie County, the poorest in North Carolina, where they work with local high school students to help transform both their community and their lives. Living on credit and grant money and fighting a change-resistant school board, Pilloton and Miller lead their students through a year-long, full-scale design and build project that does much more than just teach basic construction skills: it shows ten teenagers the power of design-thinking to re-invent not just their town but their own sense of what's possible.

Out in the Silence captures the remarkable chain of events that unfold when the announcement of filmmaker Joe Wilson's wedding to another man ignites a firestorm of controversy in his small Pennsylvania hometown. Drawn back by a plea for help from the mother of a gay teen being tormented at school, Wilson's journey dramatically illustrates the universal challenges of being an outsider in a conservative environment and the transformation that is possible when those who have long been constrained by a traditional code of silence summon the courage to break it.

Out in the Silence captures the remarkable chain of events that unfold when the announcement of filmmaker Joe Wilson's wedding to another man ignites a firestorm of controversy in his small Pennsylvania hometown. Drawn back by a plea for help from the mother of a gay teen being tormented at school, Wilson's journey dramatically illustrates the universal challenges of being an outsider in a conservative environment and the transformation that is possible when those who have long been constrained by a traditional code of silence summon the courage to break it.

O.B. Date: 11/11/2015
Service: INDIE
Format: DOCUMENTARY
Segment Length: 01:23:27:00

In May 2003, Fox Company of Marine Reserve Unit 2/23 returned home from front-line combat in Iraq. Reserved To Fight follows four Marines of Fox Company for four years through their postwar minefield of social and psychological reintegration into civilian life. The return to their communities proves as formidable a battle as the more literal firefights of previous months. Living among loved ones who don't yet understand them and how they have changed, contending with a media focused on the politics rather than the human experience of war, and suffering from a psychological disorder that is difficult to acknowledge, these young veterans grapple to find purpose and healing.

On an early autumn afternoon, in his parent's ranch in Norman, Oklahoma, gay teen Zack Harrington killed himself with a gunshot to the head. One week earlier, Zack attended a local city council meeting in support of a proposal for LGBTQ History Month in his bible-belt town. When the floor was opened up for public comment, some community members made highly controversial statements equating being gay with the spread of diseases such as HIV and AIDS. Against the backdrop of a town bitterly divided on the issue of homosexuality, Zack's grief-stricken parents, both conservative Republicans and military veterans, are forced to reconcile their own social and political beliefs with their son's death. Determined to understand Zack, they discover a private diary, which paints a gripping portrait of a boy in crisis. Ultimately, they discover a chilling secret that Zack kept hidden for almost two years, which leads them to some painful conclusions about their son's life and death. When an outspoken conservative citizen runs for City Council, the Harringtons decide to join a politically active group called "MOMS: Mothers of Many" (mainly comprised of local mothers of LGBTQ youth). Over the course of the local election season, we witness Zack's family, once private and politically conservative, come out of their own closet, moving from private denial to a climactic and very public acceptance of their son's legacy.

Format: DOCUMENTARY

Segment Length: 01:26:46:00

Filmmaker Charlotte Glynn moves home to chronicle her sister Rachel's last year in school. Rachel is developmentally disabled, and the resulting film, Rachel is, moves past the safety of political correctness and into the most intimate and honest moments in their family's life. Rachel is mysterious, funny, difficult and full of contradictions but she wants what most people her age want -- to move out of her mother's house. This dream of independence seems impossible. Rachel can't be left alone and the social services needed for her to live an "adult life" are unavailable.

In the spring of 2012, four best friends drove across the country in search of adaptive sports for individuals with physical disabilities, and lived to tell the story in a feature documentary film. From rehabilitation patients to Paralympic athletes, our cameras captured the reality of broken boundaries and common goals among all who are active. We went rock climbing with the blind, played soccer with quadriplegics, and swam with those with muscular dystrophy, to name a few. Through our journey, we learned that sports really are the great equalizer, unifying people of all abilities on a level playing field.

Segment Length: 01:26:45:00

In the spring of 2012, four best friends drove across the country in search of adaptive sports for individuals with physical disabilities, and lived to tell the story in a feature documentary film. From rehabilitation patients to Paralympic athletes, our cameras captured the reality of broken boundaries and common goals among all who are active. We went rock climbing with the blind, played soccer with quadriplegics, and swam with those with muscular dystrophy, to name a few. Through our journey, we learned that sports really are the great equalizer, unifying people of all abilities on a level playing field.

Musician, folk dancer, and psychiatrist Clark Wang prepares for his own green burial, determined that his final resting place will benefit the earth. He has discovered a movement that uses burial to conserve and restore natural areas, forgoing toxic, wasteful funeral practices engineered to preserve the body at the ecosystem's expense. Clark, a spirited and charismatic advocate, sets out to save a tract of forest with the help of green burial pioneers and a compassionate local cemeterian.

In 2004, the United States dedicated a long-awaited memorial to the 16 million men and women who served in the armed forces during World War II, the 400,000 who died in Europe and the Pacific and those who toiled in factories on the home front. A GATHERING OF HEROES recounts the touching and inspirational story of World War II veterans from Indiana who embarked on a cross-country trek to Washington, D.C. to visit the memorial which honors their sacrifice. On the 12-hour bus ride, the veterans (most in their 80s and 90s) reminisce about their war experiences, sharing their emotional tales of struggle and survival.

"Drive Like A Girl" follows New York's champion all-girls robotics team, The Iron Maidens, just one year after they beat more than 60 male-dominated teams in a regional competition. Though they advanced to the national stage in Atlanta, Ga., they lost before winning it all. Now, they've returned for another shot at the title. They had six weeks to design, program and build a robot alongside their brother team and one of their competitors, the Sciborgs. The struggles they face reveal what it takes to be a group of girls excelling at a boys' game and their successes are a glimpse at the changing roles of females in science and technology.

Given Internet access, can kids really learn anything by themselves? It started with a hole in the wall. Sugata Mitra, working for a software company in Delhi, cut a gap between his firm and the slum next door, putting out an Internet-connected computer for kids in the community to use. That simple experiment has turned into a radical idea that children can teach themselves in self-organized learning environments. Economics correspondent Paul Solman reports.

Republicans Debate the Economy, Paul Ryan Elected House Speaker & Obama Authorizes Boots on Ground in Syria: Republican presidential candidates debated economic issues in their third matchup of the 2016 election. Jeb Bush and Marco Rubio sparred over Rubio's missed Senate votes. Jeb Bush's performance seems to have worried some of his donors and Jeanne Cummings of The Wall Street Journal says that Bush must improve for the next debate or his campaign doesn't stand a chance in the upcoming election. The debate also took another turn with candidates and even audience members expressing irritation at the CNBC moderators for questions that were viewed as contentious. RNC Chair Reince Priebus, upset with the outcome of the debate, has chosen to suspend the GOP's partnership with NBC for their upcoming debate. John Harwood of CNBC, who moderated the latest debate, says the "anger at the debate is akin to the anger in the House" among Republicans. In Congress, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, despite his initial hesitation, was elected the 54th Speaker of the House this week. Ryan called for unity and renewal within the GOP party, the week that outgoing Speaker John Boehner helped pass a bipartisan budget deal. Robert Costa of The Washington Post reports on the experience Ryan brings to the job. President Obama announced this week that circumstances have changed and has authorized Special Forces to Syria to assist rebel fighters battling ISIS. Doyle McManus of The Los Angeles Times says that Obama's decision to enter Syria may be an indirect response to Russia's recent occupation within the country.

Is kindergarten too young to suspend a student? At the largest charter school network in New York City, strict academic and behavior standards set the stage for learning. That doesn't exclude children as young as 5 or 6 years old, who can be given out-of-school suspensions if they don't follow the rules. Special correspondent for education John Merrow explores what that policy means for both the child and the school.

What's making the rural American West more diverse: Wyoming is the least populated state in the country, and one of the whitest. But that could be changing slowly. Since 2010, the state's African-American population has nearly doubled, a demographic shift that's taking place all over the West, and likely driven by job opportunities in oil boomtowns. Special correspondent Leigh Paterson of Inside Energy reports.

