Dolores Huerta's fascinating life, from the fearless young woman confronting teamsters on violent picket lines to the activist grandmother nearly beaten to death by a San Francisco police squad, was overshadowed by the legacy of Cesar Chavez. After she was forced from the ranks of the all-male union leadership after his death, Dolores learns the painful truth- that her gender is the greatest obstacle of all. But she turns her defeat into inspiration, setting the course for a lifetime pursuit of equality for all. While tracing Huerta's trajectory through the most radical social and cultural movements of the past 50 years, from brown power and feminism to LGBTQ rights and environmental justice, Dolores provides an unflinching look at the barriers faced by women and people of color within the very communities they're fighting for.

Dolores Huerta's fascinating life, from the fearless young woman confronting teamsters on violent picket lines to the activist grandmother nearly beaten to death by a San Francisco police squad, was overshadowed by the legacy of Cesar Chavez. After she was forced from the ranks of the all-male union leadership after his death, Dolores learns the painful truth- that her gender is the greatest obstacle of all. But she turns her defeat into inspiration, setting the course for a lifetime pursuit of equality for all.

While tracing Huerta's trajectory through the most radical social and cultural movements of the past 50 years, from brown power and feminism to LGBTQ rights and environmental justice, Dolores provides an unflinching look at the barriers faced by women and people of color within the very communities they're fighting for.

"We were never concerned with who killed Martin Luther King, but what killed Martin Luther King," says former King aide Andrew Young in this film, which tells the wildly disparate yet fatefully entwined stories of an assassin, James Earl Ray, and his target, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., against the backdrop of the seething and turbulent forces in American society that led these two men to their violent and tragic collision in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. Based on a forthcoming book by Hampton Sides (Ghost Soldiers), the program relies on eyewitness testimony from King's inner circle and the officials involved in Ray's capture and prosecution following an intense two-month international manhunt.

A world of knowledge was nearly lost forever amid the al-Qaida occupation in Timbuktu five years ago. Many were burnt, but thousands of ancient manuscripts were smuggled away and saved, and now are being digitized. And yet time and money to finish the project is running out as other threats loom. Special correspondent Monica Villamizar reports from Mali.

MILWAUKEE 53206 introduces viewers to a community with the highest rate of incarcerated African American men in the U.S. The film introduces viewers to Beverly Walker and her husband, Baron, who is in prison and caught between changing parole laws. Beverly tirelessly advocates for his release and keeps their family together. Chad Wilson, once a drug dealer, served a total of 17 years in the criminal justice system. Five weeks after his release, he hopes to turn his life around and get at least some of his record expunged. Dennis Walton has one goal in life: that his children love him as much as he loved his dad. Yet, as a teenager he took a wrong turn and found himself in jail. He finds atonement by giving back and establishing the Fatherhood Project to offer support to men seeking re-entry. Caught in a web of imperfect laws, poverty and unemployment, MILWAUKEE 53206 renders a portrait of citizens often dehumanized in the media and illuminates, beyond headlines, the decimating toll and trauma families of color face as a result of the mass incarceration of African American men.

When a prisoner enters a jail, they're handed a booklet to guide them. When they leave, they don't get a handbook on how to live life. Too often, prisoner reentry becomes a setup for failure and eventual re-incarceration. Beyond the Wall revolves around one central figure, a former prisoner named Louie Diaz, as he works to guide five formerly incarcerated men safely through the minefield of life outside of jail. As we follow the men's efforts to rebuild their lives beyond prison walls, we witness their profound struggle to stay sober and maintain a crime-free life. Compelling and intimate, the film captures how terrifying life can be outside prison walls. Filmed on the streets of Lowell and Lawrence, Massachusetts, which once boasted textile mills and a thriving local economy, these cities now face decay along with looming poverty, crime and drug addiction. Louie knows drugs and crime from both a criminal and a treatment perspective. He knows all the signs and symptoms of relapse, and when and how to intervene. "No reentry program is going to go under the bridges and into the tent cities of the homeless looking for the guys who come out of jail and fall between the cracks. But, if you are not willing to go to their places, they will end up back in jail," explains Louie in the film.