It was the strongest cyclone to hit land in recorded history. On November 8, 2013, Typhoon Haiyan-what some are calling "the perfect storm"-slammed into the Philippines, whipping the low-lying and denselypopulated islands with 200 mile-per-hour winds and sending a two-story-high storm surge flooding into homes, schools, and hospitals. It wiped villages off the map and devastated cities, including the hard-hit provincial capital Tacloban. Estimates count more than 5000 dead and millions homeless. What made Haiyan so destructive? In-depth interviews with the meteorologists charged with tracking and forecasting Pacific storms take us inside the anatomy of the typhoon, tracking its progress from its start as a low-pressure area over Micronesia to its deadly landfall and revealing why the Pacific is such fertile ground for cyclones. But that's just part of the story of why this storm was so deadly. With crews on the ground within days of the storm, NOVA reveals how conditions dramatically deteriorated in the storm's aftermath, as impassable roads and shuttered gas stations paralyzed the critical relief effort, leaving lifesaving food, water, and medicine to pile up at the airport. Disaster preparedness experts and relief workers scramble to understand why the Philippines was so vulnerable when other countries, like India, have successfully slashed storm casualty counts in recent years. As climate change and sea level rise threaten millions of the world's most impoverished people with stronger, and perhaps more frequent, storms, how can we prepare for the next MONSTER TYPHOON?

In Tampa, Florida, in February 2013, a giant hole opened up under the bedroom floor of Jeffrey Bush, swallowing the 36-year-old as he slept. His body was never found. Bush was a victim of a sinkhole - a growing worldwide hazard that lurks wherever limestone and other water-soluble rocks underpin the soil. When carbon dioxide in the air dissolves in rainwater, it forms a weak acid that attacks the soft rocks, riddling them with holes like Swiss cheese. Sinkholes can occur gradually when the surface subsides into bowl-shaped depressions or suddenly, when the ground gives way - often catastrophically. Sinkholes have swallowed highways, apartment buildings, horses, camels, even golfers, with monster-size holes cracking the earth from Siberia to Louisiana. With compelling eyewitness video of dramatic collapses, and following scientists as they explore the underlying forces behind these natural disasters, NOVA travels the globe to investigate what it's like to have your world vanish beneath your feet.

Parliament of the World's Religions: The 2015 Parliament of the World's Religions, the oldest and largest interfaith gathering in the world, was held October 15-19th in Salt Lake City. Some 10,000 participants from 50 spiritual traditions participated. The event was first held in Chicago in 1893. This year's gathering focused on peace, climate change, and women in leadership. Imam Malik Mujahid, who chairs the Parliament's board of trustees, described the event and why he believes it is important for people of faith to gather in solidarity and believe in "the humanity of the other."

China Environmental Ethics: Industrial pollution is a major problem in China, where massive, low-cost manufacturing has taken priority over environmental protection. But that may finally be changing as awareness about the impact of China's rapid industrialization grows. One of the people working to increase that awareness is Chinese activist Ma Jun. He founded a nongovernmental organization, the Institute of Public and Environmental Affairs, to fight factory pollution by means of transparency, accessible data, and public information. The IPE and its American partner, the Natural Resources Defense Council, say Western consumers have a moral responsibility and ethical obligation to help solve China's pollution problem, since the world made a decision to concentrate so much of its manufacturing in one country. In partnership with the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting.

Ninety years ago in Egypt's Valley of the Kings, the greatest archaeological find in history was made: the discovery of Tutankhamen's tomb and its golden treasures. It made Tutankhamen the most famous name in ancient Egyptian history. But the real story has become shrouded in myth - with many mysteries around the tomb unsolved to this day. This two-part special combines the latest evidence from a team of archaeologists, anatomists, geologists and Egyptologists to build the ultimate picture of Tutankhamen. Blending 3D graphics, stylized reconstruction and action-adventure forensic investigation, the programs take a 21st-century approach to ancient history, following new scientific research and presenting fresh insights into how Tutankhamen was buried, why his tomb was the only one to remain intact and the enduring enigma around how he died.

Why it's hard to find a missing person among the unidentified dead: There are more than 10,000 bodies -- Jane and John Does -- waiting for identification in city morgues and cemeteries in the U.S. With no national law requiring agencies share information on missing people and unknown bodies, many families are left in the dark about their loved ones' fates. Michael Schiller of Reveal for the Center for Investigative Reporting has the story.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt sets out to learn more about soul food and its relevance to black cultural identity. His exploration was inspired by his father's lifelong love affair with the high-fat, calorie-rich traditional diet and his unwillingness to give it up even in the face of a life-threatening health crisis. As Hurt discovers, the relationship between African Americans and dishes such as ribs and grits and fried chicken is culturally based, deep-rooted, complex and often deadly. Through candid interviews with soul-food cooks, historians and scholars, as well as doctors and everyday people, "Soul Food Junkies" puts this culinary tradition under the microscope to examine its positive and negative consequences.

Kidney Donors and Faith Communities: Should organ donors of particular religious traditions be able to specify that their donation go only to co-religionists? Throughout the U.S. there is a dramatic shortage of people willing to give up one of their organs to save a stranger's life. It's a difficult problem for the many patients needing a new kidney, especially among African Americans. One solution, as the Orthodox Jewish charity called Renewal has found, is to connect organ donors with sick patients within their own faith communities, which encourages more people to donate. Leaders of other faith groups, among them African-American churches, are using the Renewal approach in their own communities in order to encourage more organ donations. But what are the ethics of donating organs only within specific communities of faith rather than to anybody?

Faith-Based Activism on Climate Change (originally published: June 19, 2015): In the bayous of south Louisiana, faith-based activists are trying to help vulnerable communities already affected by climate change. Most scientists say climate change has led to rising sea levels that are accelerating erosion and land loss, leading in turn to the displacement of local residents. Last summer, Pope Francis released his much anticipated encyclical on climate change, and while many environmental advocates support the pope's contributions to the current debate, there are also some critics who say political and scientific issues are beyond his purview.

Oregon Shooting Renews Push For Gun Laws, Republican House Leadership Shakeup and Russian Airstrikes in Syria: After a gunman opened fire at a community college in Oregon killing nine people, President Obama made an impassioned appeal for stronger gun control policy. Despite Obama's plea, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics says there seems to be no appetite to bring up new gun legislation on Capitol Hill and if any change occurs it'll be a project for the next president. After the announced resignation of House Speaker John Boehner, Republicans on Capitol Hill are preparing to elect a new leader. The likely next-Speaker Kevin McCarthy has come under fire from Democrats after he initially told Fox News that the investigation into the Benghazi attacks and Hillary Clinton's role was politically motivated. Another government shutdown was avoided after a battle over federal funding for Planned Parenthood heated up. NPR's Susan Davis discusses how the debate will start up again in December. And after meeting with President Obama at the UN General Assembly in New York this week, Russian President Vladimir Putin and his government launched airstrikes in Syria just days later. Despite the assertions of the Kremlin, it appears the attacks are being carried out against anti-Assad forces in the region and not against ISIS. The New York Times' Peter Baker and The Daily Beast's Nancy Youssef discuss how Putin's defense of Assad's government may be an inadvertent defense of his own.

Join us on our discovery of Europe's Christmas Markets, where the town center, market square or just the narrow, cobblestone streets of the cities and towns of Europe come alive in winter with festively decorated wooden stalls offering all sorts of treats and delights. As we travel through Germany, France and Switzerland we visit cities and towns and learn of their history, see their major sights, and visit their charming markets. Besides being a visual treat, the show is also a musical treat, as T the Kingston Trio provides special folk arrangements of traditional Christmas carols to add to the magic and enchantment of the medieval and castle towns we visit. In our visit to Bernkastel-Kues we see the town hall decorated as an advent calendar, and learn of the traditional beverage of the markets, the Gluhwein. In Nuremberg we visit the imposing castle, and one of the most famous of all the Christmas markets. You can almost smell the roasting sausages and gingerbread sold in the stalls. In Rothenburg we learn of the traditional wooden Christmas decorations from the son of the founder of the Kathe Wolfhart Christmas store, and wander along the ramparts the the fairy tale village. Then we have a quick stop in the wine town of Rudesheim. A unique visit is made to the ancient town of Michelstadt and its Christmas market. And then into France, to see how the French celebrate the season in Strasbourg. We conclude our travels in Switzerland, with the sights and sounds of the holidays in Basel and and the alpine city of Lucerne. This show is a true Christmas treat, as we experience Europe at a time of community, conviviality and color. This Week PBS' To The Contrary presents a special documentary about LGBT and the United Methodist Church. The United Methodist Church remains officially opposed to homosexuality, same sex marriage, and self-avowed gay pastors. It's official rulebook - the book of discipline states - "The practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching." But not all United Methodist congregations agree with the church's view on the issue. The fight on this issue is testing the faith more than ever and Dividing the United Methodist Church.