Louie knows drugs and crime from both a criminal and a treatment perspective. He knows all the signs and symptoms of relapse, and when and how to intervene. "No reentry program is going to go under the bridges and into the tent cities of the homeless looking for the guys who come out of jail and fall between the cracks. But, if you are not willing to go to their places, they will end up back in jail," explains Louie in the film.

When a prisoner enters a jail, they're handed a booklet to guide them. When they leave, they don't get a handbook on how to live life. Too often, prisoner reentry becomes a setup for failure and eventual re-incarceration. Beyond the Wall revolves around one central figure, a former prisoner named Louie Diaz, as he works to guide five formerly incarcerated men safely through the minefield of life outside of jail. As we follow the men's efforts to rebuild their lives beyond prison walls, we witness their profound struggle to stay sober and maintain a crime-free life. Compelling and intimate, the film captures how terrifying life can be outside prison walls. Filmed on the streets of Lowell and Lawrence, Massachusetts, which once boasted textile mills and a thriving local economy, these cities now face decay along with looming poverty, crime and drug addiction. Segment Length: 01:25:35:00

At least 70 percent of people in jail have little to no high school education, and at least 70 percent of the people released end up back in jail. THE CORRIDOR shows the inner-workings and challenges of San Francisco's Five Keys Charter School a?' the first high school of its kind in the United States that provides inmates the opportunity to earn a high school diploma to prepare them for successful reintegration into their communities. Most of the inmates, whose crimes range from triple murder to peddling marijuana, were born into circumstances where bad choices were their biggest option. Bethany, a mother of six, was a ninth-grade dropout and confesses that she doesn't know how to get or keep a job or maintain a household. William's dad left him when he was 11 years old and by the age of 13 sought "success" by dealing drugs and getting all the girls. On average, most inmates read at just a fifth-grade level, and most have had a negative educational experience. Designed upon the premise that the key to reintegration is education, Five Keys Charter School strives to create alternatives to the revolving door of incarceration. Enrollment is mandatory for all inmates who never received a high school diploma. In addition to classes that range from algebra to civics, the school also offers lessons in art and meditation. For many of the inmates, the experience validates their humanity: they are respected for the value of their minds, and their opinions matter. As the inmates begin to think about what they might want to do differently in life, THE CORRIDOR invites viewers to ask: is education the first step along the pathway to restorative justice?

Through the Repellent Fence follows the creation of a two-mile long ephemeral art installation by three Native American artists: Raven Chacon, Cristóbal Martínez, and Kade L. Twist collectively known as "Postcommodity." The film documents their collaboration as they construct "Repellent Fence," a metaphorical "stitching" together the United States and Mexico. Their work puts "land art in a tribal context," to illuminate a shared Indigenous world-view and the legacy that connects the original people to their land. Viewers are provided an intimate glimpse into the process behind creating the ambitious yet temporary artwork. With the volunteer help of communities on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico border, "Repellent Fence" was installed with a series of twenty-eight enormous inflatable yellow-gold spheres. Emblazoned with an insignia known as the "open eye" -- a symbol that has existed in Indigenous cultures of the Americas for thousands of years -- the spheres extended north and south of the border a mile in each direction. The artist collective was featured in the 2017 Whitney Museum Biennale.

When he was six-years-old, Dinesh Sabu's parents died. Raised by his siblings, he had little idea who his parents were or where he came from. Now as an adult with a burning curiosity, Dinesh sets out on a journey across the United States and India to piece together their story. Uncovering a silenced family history of mental illness, Dinesh confronts the legacy of having a schizophrenic mother who died by suicide, the reality of growing up an orphaned immigrant, and the trauma of these events. Can he reconcile these truths all while living in the specter of mental illness?

When he was six-years-old, Dinesh Sabu's parents died. Raised by his siblings, he had little idea who his parents were or where he came from. Now as an adult with a burning curiosity, Dinesh sets out on a journey across the United States and India to piece together their story. Uncovering a silenced family history of mental illness, Dinesh confronts the legacy of having a schizophrenic mother who died by suicide, the reality of growing up an orphaned immigrant, and the trauma of these events. Can he reconcile these truths all while living in the specter of mental illness?