Rebuilding Urban Neighborhoods (originally published: July 3, 2015): Urban activist and Christian community developer Bob Lupton challenges common conceptions about modern charitable work by arguing that most charity is ineffective and does more harm than good. He advocates letting the poor learn to help themselves and encouraging the well-off to live alongside the poor. Lupton is the founder and president of FCS (Focused Community Strategies) Urban Ministries and the author, most recently, of "Charity Detox: What Charity Would Look Like If We Cared About Results." Writes Lupton: "We cannot serve people out of poverty."

East of Salinas is a story about immigration, childhood, and circumstance. With little support at home, Salinas, California third grader Jose Ansaldo often turns to his teacher, Oscar Ramos, once a migrant farm kid himself. Oscar helps Jose imagine a future beyond the lettuce fields where his parents work. But Jose was born in Mexico - and he's on the cusp of understanding the implications of that. As we watch this play out, we begin to understand the cruelty of circumstance - for Jose and many millions of migrant kids like him. East of Salinas asks: What is lost when kids like Jose are denied opportunities?

Located alongside the Tennessee River, Muscle Shoals, Alabama, is the unlikely breeding ground for some of America's most creative and defiant music. Under the spiritual influence of the "Singing River," as Native Americans called it, the music of Muscle Shoals has helped create some of the most important and resonant songs of all time. At its heart is Rick Hall, who founded FAME Studios. Overcoming crushing poverty and staggering tragedies, Hall brought black and white together in Alabama's cauldron of racial hostility to create music for the generations. He is responsible for creating the "Muscle Shoals sound" and the Swampers, the house band at FAME that eventually left to start its own successful studio, Muscle Shoals Sound. In this joyful film, Greg Allman, Bono, Clarence Carter, Mick Jagger, Etta James, Alicia Keys, Keith Richards, Percy Sledge and others bear witness to Muscle Shoals' magnetism and mystery, and why it remains influential today.

Before he started his film career, Michael B. Jordan was the youngest African American actor to be contracted with ABC's daytime drama series, All My Children, and starred in two critically acclaimed TV series (The Wire and Friday Night Lights). The Southern California native attended New Jersey's Newark High School and has been described by a Hollywood Reporter film critic as giving off "vibes of a very young Denzel Washington." In 2013, he delivered his breakthrough performance in the Ryan Coogler film, Fruitvale Station, in which he portrayed Oscar Grant, an unarmed father who was killed by a police officer at an Oakland train station in 2009. Jordan reunites with Coogler in the highly anticipated new film Creed, a new chapter in the beloved Rocky saga.

On Sunday, October 30, 1938, the night before Halloween, millions of Americans gathered around their radios and heard a news bulletin about strange explosions on Mars, followed by other reports that led them to believe an alien invasion was in progress. Relive the thrill of Orson Welles' infamous radio dramatization of H.G. Wells' War of the Worlds, 75 years after it set off one of the biggest mass hysteria events in U.S. history. The film examines the elements that made America ripe for the hoax: America's longtime fascination with life on Mars; the emergence of radio as a powerful new medium; the shocking Hindenburg explosion of 1937; and Welles himself, the 23-year-old wunderkind director of the drama and mischief-maker supreme.

Republicans Debate the Economy, Paul Ryan Elected House Speaker & Obama Authorizes Boots on Ground in Syria: Republican presidential candidates debated economic issues in their third matchup of the 2016 election. Jeb Bush and Marco Rubio sparred over Rubio's missed Senate votes. Jeb Bush's performance seems to have worried some of his donors and Jeanne Cummings of The Wall Street Journal says that Bush must improve for the next debate or his campaign doesn't stand a chance in the upcoming election. The debate also took another turn with candidates and even audience members expressing irritation at the CNBC moderators for questions that were viewed as contentious. RNC Chair Reince Priebus, upset with the outcome of the debate, has chosen to suspend the GOP's partnership with NBC for their upcoming debate. John Harwood of CNBC, who moderated the latest debate, says the "anger at the debate is akin to the anger in the House" among Republicans. In Congress, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, despite his initial hesitation, was elected the 54th Speaker of the House this week. Ryan called for unity and renewal within the GOP party, the week that outgoing Speaker John Boehner helped pass a bipartisan budget deal. Robert Costa of The Washington Post reports on the experience Ryan brings to the job. President Obama announced this week that circumstances have changed and has authorized Special Forces to Syria to assist rebel fighters battling ISIS. Doyle McManus of The Los Angeles Times says that Obama's decision to enter Syria may be an indirect response to Russia's recent occupation within the country.

The statistics are staggering: Over 100,000 United States Veterans are homeless every year. Many of these men fought several decades ago during the Vietnam Era. Beginning in the early 1990's, dozens of homeless veterans programs have come into existence across the United States. STREET VETS is the culmination of a year-long chronicling of the life and times of ten men living at Ogden, Utah's Homeless Veterans Fellowship - a transitional housing program aimed at assisting homeless Veterans into self sufficiency. The film provides a remarkably candid view of the long-term scars of war and personal tragedy that, in many cases have led to alcohol and drug abuse...and life on the streets.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt sets out to learn more about soul food and its relevance to black cultural identity. His exploration was inspired by his father's lifelong love affair with the high-fat, calorie-rich traditional diet and his unwillingness to give it up even in the face of a life-threatening health crisis. As Hurt discovers, the relationship between African Americans and dishes such as ribs and grits and fried chicken is culturally based, deep-rooted, complex and often deadly. Through candid interviews with soul-food cooks, historians and scholars, as well as doctors and everyday people, "Soul Food Junkies" puts this culinary tradition under the microscope to examine its positive and negative consequences.

Located alongside the Tennessee River, Muscle Shoals, Alabama, is the unlikely breeding ground for some of America's most creative and defiant music. Under the spiritual influence of the "Singing River," as Native Americans called it, the music of Muscle Shoals has helped create some of the most important and resonant songs of all time. At its heart is Rick Hall, who founded FAME Studios. Overcoming crushing poverty and staggering tragedies, Hall brought black and white together in Alabama's cauldron of racial hostility to create music for the generations. He is responsible for creating the "Muscle Shoals sound" and the Swampers, the house band at FAME that eventually left to start its own successful studio, Muscle Shoals Sound. In this joyful film, Greg Allman, Bono, Clarence Carter, Mick Jagger, Etta James, Alicia Keys, Keith Richards, Percy Sledge and others bear witness to Muscle Shoals' magnetism and mystery, and why it remains influential today.

Saint Kateri and Native American Catholics: November is Native American Heritage Month. An estimated 25 percent of Native Americans are Catholic, but there are also longstanding tensions between the Catholic Church and some indigenous tribes. Early missionary efforts were often tied to colonization and its devastating effects on native cultures. For some Native Americans, their complicated relationship with the Catholic Church is symbolized in its first Native American saint, Kateri Tekakwitha. Managing editor Kim Lawton visits the annual Tekakwitha Conference to ask Native Americans what Saint Kateri's legacy means to them.

Chaos erupted in the House Republican conference this week after Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy decided to end his bid to replace outgoing Speaker John Boehner. The vote was postponed at the GOP looked for a candidate who could garner support from the establishment and the Party's right flank. Party leaders openly courted Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, who has said multiple times he doesn't want the job. Morning Consult's Reid Wilson reports on the scramble in the House. Plus, Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton announced her opposition to the Pacific trade agreement pushed by her former boss President Obama. The Washington Post's Anne Gearan reports on Clinton's efforts to distance herself from Obama. And Politico's Michael Crowley reports on the Pentagon's decision to end a program that trained Syrian rebels to fight ISIS. The $500 million dollar program trained only a handful of recruits. At the same time, Russia is amplifying its presence in Syria. Meanwhile, the Supreme Court returns for the new term with cases on issues ranging from affirmative action to voting rights. Joan Biskupic of Reuters discusses whether the more liberal wins of the SCOTUS' last session were an irregularity or a pattern set to stick around.

Widespread Backlash to Donald Trump's Proposed Muslim Ban: Republican frontrunner Donald Trump drove the 2016 presidential debate this week after proposing to ban all Muslims from entering the U.S. A poll released this week showed 57 percent of Americans oppose the plan, and many of his Republican and Democratic opponents have announced their opposition. But Trump's support among Republican voters is only growing as voters appear to like his tough talk. How can the Republican Party grab the enthusiasm Trump is bringing without alienating swing voters or preventing Trump from mounting an independent campaign? Gwen Ifill discusses Trump mania with TIME's Michael Scherer, The Wall Street Journal's Janet Hook, The Washington Post's Ed O'Keefe and Real Clear Politics' Alexis Simendinger.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge his American neighbors to survive the Christmas season without any Chinese products. The Jones family eagerly accepts this consumer mission-impossible and is drawn into an intercultural exchange with the Xia family. As the Joneses strive to adapt without their Chinese-made appliances and Christmas lights, Tom hopes that they'll begin to appreciate his birthplace. When Tim Jones challenges Tom about his pride in communist China, Tom, struggling to explain China and go beyond the stereotypes, realizes he's on a journey of self-discovery, torn between his competing loyalties to the U.S. and China. XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is a playful yet poignant exploration of America's increasing interdependence with China in a time when, as President Obama says, "the relationship between the United States and China will shape the 21st century."

Why more Syrian refugees are leaving Jordan than arriving: In Jordan, there's intense sympathy for the thousands of refugees who have landed there. But it's illegal for most Syrians to work in that nation, and limited food aid doesn't go very far. So refugees are increasingly making the dangerous journey to Europe, or even back home, because they are struggling to survive in countries that neighbor their own. How fragile Yemen peace efforts affect the fight against the Islamic State. In Yemen, there have been small signs of progress at peace negotiations between the government and Shiite Houthi rebels, but tanks are still blasting and gunfire still cracking despite a cease-fire. The conflict, which has ravaged the Arab world's poorest country, has also affected the U.S. fight against al-Qaida and the Islamic State group. Chief foreign affairs correspondent Margaret Warner reports.

Chaos erupted in the House Republican conference this week after Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy decided to end his bid to replace outgoing Speaker John Boehner. The vote was postponed at the GOP looked for a candidate who could garner support from the establishment and the Party's right flank. Party leaders openly courted Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, who has said multiple times he doesn't want the job. Morning Consult's Reid Wilson reports on the scramble in the House. Plus, Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton announced her opposition to the Pacific trade agreement pushed by her former boss President Obama. The Washington Post's Anne Gearan reports on Clinton's efforts to distance herself from Obama. And Politico's Michael Crowley reports on the Pentagon's decision to end a program that trained Syrian rebels to fight ISIS. The $500 million dollar program trained only a handful of recruits. At the same time, Russia is amplifying its presence in Syria. Meanwhile, the Supreme Court returns for the new term with cases on issues ranging from affirmative action to voting rights. Joan Biskupic of Reuters discusses whether the more liberal wins of the SCOTUS' last session were an irregularity or a pattern set to stick around.

Oregon Shooting Renews Push For Gun Laws, Republican House Leadership Shakeup and Russian Airstrikes in Syria: After a gunman opened fire at a community college in Oregon killing nine people, President Obama made an impassioned appeal for stronger gun control policy. Despite Obama's plea, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics says there seems to be no appetite to bring up new gun legislation on Capitol Hill and if any change occurs it'll be a project for the next president. After the announced resignation of House Speaker John Boehner, Republicans on Capitol Hill are preparing to elect a new leader. The likely next-Speaker Kevin McCarthy has come under fire from Democrats after he initially told Fox News that the investigation into the Benghazi attacks and Hillary Clinton's role was politically motivated. Another government shutdown was avoided after a battle over federal funding for Planned Parenthood heated up. NPR's Susan Davis discusses how the debate will start up again in December. And after meeting with President Obama at the UN General Assembly in New York this week, Russian President Vladimir Putin and his government launched airstrikes in Syria just days later. Despite the assertions of the Kremlin, it appears the attacks are being carried out against anti-Assad forces in the region and not against ISIS. The New York Times' Peter Baker and The Daily Beast's Nancy Youssef discuss how Putin's defense of Assad's government may be an inadvertent defense of his own.

Republicans Debate the Economy, Paul Ryan Elected House Speaker & Obama Authorizes Boots on Ground in Syria: Republican presidential candidates debated economic issues in their third matchup of the 2016 election. Jeb Bush and Marco Rubio sparred over Rubio's missed Senate votes. Jeb Bush's performance seems to have worried some of his donors and Jeanne Cummings of The Wall Street Journal says that Bush must improve for the next debate or his campaign doesn't stand a chance in the upcoming election. The debate also took another turn with candidates and even audience members expressing irritation at the CNBC moderators for questions that were viewed as contentious. RNC Chair Reince Priebus, upset with the outcome of the debate, has chosen to suspend the GOP's partnership with NBC for their upcoming debate. John Harwood of CNBC, who moderated the latest debate, says the "anger at the debate is akin to the anger in the House" among Republicans. In Congress, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, despite his initial hesitation, was elected the 54th Speaker of the House this week. Ryan called for unity and renewal within the GOP party, the week that outgoing Speaker John Boehner helped pass a bipartisan budget deal. Robert Costa of The Washington Post reports on the experience Ryan brings to the job. President Obama announced this week that circumstances have changed and has authorized Special Forces to Syria to assist rebel fighters battling ISIS. Doyle McManus of The Los Angeles Times says that Obama's decision to enter Syria may be an indirect response to Russia's recent occupation within the country.

Hillary Clinton faced another congressional committee this week concerning the 2012 Benghazi attacks that killed four Americans. Despite the 11 hour hearing and sometimes pointed exchanges between committee members, Josh Gerstein of Politico says that while the hearing was a setback her email scandal isn't over with a looming FBI investigation coming to the forefront. Vice President Joe Biden announced he will not run for president. His announcement came this week amongst a flurry of speculation about his White House aspirations. Biden cited that despite his family's support he did not believe that there would be enough time to make a viable bid. The Wall Street Journal's Carol Lee says that if Biden had chosen to run he would become the "standard bearer of Obama's legacy." Rep. Paul Ryan announced that he will pursue the House Speaker candidacy. Ryan nailed down key endorsements from conservative groups of leading congressman like the House Freedom Caucus. CNN's Manu Raju explains how despite his constant assertions of not wanting the job Ryan relented by setting forth a string of conditions, one of them being Ryan's desire to see more unity within the GOP. And Molly Ball of The Atlantic discusses Donald Trump's unorthodox campaign for the Republican nomination.

Democrats Spar in First Debate, Obama Slows Afghan Troop Withdrawal and 2016 Fundraising Reports: The five Democratic White House hopefuls squared off in their Party's first debate of the 2016 Election with issues ranging from gun control, foreign policy and Hillary Clinton's State Department emails. Dan Balz of The Washington Post says that despite Clinton's strong showing at the debate, Joe Biden continues to weigh a 2016 run. President Obama announced this week his decision to delay the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Afghanistan which will push American occupation within the country well into 2016. Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics speaks on the "disappointment" Obama could feel at having to hand off Afghanistan and Iraq to his successor. And the third quarter presidential fundraising reports show Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders standing atop the field with more cash on hand than the entire Republican field.

After seven years of debate, the Obama administration rejected the proposed Keystone XL pipeline. Obama said the project, which would extend from Canada to Texas, served "no national interest." The New York Times' Coral Davenport explains what's behind the decision. Also on Friday, the October jobs report was released showing over 270,000 jobs added and an unemployment rate down to 5% for the first time since 2008. Eamon Javers of CNBC explains how the good report may encourage the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates. In the 2016 presidential race, Ben Carson is facing increased scrutiny for claims made in his 1992 memoir. Carson and businessman Donald Trump now lead the field of Republican candidates while one-time frontrunner Jeb Bush makes a push to reboot his campaign. The Washington Post's Dan Balz and CNN's Jeff Zeleny break down the events on the election trail this week.