Segment Length: 00:56:52:00

Today, we have the luxury of being able to document our lives in an instant, but during the Great Depression and into the 1950s, this luxury was almost nonexistent. Filmmaker and director Ali Kazimi knew he stumbled upon a rare artifact when he found himself in an online bidding war for film footage from 1936 to 1951. The old home movies had a name attached to it, Silas Fung, and offered a little-seen glimpse into how a Chinese family embraced American customs. Fung was a first-generation Chinese American commercial artist who had a passion for filming home movies. Restoring Fung's films took years, but Kazimi succeeded in keeping this family's archive intact. What he found was a look at everyday life, from ice cream cakes on birthdays, to an obsession with the 1933 Chicago World's Fair.

Every year, over a million students drop out of high school. They may complete their graduate equivalency degrees, but then they discover they're still struggling to get good jobs. For some in Indianapolis, there's another option: a night school program that will get them their full high school diploma - if they can complete a tough curriculum that includes algebra and biology. NIGHT SCHOOL is an intimate look at a year in the lives of three students: a single father trying to make a better life for his young daughter, an older woman looking to complete the schooling she abandoned almost 40 years before, and a young woman who needs her diploma to enroll in nursing school.

Tucked in the Appalachian mountains of Southern West Virginia, Oceana, is a small, once thriving coal-mining town that has fallen victim to the fast spreading scourge of prescription painkiller Oxycontin. As the coal industry slowly declined and times got tough, a black market for the drug sprung up and along with it a rash of prostitution, theft and murder. Soon its own residents had nicknamed the town Oxyana and it began to live up to its reputation as abuse, addiction and overdoses became commonplace. Oxyana is a harrowing front line account of a community in the grips of an epidemic, told through the voices of the addicts, the dealers and all those affected. It is a haunting glimpse into an American nightmare unfolding before our eyes, a cautionary tale told with raw and unflinching honesty.

D-DAY: THE PRICE OF FREEDOM pays tribute to the courageous men who began the liberation of France more than 60 years ago. Throughout this moving documentary, former paratroopers, gunners, landing craft operators and others representing the U.S. Army and U.S. Navy share their harrowing tales of survival. Five veterans - some of whom were returning to Normandy for the first time since 1944 - make an emotional journey to the American Cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach, the final resting place of 9,000 of their fallen comrades. There, each speaks candidly about the unimaginable horror, despair and fear of the day. D-DAY: THE PRICE OF FREEDOM also explores why these aging men remain heroes to the French people. During their visit, young and old alike honor their liberators with toasts, ceremonies and other tokens of gratitude.

Retired NBC Universal executive Paula Williams Madison and her brothers, Elrick and Howard Williams, were raised in Harlem by their Chinese Jamaican mother, Nell Vera Lowe. Nell encouraged them to realize the rags-to-riches American dream, resulting in their growth from welfare recipients to wealthy entrepreneurs. In order to fulfill a promise to their mother to connect to her estranged father's people, they embark on a journey to uncover their ancestral roots. The three travel to the Toronto Hakka Chinese Conference where they connect to members of the Chinese Jamaican community. As the mystery of their grandfather's life unfolds, the trio travels to Jamaica, learning that their grandfather had a life there similar to their own, starting with humble beginnings in Mocho, Clarendon Parish, and ending with successful business ownership in the affluent St. Ann's Bay. But in 1933, he left Jamaica, returning to China for good. Taking family tree research to an epic proportion, the siblings and 16 of their family members travel to two Chinese cities, ShenZhen and GuangZhou. Together, they visit their family's ancestral village, finding documented lineage that dates their family back 3,000 years to 1006 BC. The trip culminates in an emotional and unforgettable family reunion with 300 of their grandfather's Chinese descendants.

The Biggest Chinese Restaurant in the World - With 5,000 tables and a staff of 1,000, West Lake Restaurant in the capital city of Changsha can safely call itself "the biggest Chinese restaurant in the world." West Lake, a microcosm of modern China, reveals stories showing that not every individual benefits from China's economic boom. Japan: A Story of Love and Hate - In Japan's bubble economy days, Naoki had it all: a successful business, multiple luxury cars, and a six-bedroom house. When the economy crashed in 1992, he lost it all. Now he lives with his new girlfriend Yoshie, who works fifteen hours a day to support him. Every evening, she leaves Naoki to attend to the housework while she is being paid to drink, flatter and flirt with married men in seedy bars. Japan: A Story of Love and Hate is about survival in the world's second richest economy.

Tashi Bista dreams of installing a makeshift wind turbine in Namdok, a remote village nestled high amongst the Himalayas of Nepal. Battered by wind and cold, Namdok, has been in darkness for centuries. Wearing Ray Bans to shield his eyes from the dust and just a leather jacket to insulate him from the bitter cold he surveys the village. Tashi Bista, the sturdiest activist in town provides a fresh perspective to alternative energy. He grew up in this region without electrical power. He is determined to bring lights to Namdok in an effort to prove himself to the skeptical village community. Tashi's Turbine is a character driven film that shows the impact of one man's dream for light, in a village waiting for development.

As leader of the world's only LGBT political party, Bemz Benedito dreams of being the first transgender woman in the Philippine Congress. But in a predominantly Catholic nation, rallying for LGBT representation in the halls of Congress is not an easy feat. Bemz and her eclectic team of queer political warriors must rethink traditional campaign strategies to amass support from unlikely places. Taking their equality campaign to small-town hair salons and regional beauty pageants, the activists mobilize working-class trans hairdressers and beauty queens to join the fight against their main political opponent, a homophobic evangelical preacher, and prove to the Filipino electorate that it's time to take the rights of LGBT people seriously. But as outsiders trying to get inside the system, will they have to compromise their political ideals in order to win? Culminating on election day, OUT RUN provides a unique look into the challenges LGBT people face as they transition into the mainstream and fight for dignity, legitimacy, and acceptance across the globe.

In the world of competitive stepping, they are the team to beat. Off stage, the Gentlemen of Vision are growing up in struggling working class suburbs. Ferguson is their backyard and their reality. In many ways, they are like countless kids from tough homes and neighborhoods, but they have a bond, a brotherhood, and a leader whose dedication is rock solid but his love is tough. Gentlemen of Vision founder Marlon Wharton has built the team's winning tradition by acting as both stepping coach and life coach. He demands from them time, discipline, good grades, and a clear plan for a future after graduation. The film depicts the struggles and successes of team members during GOV's 2015-16 season. For many, this is their senior year; as steppers their goal is to win the two major national competitions; as young men, their goal is to survive and move on to achieve their dreams.

Segment Length: 00:26:46:00

During his 14-year tenure at Concord (New Hampshire) High School, Principal Gene Connolly was known for his non-stop energy, his love of rock & roll, and the personal connections he made with many of the school's 1,600 students. However, in 2014, Connolly became known for something very different: the rapid loss of his ability to walk and speak due to the debilitating effects of Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (also known as ALS, or Lou Gehrig's disease). MR. CONOLLY HAS ALS chronicles Connolly's final year as principal of the school and features CHS students asking Connolly about the most profound and personal aspects relating to his life with the disease.

A narrow frontier between warm and cold latitudes extends 500 miles from the Alaskan mainland, separating the tempestuous Bering Sea from the Pacific: the Alaska Peninsula, a cloud-cloaked land of active volcanoes, rolling tundra and the greatest concentration of the largest bears on earth. The writings of naturalist Loren Eiseley inspire this cinematic essay on a landscape where bears outnumber people and the sockeye salmon run is the most prolific in the world. At the base of the peninsula lies Katmai National Park, a wilderness larger than Yellowstone and Yosemite - combined. Farther down the peninsula, a giant volcanic caldera emerges on the horizon, so remote that more people climb Everest than visit Aniakchak National Monument. Alaska is warming at more than twice the rate of the rest of the planet. In KATMAI: ALASKA'S WILD PENINSULA, filmmaker John Grabowska profiles the remote Alaska Peninsula and asks how climate change will affect this magnificent land of wilderness and wildlife.

NOVA and National Geographic present exclusive access to an astounding discovery of ancient fossil human ancestors. Deep in a South African cave, a special team of experts has brought to light an unprecedented wealth of fossils belonging to a crucial gap in the record of our origins that spans the transition between the ape-like australopithecines (such as the famous Lucy) and the earliest members of the human family. At the center of the discovery is paleoanthropologist Lee Berger, a character brimming with enthusiasm and opinions, whose claims have stirred long controversy in the contentious field of human origins. Join NOVA to solve a two million year-old "crime scene" and dig into extraordinary new clues about what made us human.