How has the Paris attack shifted the U.S. fight against ISIS, refugee policy and the 2016 campaign? One week after the terror attacks in Paris left 130 people dead, the United States and global community have intensified the resolve to defeat ISIS and prevent future attacks. In state houses across the country and in the U.S. House of Representatives, the conversation has shifted to refugee policy and preventing all Syrian refugees from entering the country until security measures can be stepped up. 2016 presidential candidates are weighing in as well with Republican frontrunner Donald Trump calling for a national database to track Muslims. Gwen Ifill explores how the attack shifted U.S. foreign policy and the race for the White House with Pete Williams of NBC News, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics, Ed O'Keefe of The Washington Post and Susan Davis of NPR.

Widespread Backlash to Donald Trump's Proposed Muslim Ban: Republican frontrunner Donald Trump drove the 2016 presidential debate this week after proposing to ban all Muslims from entering the U.S. A poll released this week showed 57 percent of Americans oppose the plan, and many of his Republican and Democratic opponents have announced their opposition. But Trump's support among Republican voters is only growing as voters appear to like his tough talk. How can the Republican Party grab the enthusiasm Trump is bringing without alienating swing voters or preventing Trump from mounting an independent campaign? Measuring the Mood of America: Concerns About Terror Attacks, Distrust of Elected Leaders: As you dig in to your Thanksgiving leftovers, we dive deep into the American mood. Concerns about terrorism, distrust of political leaders and a spirited debate about who's best to lead our country are topics of conversation around the country. A new poll shows 69% think a terror attack in the U.S. is imminent. What is being done to keep Americans safe? The percentage of Americans who disapprove of the job President Obama is doing is the highest it's been all year, and only one in ten Americans approve of Congress. Can politicians regain the trust of America? And as the 2016 presidential campaign heats up, how are politicians shaping their message to respond to real concerns in the country? Gwen Ifill discusses this all with The New York Times' Peter Baker, The Washington Post's Dan Balz and BBC's Kim Ghattas.

It was the strongest cyclone to hit land in recorded history. On November 8, 2013, Typhoon Haiyan-what some are calling "the perfect storm"-slammed into the Philippines, whipping the low-lying and densely-populated islands with 200 mile-per-hour winds and sending a two-story-high storm surge flooding into homes, schools, and hospitals. It wiped villages off the map and devastated cities, including the hard-hit provincial capital Tacloban. Estimates count more than 5000 dead and millions homeless. What made Haiyan so destructive? In-depth interviews with the meteorologists charged with tracking and forecasting Pacific storms take us inside the anatomy of the typhoon, tracking its progress from its start as a low-pressure area over Micronesia to its deadly landfall and revealing why the Pacific is such fertile ground for cyclones. But that's just part of the story of why this storm was so deadly. With crews on the ground within days of the storm, NOVA reveals how conditions dramatically deteriorated in the storm's aftermath, as impassable roads and shuttered gas stations paralyzed the critical relief effort, leaving lifesaving food, water, and medicine to pile up at the airport. Disaster preparedness experts and relief workers scramble to understand why the Philippines was so vulnerable when other countries, like India, have successfully slashed storm casualty counts in recent years. As climate change and sea level rise threaten millions of the world's most impoverished people with stronger, and perhaps more frequent, storms, how can we prepare for the next MONSTER TYPHOON?

How fragile Yemen peace efforts affect the fight against the Islamic State. In Yemen, there have been small signs of progress at peace negotiations between the government and Shiite Houthi rebels, but tanks are still blasting and gunfire still cracking despite a cease-fire. The conflict, which has ravaged the Arab world's poorest country, has also affected the U.S. fight against al-Qaida and the Islamic State group. Chief foreign affairs correspondent Margaret Warner reports.

Rebuilding Urban Neighborhoods (originally published: July 3, 2015): Urban activist and Christian community developer Bob Lupton challenges common conceptions about modern charitable work by arguing that most charity is ineffective and does more harm than good. He advocates letting the poor learn to help themselves and encouraging the well-off to live alongside the poor. Lupton is the founder and president of FCS (Focused Community Strategies) Urban Ministries and the author, most recently, of "Charity Detox: What Charity Would Look Like If We Cared About Results." Writes Lupton: "We cannot serve people out of poverty."

This documentary about the Egyptian National Football Team, their American coach, Bob Bradley, and the team's quest to qualify for the 2014 World Cup in Brazil follows the team on and off the pitch, and offers a unique window into events unfolding in Egypt following the historic revolution. Bradley arrived in Cairo in late 2011 and found a country and a team in chaos. The rebuilding of the team offers a powerful metaphor for the rebuilding of Egypt and the country's journey toward democracy.

The National Football League, a multibillion-dollar commercial juggernaut, presides over America's indisputable national pastime. But the NFL is under assault as thousands of former players and a host of scientists claim the league has covered up how football inflicted long-term brain injuries on many players. In this special investigation, FRONTLINE and prize-winning journalists Steve Fainaru and Mark Fainaru-Wada of ESPN reveal the hidden story of the NFL and brain injuries, drawn from their forthcoming book League of Denial: The NFL, Concussions and the Battle for Truth (Crown Archetype, October 2013). What did the NFL know and when did it know it? What's the truth about the risks to players? What can be done? The FRONTLINE investigation details how, for years, the league denied and worked to refute scientific evidence that the violent collisions at the heart of the game are linked to an alarming incidence of early onset dementia, catastrophic brain damage, death, and other devastating consequences for some of football's all-time greats.

Kidney Donors and Faith Communities: Should organ donors of particular religious traditions be able to specify that their donation go only to co-religionists? Throughout the U.S. there is a dramatic shortage of people willing to give up one of their organs to save a stranger's life. It's a difficult problem for the many patients needing a new kidney, especially among African Americans. One solution, as the Orthodox Jewish charity called Renewal has found, is to connect organ donors with sick patients within their own faith communities, which encourages more people to donate. Leaders of other faith groups, among them African-American churches, are using the Renewal approach in their own communities in order to encourage more organ donations. But what are the ethics of donating organs only within specific communities of faith rather than to anybody?

Nostra Aetate 50th Anniversary: The 1965 Second Vatican Council declaration on the relation of the church to non-Christian religions transformed church doctrine about Jews and other faiths. Nostra Aetate had its roots "in the shame and realizations of Christians after the Holocaust for what has been done to Jews," according to Rev. Dennis McManus, a consultant for Jewish affairs at the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops and a member of the faculty of the program for Jewish civilization in Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service.

Arizona State University Access to College Education: Under the leadership of President Michael Crow, Arizona State University is encouraging more students to get college degrees by preparing students for higher education as early as pre-school, and by making college more affordable. Crow hopes more schools across the country follow ASU's example. "I think public universities have got to step up and say we're going to figure this out," he suggests. "We're going to figure out how to serve the nation."

Hanukkah on the River: This week, Jews around the world are celebrating Hanukkah, the eight-day festival of lights (December 6-14). Passages in the Talmud direct Jews to "publicize the miracle" of Hanukkah. We visit San Antonio, Texas, where the Jewish community holds an annual "Hanukkah on the River" celebration. Rabbi Chaim Block, executive director of the Chabad Center for Jewish Life &

Learning, explains how they are fulfilling the requirement to spread the miracle with boat parades, children's workshops to make dreidels and donuts, and lighting the menorah to illuminate the season's darkness.

Peter Singer on Effective Altruism: Princeton University ethicist and philosopher Peter Singer, author of The Most Good You Can Do: How Effective Altruism Is Changing Ideas about Living Ethically, explains effective altruism as using means-testing and market research to measure the effectiveness of charities, and then giving money to those organizations that can do the most good. Singer says when people become more generous and give more to others, it actually adds to their own happiness.

Most scientists say climate change has led to rising sea levels that are accelerating erosion and land loss, leading in turn to the displacement of local residents. Last summer, Pope Francis released his much anticipated encyclical on climate change, and while many environmental advocates support the pope's contributions to the current debate, there are also some critics who say political and scientific issues are beyond his purview.

Rebuilding Urban Neighborhoods (originally published: July 3, 2015): Urban activist and Christian community developer Bob Lupton challenges common conceptions about modern charitable work by arguing that most charity is ineffective and does more harm than good. He advocates letting the poor learn to help themselves and encouraging the well-off to live alongside the poor. Lupton is the founder and president of FCS (Focused Community Strategies) Urban Ministries and the author, most recently, of "Charity Detox: What Charity Would Look Like If We Cared About Results." Saint Kateri and Native American Catholics: November is Native American Heritage Month. An estimated 25 percent of Native Americans are Catholic, but there are also longstanding tensions between the Catholic Church and some indigenous tribes. Early missionary efforts were often tied to colonization and its devastating effects on native cultures. For some Native Americans, their complicated relationship with the Catholic Church is symbolized in its first Native American saint, Kateri Tekakwitha. Managing editor Kim Lawton visits the annual Tekakwitha Conference to ask Native Americans what Saint Kateri's legacy means to them.