During the 2017 hurricane season, the US receives a record three Category 4 hurricane landfalls with Harvey, Irma, and Maria. Harvey, with its record-breaking rainfall and flooding, is the second-most costly storm in US history, with an estimated $125 billion of damage done. Irma broke records with prolonged intensity, causing communities to rethink just how vulnerable we are to hurricanes, due to sea level rise. And Maria's rapid intensification and sheer strength leaves us facing the reality of a new era of climate refugees. Can scientists determine whether these monster storms are a harbinger of more powerful hurricanes to come? With the next hurricane season just around the corner, are we prepared for the damage that might ensue given warming global waters? Houston, Jacksonville, Florida's Keys, Puerto Rico and many of the islands in the Caribbean are changed forever.

Told for the first time in Hawking's own words and with unique access to his home and public life, this is a personal journey through Hawking's world. The audience joins him at home, under the care of his nursing team; in San Jose as he "wows" a packed theatre audience; in Silicon Valley as he meets a team of technicians who hope to speed up his communication system; and as he throws a party for family and friends. HAWKING also carefully tells Hawking's life journey, from boyhood under-achiever to PhD genius, and from a healthy cox on the Oxford rowing team to diagnosis of motor neuron disease, given just two years to live - yet surviving several close brushes with death. The film also highlights his greatest scientific discoveries and plots his rise to fame and superstardom.

A 33-year-old computer programmer named Tim Berners-Lee changed the world forever when he invented the World Wide Web in 1989. His visionary decision to make it a free and accessible resource sparked a global revolution in how we communicate and participate in public life. After 25 years outside the spotlight, Sir Tim Berners-Lee emerges to tell his story for the first time and discuss new threats to Internet access as we know it. ForEveryone.Net connects the future of the web with the little-known story of its birth and the principles upon which it was founded. Tim has declared Internet access a human right and has called for an "online Magna Carta" to protect privacy and free speech, extend connectivity to populations without access, and maintain "one web" for all. With governments increasingly censoring speech online and blocking access to social media platforms-and big corporations seeking to make profit by controlling how Internet users get information-the film poses the question: Will we fight for the web we want or let it be taken away?

Hear about the exceptional women - past and present - who have taken the world of business by storm. Told by female business leaders themselves, this is a candid exploration of what it takes to make it and a celebration of the extraordinary individuals who, over the course of 50 years, have proven - on Wall Street, in corporate America or business empires of their own - that a woman's place is wherever she believes it to be. Some of the featured business leaders include Ursula Burns, the CEO of Xerox and the first African-American woman to head a Fortune 500 company; Sallie Krawcheck, Wall Street powerhouse and current owner of the global networking platform for women, 85 Broads; Cathy Hughes, radio and television personality and the first African-American woman to head a publicly traded corporation; lifestyle mogul and business magnate Martha Stewart; and Sheryl Sandberg, COO of Facebook, whose provocative book, Lean In, ignited a national conversation about women, feminism and equality in the workplace.

Hear about the exceptional women - past and present - who have taken the world of business by storm. Told by female business leaders themselves, this is a candid exploration of what it takes to make it and a celebration of the extraordinary individuals who, over the course of 50 years, have proven - on Wall Street, in corporate America or business empires of their own - that a woman's place is wherever she believes it to be. Some of the featured business leaders include Ursula Burns, the CEO of Xerox and the first African-American woman to head a Fortune 500 company; Sallie Krawcheck, Wall Street powerhouse and current owner of the global networking platform for women, 85 Broads; Cathy Hughes, radio and television personality and the first African-American woman to head a publicly traded corporation; lifestyle mogul and business magnate Martha Stewart; and Sheryl Sandberg, COO of Facebook, whose provocative book, Lean In, ignited a national conversation about women, feminism and equality in the workplace.

"We were never concerned with who killed Martin Luther King, but what killed Martin Luther King," says former King aide Andrew Young in this film, which tells the wildly disparate yet fatefully entwined stories of an assassin, James Earl Ray, and his target, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., against the backdrop of the seething and turbulent forces in American society that led these two men to their violent and tragic collision in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. Based on a forthcoming book by Hampton Sides (Ghost Soldiers), the program relies on eyewitness testimony from King's inner circle and the officials involved in Ray's capture and prosecution following an intense two-month international manhunt.

A 33-year-old computer programmer named Tim Berners-Lee changed the world forever when he invented the World Wide Web in 1989. His visionary decision to make it a free and accessible resource sparked a global revolution in how we communicate and participate in public life. After 25 years outside the spotlight, Sir Tim Berners-Lee emerges to tell his story for the first time and discuss new threats to Internet access as we know it. ForEveryone.Net connects the future of the web with the little-known story of its birth and the principles upon which it was founded. Tim has declared Internet access a human right and has called for an "online Magna Carta" to protect privacy and free speech, extend connectivity to populations without access, and maintain "one web" for all. With governments increasingly censoring speech online and blocking access to social media platforms-and big corporations seeking to make profit by controlling how Internet users get information-the film poses the question: Will we fight for the web we want or let it be taken away?

Harvey, with its record-breaking rainfall and flooding, is the second-most costly storm in US history, with an estimated $125 billion of damage done. Irma broke records with prolonged intensity, causing communities to rethink just how vulnerable we are to hurricanes, due to sea level rise. And Maria's rapid intensification and sheer strength leaves us facing the reality of a new era of climate refugees. Can scientists determine whether these monster storms are a harbinger of more powerful hurricanes to come? With the next hurricane season just around the corner, are we prepared for the damage that might ensue given warming global waters? Houston, Jacksonville, Florida's Keys, Puerto Rico and many of the islands in the Caribbean are changed forever.

Dolores Huerta's fascinating life, from the fearless young woman confronting teamsters on violent picket lines to the activist grandmother nearly beaten to death by a San Francisco police squad, was overshadowed by the legacy of Cesar Chavez. After she was forced from the ranks of the all-male union leadership after his death, Dolores learns the painful truth- that her gender is the greatest obstacle of all. But she turns her defeat into inspiration, setting the course for a lifetime pursuit of equality for all. While tracing Huerta's trajectory through the most radical social and cultural movements of the past 50 years, from brown power and feminism to LGBTQ rights and environmental justice, Dolores provides an unflinching look at the barriers faced by women and people of color within the very communities they're fighting for.

This week, thanks to a brilliant winner of the Nobel Prize, the entire forgotten world of the Austro-Hungarian empire comes to life. Eric Kandel is the author of The Age of Insight, a book about his native Vienna before and during WWII. He is Bob's guest in the Nobel Laureates series. Kandel is a passionate New Yorker, a great intellectual and a trailblazing neuroscientist. He recalls his youth, as Hitler marched into Vienna in 1938, after the Anschluss, when he was eight years old. 200,000 people turned out at the Heldenplatz to celebrate the triumphant Nazis, but the festivity soon turned into an outburst of violence against the Jews. He remembers how his school friends stopped talking to him and all the Jewish children were kicked out and sent to another institution on the outskirts of town. But most vivid in his memory is the day his family was ordered to move out of their small apartment and Eric had to leave behind his birthday presents (which had been bestowed a few days prior), especially that remote-controlled toy car he had long coveted and had just gotten, never to be seen again. Things unfolded very rapidly, as the threat and the fear were real. The two Kandel brothers, nine and fourteen years old, were separated from their parents and sent to live with an uncle in the United States. The young boys travelled alone by train to Brussels, and then to Antwerp where they boarded a ship crossing the Atlantic, bound for New York. In a happier turn of events, the children were reunited with their parents in America, just as the war broke out in Europe. Haunted by these early life experiences, Eric developed an affinity for the subject of history in class. His high school teacher was so impressed with him that he gave him the money to apply for Harvard when came time for him to choose a college. Kandel was accepted. His curiosity was rooted in the quest for fundamental answers: "how come the Viennese could one day be listening to Mozart and the next day be beating up their Jewish neighbors?" He studied history and literature at Harvard, but on the advice of a friend, he pursued a psychoanalysis curriculum to further probe the depths of the human brain. He spent summers in medical school while working as a psychiatrist in a hospital. Even though he graduated with honors, he needed more answers: "I wanted to know where in the cranium the id, the ego and the superego were located." A friend at Columbia University suggested that he should study the brain one cell at a time. And that's when the Nobel Prize-winning chapter of Eric Kandel's scientific career began: with a marine snail, aplysia, and the biologically materialist theory of reductionism. His older fellow citizen, Sigmund Freud, had meanwhile departed for London, so these Viennese geniuses furthered the world's understanding of the human soul, simultaneously, from both sides of the Atlantic. Meet the Nobel laureate in the bowtie, this week on The World Show.