China Environmental Ethics: Industrial pollution is a major problem in China, where massive, low-cost manufacturing has taken priority over environmental protection. But that may finally be changing as awareness about the impact of China's rapid industrialization grows. One of the people working to increase that awareness is Chinese activist Ma Jun. He founded a nongovernmental organization, the Institute of Public and Environmental Affairs, to fight factory pollution by means of transparency, accessible data, and public information. The IPE and its American partner, the Natural Resources Defense Council, say Western consumers have a moral responsibility and ethical obligation to help solve China's pollution problem, since the world made a decision to concentrate so much of its manufacturing in one country. In partnership with the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting.

How has the Paris attack shifted the U.S. fight against ISIS, refugee policy and the 2016 campaign? One week after the terror attacks in Paris left 130 people dead, the United States and global community have intensified the resolve to defeat ISIS and prevent future attacks. In state houses across the country and in the U.S. House of Representatives, the conversation has shifted to refugee policy and preventing all Syrian refugees from entering the country until security measures can be stepped up. 2016 presidential candidates are weighing in as well with Republican frontrunner Donald Trump calling for a national database to track Muslims. Gwen Ifill explores how the attack shifted U.S. foreign policy and the race for the White House with Pete Williams of NBC News, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics, Ed O'Keefe of The Washington Post and Susan Davis of NPR.

In an unheated shed near Stapleton, Nebraska in the late 1950's Emery Blagdon began twisting old wire and foil, threading hundreds of beads, and shaping everyday castoff materials with one purpose - to generate natural energy to heal. Spurred on by personal tragedy, Blagdon's obsession to create a "Healing Machine" was life-long as he believed people could be cured by his artful chandlers, cascades of wire, and geometric paintings. All which he deemed gave off healing power. Now, 40 years after his death Emery Blagdon is considered to be a man with boundless visionary creativity: an American artist of great significance. Blagdon's work is part of the permanent collection at John Michael Kohler Art Center in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

The National Football League, a multibillion-dollar commercial juggernaut, presides over America's indisputable national pastime. But the league has long denied football's connection to long-term brain injuries. Over two separate hours, FRONTLINE and prize-winning journalists Steve Fainaru and Mark Fainaru-Wada of ESPN reveal the hidden story of the NFL and brain injuries, drawn from their new book League of Denial: The NFL, Concussions and the Battle for Truth (Crown Archetype). What did the NFL know and when did it know it? What are the risks to players? The FRONTLINE investigation details how, for years, the league denied and worked to refute scientific evidence that the violent collisions at the heart of the game are linked to an alarming incidence of early onset dementia, catastrophic brain damage, and other devastating consequences for some of football's all-time greats.

It was the strongest cyclone to hit land in recorded history. On November 8, 2013, Typhoon Haiyan-what some are calling "the perfect storm"-slammed into the Philippines, whipping the low-lying and densely-populated islands with 200 mile-per-hour winds and sending a two-story-high storm surge flooding into homes, schools, and hospitals. It wiped villages off the map and devastated cities, including the hard-hit provincial capital Tacloban. Estimates count more than 5000 dead and millions homeless. What made Haiyan so destructive? In-depth interviews with the meteorologists charged with tracking and forecasting Pacific storms take us inside the anatomy of the typhoon, tracking its progress from its start as a low-pressure area over Micronesia to its deadly landfall and revealing why the Pacific is such fertile ground for cyclones. But that's just part of the story of why this storm was so deadly. With crews on the ground within days of the storm, NOVA reveals how conditions dramatically deteriorated in the storm's aftermath, as impassable roads and shuttered gas stations paralyzed the critical relief effort, leaving lifesaving food, water, and medicine to pile up at the airport. Disaster preparedness experts and relief workers scramble to understand why the Philippines was so vulnerable when other countries, like India, have successfully slashed storm casualty counts in recent years. As climate change and sea level rise threaten millions of the world's most impoverished people with stronger, and perhaps more frequent, storms, how can we prepare for the next MONSTER TYPHOON?

Beneath the streets of Rome lies an ancient city of the dead known as the catacombs - a labyrinth of tunnels, hundreds of miles long - a cemetery for the citizens of ancient Rome. In 2002, maintenance workers stumbled through an opening in one of the tunnel walls and discovered a previously unknown complex of six small rooms, each stacked floor to ceiling with skeletons. It was a mass grave, locked away for nearly 2,000 years. Who were these people? Why were so many interred in one place, piled atop each other? And most important, what killed them? NOVA's forensic investigation opens up new insights into the daily life and health of Roman citizens during the heyday of the mighty Roman Empire.

In Tampa, Florida, in February 2013, a giant hole opened up under the bedroom floor of Jeffrey Bush, swallowing the 36-year-old as he slept. His body was never found. Bush was a victim of a sinkhole - a growing worldwide hazard that lurks wherever limestone and other water-soluble rocks underpin the soil. When carbon dioxide in the air dissolves in rainwater, it forms a weak acid that attacks the soft rocks, riddling them with holes like Swiss cheese. Sinkholes can occur gradually when the surface subsides into bowl-shaped depressions or suddenly, when the ground gives way - often catastrophically. Sinkholes have swallowed highways, apartment buildings, horses, camels, even golfers, with monster-size holes cracking the earth from Siberia to Louisiana. With compelling eyewitness video of dramatic collapses, and following scientists as they explore the underlying forces behind these natural disasters, NOVA travels the globe to investigate what it's like to have your world vanish beneath your feet.

More than 2,000 years ago, the thriving city of Petra rose up in the bone-dry desert of what is now Jordan. An oasis of culture and abundance, the city was built by wealthy merchants who carved spectacular temple-tombs into its cliffs, raised a monumental Great Temple and devised an ingenious system that channeled water to vineyards, bathhouses, fountains and pools. But following a catastrophic earthquake and a slump in its desert trade routes, Petra's unique culture faded and was lost to most of the world for nearly 1,000 years. Now, in a daring experiment, an archaeologist and sculptors team up to carve an iconic temple-tomb to find out how the ancient people of Petra built their city of stone.

Everybody's heard of it, but what does the world's most famous equation,  $E=mc^2$ , really mean? NOVA dramatizes the stories of the men and women whose innovative thinking across four centuries led finally to Einstein's bold breakthrough. Based on David Bodanis' bestseller,  $E=mc^2$ , "Einstein's Big Idea" celebrates the ingenuity and chronicles the human conflicts that ultimately unleashed the power of the atom, helping viewers gain a better understanding of the equation by tracking its history and the myriad ways it has changed the world. This engrossing docudrama from the award-winning producers of NOVA brims with stories of triumph and failure, love and politics, bitter rivalries and revenge, all drawn from the lives and times of the scientists who intersected with the equation. Ultimately, "Einstein's Big Idea" is the story of young, ambitious scientists caught up by the huge forces of nature they seek to understand. The film stars Aidan McArdle ("Not Only But Also", "Ella Enchanted") as Einstein, Shirley Henderson ("Harry Potter" and "Bridget Jones" franchises) as his wife, Mileva, and Emily Woof ("Oliver Twist", "The Woodlanders") as Lise Meitner.

Carved from a hundred million pounds of stone, soaring effortlessly atop a spiderweb of masonry, Gothic cathedrals are marvels of human achievement and artistry. But how did medieval builders reach such spectacular heights? Consuming the labor of entire towns, sometimes taking a hundred years to build, these architectural marvels were crafted from just hand tools and stone. Many now teeter on the brink of catastrophic collapse. To save them, an international team of engineers, architects, art historians, and computer scientists searches the naves, bays, and bell-towers for clues to how the dream of these heavenly temples on earth came true. NOVA's teams our teams perform hands-on experiments to investigate and reveal the architectural secrets that the cathedral builders used to erect their soaring, glass-filled walls. On this dazzling journey inside the jewels of Gothic architecture, NOVA reveals the hidden formulas, drawn from the pages of the Bible itself, that drove medieval builders ever upward.

Why more Syrian refugees are leaving Jordan than arriving: In Jordan, there's intense sympathy for the thousands of refugees who have landed there. But it's illegal for most Syrians to work in that nation, and limited food aid doesn't go very far. So refugees are increasingly making the dangerous journey to Europe, or even back home, because they are struggling to survive in countries that neighbor their own. Special correspondent Jane Arraf reports.

Host Bob Abernethy and managing editor Kim Lawton talk with Sean Callahan, chief operating officer of Catholic Relief Services, about how faith-based groups are trying help the refugees and what the US can do to address the crisis. Says Callahan, "What we would like to do is see, at the call of Pope Francis, that we all open our doors a little bit more, and we expedite the process. Currently for the refugees to get in it takes about 18 to 24 months for them to be reviewed, and we'd like to expedite that, because these families are in tragic situations and really need to move quick."

Rebuilding Urban Neighborhoods (originally published: July 3, 2015): Urban activist and Christian community developer Bob Lupton challenges common conceptions about modern charitable work by arguing that most charity is ineffective and does more harm than good. He advocates letting the poor learn to help themselves and encouraging the well-off to live alongside the poor. Lupton is the founder and president of FCS (Focused Community Strategies) Urban Ministries and the author, most recently, of "Charity Detox: What Charity Would Look Like If We Cared About Results." Writes Lupton: "We cannot serve people out of poverty."

Will the highway bill lead to funding problems down the road? The scope of the $300 billion highway bill recently passed by Congress will touch roads and bridges in every state and most counties for a half decade. Since 2009, there has been no long-term or stable federal funding to address needed transportation fixes. But critics question where that funding for the new bill is coming from. Political director Lisa Desjardins reports.

Rebuilding Urban Neighborhoods (originally published: July 3, 2015): Urban activist and Christian community developer Bob Lupton challenges common conceptions about modern charitable work by arguing that most charity is ineffective and does more harm than good. He advocates letting the poor learn to help themselves and encouraging the well-off to live alongside the poor. Lupton is the founder and president of FCS (Focused Community Strategies) Urban Ministries and the author, most recently, of

"Charity Detox: What Charity Would Look Like If We Cared About Results." Writes Lupton: "We cannot serve people out of poverty."

Parliament of the World's Religions: The 2015 Parliament of the World's Religions, the oldest and largest interfaith gathering in the world, was held October 15-19th in Salt Lake City. Some 10,000 participants from 50 spiritual traditions participated. The event was first held in Chicago in 1893. This year's gathering focused on peace, climate change, and women in leadership. Imam Malik Mujahid, who chairs the Parliament's board of trustees, described the event and why he believes it is important for people of faith to gather in solidarity and believe in "the humanity of the other."

Oregon Shooting Renews Push For Gun Laws, Republican House Leadership Shakeup and Russian Airstrikes in Syria: After a gunman opened fire at a community college in Oregon killing nine people, President Obama made an impassioned appeal for stronger gun control policy. Despite Obama's plea, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics says there seems to be no appetite to bring up new gun legislation on Capitol Hill and if any change occurs it'll be a project for the next president. After the announced resignation of House Speaker John Boehner, Republicans on Capitol Hill are preparing to elect a new leader. The likely next-Speaker Kevin McCarthy has come under fire from Democrats after he initially told Fox News that the investigation into the Benghazi attacks and Hillary Clinton's role was politically motivated. Another government shutdown was avoided after a battle over federal funding for Planned Parenthood heated up. NPR's Susan Davis discusses how the debate will start up again in December. And after meeting with President Obama at the UN General Assembly in New York this week, Russian President Vladimir Putin and his government launched airstrikes in Syria just days later. Despite the assertions of the Kremlin, it appears the attacks are being carried out against anti-Assad forces in the region and not against ISIS. The New York Times' Peter Baker and The Daily Beast's Nancy Youssef discuss how Putin's defense of Assad's government may be an inadvertent defense of his own.

Chaos erupted in the House Republican conference this week after Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy decided to end his bid to replace outgoing Speaker John Boehner. The vote was postponed at the GOP looked for a candidate who could garner support from the establishment and the Party's right flank. Party leaders openly courted Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, who has said multiple times he doesn't want the job. Morning Consult's Reid Wilson reports on the scramble in the House. Plus, Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton announced her opposition to the Pacific trade agreement pushed by her former boss President Obama. The Washington Post's Anne Gearan reports on Clinton's efforts to distance herself from Obama. And Politico's Michael Crowley reports on the Pentagon's decision to end a program that trained Syrian rebels to fight ISIS. The $500 million dollar program trained only a handful of recruits. At the same time, Russia is amplifying its presence in Syria. Meanwhile, the Supreme Court returns for the new term with cases on issues ranging from affirmative action to voting rights. Joan Biskupic of Reuters discusses whether the more liberal wins of the SCOTUS' last session were an irregularity or a pattern set to stick around.

Democrats Spar in First Debate, Obama Slows Afghan Troop Withdrawal and 2016 Fundraising Reports: The five Democratic White House hopefuls squared off in their Party's first debate of the 2016 Election with issues ranging from gun control, foreign policy and Hillary Clinton's State Department emails. Dan Balz of The Washington Post says that despite Clinton's strong showing at the debate, Joe Biden continues to weigh a 2016 run. President Obama announced this week his decision to delay the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Afghanistan which will push American occupation within the country well into 2016. Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics speaks on the "disappointment" Obama could feel at having to hand off Afghanistan and Iraq to his successor. And the third quarter presidential fundraising reports show Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders standing atop the field with more cash on hand than the entire Republican field.

Hillary Clinton faced another congressional committee this week concerning the 2012 Benghazi attacks that killed four Americans. Despite the 11 hour hearing and sometimes pointed exchanges between committee members, Josh Gerstein of Politico says that while the hearing was a setback her email scandal isn't over with a looming FBI investigation coming to the forefront. Vice President Joe Biden announced he will not run for president. His announcement came this week amongst a flurry of speculation about his White House aspirations. Biden cited that despite his family's support he did not believe that there would be enough time to make a viable bid. The Wall Street Journal's Carol Lee says that if Biden had chosen to run he would become the "standard bearer of Obama's legacy." Rep. Paul Ryan announced that he will pursue the House Speaker candidacy. Ryan nailed down key endorsements from conservative groups of leading congressman like the House Freedom Caucus. CNN's Manu Raju explains how despite his constant assertions of not wanting the job Ryan relented by setting forth a string of conditions, one of them being Ryan's desire to see more unity within the GOP. And Molly Ball of The Atlantic discusses Donald Trump's unorthodox campaign for the Republican nomination.

Republicans Debate the Economy, Paul Ryan Elected House Speaker & Obama Authorizes Boots on Ground in Syria: Republican presidential candidates debated economic issues in their third matchup of the 2016 election. Jeb Bush and Marco Rubio sparred over Rubio's missed Senate votes. Jeb Bush's performance seems to have worried some of his donors and Jeanne Cummings of The Wall Street Journal says that Bush must improve for the next debate or his campaign doesn't stand a chance in the upcoming election. The debate also took another turn with candidates and even audience members expressing irritation at the CNBC moderators for questions that were viewed as contentious. RNC Chair Reince Priebus, upset with the outcome of the debate, has chosen to suspend the GOP's partnership with NBC for their upcoming debate. John Harwood of CNBC, who moderated the latest debate, says the "anger at the debate is akin to the anger in the House" among Republicans. In Congress, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan, despite his initial hesitation, was elected the 54th Speaker of the House this week. Ryan called for unity and renewal within the GOP party, the week that outgoing Speaker John Boehner helped pass a bipartisan budget deal. Robert Costa of The Washington Post reports on the experience Ryan brings to the job. President Obama announced this week that circumstances have changed and has authorized Special Forces to Syria to assist rebel fighters battling ISIS. Doyle McManus of The Los Angeles Times says that Obama's decision to enter Syria may be an indirect response to Russia's recent occupation within the country.

How has the Paris attack shifted the U.S. fight against ISIS, refugee policy and the 2016 campaign? One week after the terror attacks in Paris left 130 people dead, the United States and global community have intensified the resolve to defeat ISIS and prevent future attacks. In state houses across the country and in the U.S. House of Representatives, the conversation has shifted to refugee policy and preventing all Syrian refugees from entering the country until security measures can be stepped up. 2016 presidential candidates are weighing in as well with Republican frontrunner Donald Trump calling for a national database to track Muslims. Gwen Ifill explores how the attack shifted U.S. foreign policy and the race for the White House with Pete Williams of NBC News, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics, Ed O'Keefe of The Washington Post and Susan Davis of NPR.

Measuring the Mood of America: Concerns About Terror Attacks, Distrust of Elected Leaders: As you dig in to your Thanksgiving leftovers, we dive deep into the American mood. Concerns about terrorism, distrust of political leaders and a spirited debate about who's best to lead our country are topics of conversation around the country. A new poll shows 69% think a terror attack in the U.S. is imminent. What is being done to keep Americans safe? The percentage of Americans who disapprove of the job President Obama is doing is the highest it's been all year, and only one in ten Americans approve of Congress. Can politicians regain the trust of America? And as the 2016 presidential campaign heats up, how are politicians shaping their message to respond to real concerns in the country? Gwen Ifill discusses this all with The New York Times' Peter Baker, The Washington Post's Dan Balz and BBC's Kim Ghattas.

Widespread Backlash to Donald Trump's Proposed Muslim Ban: Republican frontrunner Donald Trump drove the 2016 presidential debate this week after proposing to ban all Muslims from entering the U.S. A poll released this week showed 57 percent of Americans oppose the plan, and many of his Republican and Democratic opponents have announced their opposition. But Trump's support among Republican voters is only growing as voters appear to like his tough talk. How can the Republican Party grab the enthusiasm Trump is bringing without alienating swing voters or preventing Trump from mounting an independent campaign? Gwen Ifill discusses Trump mania with TIME's Michael Scherer, The Wall Street Journal's Janet Hook, The Washington Post's Ed O'Keefe and Real Clear Politics' Alexis Simendinger.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. In 1920, Prohibition goes into effect, making it illegal to manufacture, transport or sell intoxicating liquor. This episode examines the problems of enforcement, as millions of law-abiding Americans become lawbreakers overnight. While a significant portion of the country is willing to adapt to the new law, others are shocked at how inconsistent the Volstead Act actually is. As weaknesses in the law and its enforcement become clear, millions find ways to exploit it. Drys had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place, but the law has many victims. Honest policemen are killed on the job, unlucky drinkers are poisoned by adulterated liquor and overzealous federal agents violate civil rights just to make a bust. Alcoholism still exists, and may even be increasing, as women begin to drink in the speakeasies that replace the male-only saloon. Despite the growing discontent with Prohibition and its consequences, few politicians dare to speak out against the law, fearful of its powerful protector, the Anti-Saloon League.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment." Go beyond the oft-told tales of gangsters, rum-runners, flappers and speakeasies to experience the rise, rule and fall of the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Since the early years of the American Republic, alcohol has been embedded in the fabric of American culture. But by 1830, the average American over 15 years old consumes nearly seven gallons of pure alcohol a year, three times as much as we drink today. Alcohol abuse wreaks havoc on the lives of many families. As a wave of spiritual fervor for reform sweeps the country, many women and men begin to see alcohol as a scourge. After the Civil War, the country's population swells with immigrants, who bring their drinking customs with them from Ireland, Germany, Italy and other European countries. The temperance campaign ignites, spearheaded by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Carrie Nation and her Home Defenders Army bring publicity by attacking Kansas bars with stones and hatchets, and the Anti-Saloon League (ASL) forms to push for an amendment to the Constitution outlawing alcohol nationally. Most politicians dare not defy the ASL, and in 1917 the 18th Amendment sails through both Houses of Congress; it is ratified by the states in just 13 months. When the Amendment is signed into law, Prohibitionists rejoice that America has become officially dry. But Americans are about to discover that making Prohibition the law of the land has been one thing; enforcing it will be another.

Discover the true story of America's "Great Experiment" - the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawing alcohol - in Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's PROHIBITION. Support for Prohibition diminishes in the mid-1920s as the playfulness of sneaking around for a drink gives way to disenchantment with its glaring unintended consequences. By criminalizing one of the nation's largest industries, the law has given savvy gangsters a way to make huge profits, and as they grow in power, rival outfits wreak havoc in cities across the country. The burgeoning tabloid newspaper industry fans the frenzy with sensational headlines and front-page photographs of murder scenes, while Al Capone holds press conferences and signs autographs. The wealthy Pauline Sabin begins publicly decrying that Prohibition has divided the nation into "wets, dries, and hypocrites." Nearly a century before, women had hoped Prohibition would make the country a safer place for their children. But by the late 1920s many American women believe that the "Noble Experiment" has failed. Sabin unifies women of all classes, refuting the notion that all women support Prohibition and denouncing the law itself as the greatest threat to their families. Sabin and others argue that repeal will bring in tax revenue and provide desperately needed jobs. After the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, Congress easily passes the 21st Amendment, which repeals the 18th, and the states quickly ratify it. In December of 1933, Americans can legally buy a drink for the first time in 13 years.

Misty Copeland rose to stardom despite not starting ballet until age 13 and, by age 15, was winning awards. She joined the Studio Company of the American Ballet Theatre (one of the three leading classical companies in the U.S.) in 2000, became a member of the corps de ballet in 2001 and was appointed a soloist in 2007. She has been named to the President's Council on Fitness, Sports, and Nutrition and co-wrote an inspiring memoir, Life in Motion, that has been optioned for adaptation as a feature film. She also co-authored the award-winning children's book Firebird. In June 2015, Misty was promoted to principal dancer, making her the first African-American woman to ever be promoted to the position in the company's 75-year history.

Born and raised in Miami, Florida to a French mother and a Haitian father, Cécile McLorin Salvant started classical piano studies at just five years old, and began singing at the young age of eight. She'd go on to develop her voice under the tutelage of private instructors, and later with Edward Walker at the University of Miami. In 2007, Cécile moved to France to study law and classical and baroque voice at the Darius Milhaud Conservatory. In 2009, after a series of concerts in Paris, she recorded her first album Cécile, and she won the Thelonious Monk competition in Washington D.C. the following year. Cécile's 2013 album WomanChild was nominated for a Grammy for Best Jazz Vocal Album. She's out now with an acclaimed new project, titled For One to Love.

Oregon Shooting Renews Push For Gun Laws, Republican House Leadership Shakeup and Russian Airstrikes in Syria: After a gunman opened fire at a community college in Oregon killing nine people, President Obama made an impassioned appeal for stronger gun control policy. Despite Obama's plea, Alexis Simendinger of Real Clear Politics says there seems to be no appetite to bring up new gun legislation on Capitol Hill and if any change occurs it'll be a project for the next president. After the announced resignation of House Speaker John Boehner, Republicans on Capitol Hill are preparing to elect a new leader. The likely next-Speaker Kevin McCarthy has come under fire from Democrats after he initially told Fox News that the investigation into the Benghazi attacks and Hillary Clinton's role was politically motivated. Another government shutdown was avoided after a battle over federal funding for Planned Parenthood heated up. NPR's Susan Davis discusses how the debate will start up again in December. And after meeting with President Obama at the UN General Assembly in New York this week, Russian President Vladimir Putin and his government launched airstrikes in Syria just days later. Despite the assertions of the Kremlin, it appears the attacks are being carried out against anti-Assad forces in the region and not against ISIS. The New York Times' Peter Baker and The Daily Beast's Nancy Youssef discuss how Putin's defense of Assad's government may be an inadvertent defense of his own.

East of Salinas is a story about immigration, childhood, and circumstance. With little support at home, Salinas, California third grader Jose Ansaldo often turns to his teacher, Oscar Ramos, once a migrant farm kid himself. Oscar helps Jose imagine a future beyond the lettuce fields where his parents work. But Jose was born in Mexico - and he's on the cusp of understanding the implications of that. As we watch this play out, we begin to understand the cruelty of circumstance - for Jose and many millions of migrant kids like him. East of Salinas asks: What is lost when kids like Jose are denied opportunities?

Given Internet access, can kids really learn anything by themselves? It started with a hole in the wall. Sugata Mitra, working for a software company in Delhi, cut a gap between his firm and the slum next door, putting out an Internet-connected computer for kids in the community to use. That simple experiment has turned into a radical idea that children can teach themselves in self-organized learning environments. Economics correspondent Paul Solman reports.