Can entrepreneurship and philanthropy truly meet organically? Most entrepreneurs are generous people, who derive great pleasure from philanthropy. The usual prescription is to slowly integrate charity work in a linear fashion as the company, and the profits, grow. One must first build the business, establish a solid foundation, make sure the profit margin is somewhat consistent, and then, indulge in giving back. But there are those entrepreneurs who are simply not satisfied with this sequence. They want the for-profit side of their firm to be closely intertwined with the charity side, from the get-go. Such is Blake Mycoskie, Bob's guest on the Entrepreneurs series, founder and CEO of TOMS. The idea behind TOMS is relatively simple, yet quite exceptional. It's "one-for-one". The customer buys a pair of TOMS shoes and in return, the company gives away a pair to a needy child. When Mycoskie started thinking about building his career, he had his mind set on doing it the way it's been done by most entrepreneurs, especially by those he looked up to: creating prosperity through his company and then, in the later stages of his life, donating away that wealth. One trip to Argentina, in 2006, convinced him of the urgency of giving back to those in dire need. He saw that there were many children who did not own even one single pair of shoes. This sad state of affairs, as he understood it, went deeper than just the obvious risks of foot-related diseases such as hookworm or podocooniosis. It also prevented those same children from attending school, since shoes are mandatory to most institutions' uniform. Not having footwear meant not having the same chances in life as others, it meant a depleted self-esteem and being cast aside. Mycoskie had not done endowment work before but felt a strong calling. "Instead of starting a charity where we ask people for donations and we're dependent on them every year, let's start a for-profit business, but let's build the giving into the model from day one", he thought, "so every time we sell a pair of shoes, a child who desperately needs one is getting a pair as well." Needless to say, this idea was strongly discouraged by his colleagues and consultants. How do you make a profit when you give away half your value? It quickly turned out that this business model was not only viable, but greatly profitable. People who bought TOMS shoes were their best ambassadors and marketing force. Appealing to a customer's better side made for huge advertisement that other companies would have paid to get. People shared their newly bought TOMS on social media, talked about them with family and friends and proudly displayed their charitable nature by the same token. TOMS offer the same quality and value as other big-brand names, at a competitive price. Being benevolent has never been more fashionable and accessible. The company has since diversified its production with added items such as ballet flats for women, men's boots, sunglasses and eyeglasses, but the core principle of "one-for-one" still remains. They focus their charity by working with local non-profits already established in targeted communities. These organisations are there to help in a myriad of ways, such as building schools, making sure there is drinking water, vaccines, anti-malaria nets, etc. TOMS works with them as they integrate the shoes into their health regimen. This week, thanks to a brilliant winner of the Nobel Prize, the entire forgotten world of the Austro-Hungarian empire comes to life. Eric Kandel is the author of The Age of Insight, a book about his native Vienna before and during WWII. He is Bob's guest in the Nobel Laureates series. Kandel is a passionate New Yorker, a great intellectual and a trailblazing neuroscientist. He recalls his youth, as Hitler marched into Vienna in 1938, after the Anschluss, when he was eight years old. 200,000 people turned out at the Heldenplatz to celebrate the triumphant Nazis, but the festivity soon turned into an outburst of violence against the Jews. He remembers how his school friends stopped talking to him and all the Jewish children were kicked out and sent to another institution on the outskirts of town. But most vivid in his memory is the day his family was ordered to move out of their small apartment and Eric had to leave behind his birthday presents (which had been bestowed a few days prior), especially that remote-controlled toy car he had long coveted and had just gotten, never to be seen again. Things unfolded very rapidly, as the threat and the fear were real. The two Kandel brothers, nine and fourteen years old, were separated from their parents and sent to live with an uncle in the United States. The young boys travelled alone by train to Brussels, and then to Antwerp where they boarded a ship crossing the Atlantic, bound for New York. In a happier turn of events, the children were reunited with their parents in America, just as the war broke out in Europe. Haunted by these early life experiences, Eric developed an affinity for the subject of history in class. His high school teacher was so impressed with him that he gave him the money to apply for Harvard when came time for him to choose a college. Kandel was accepted. His curiosity was rooted in the quest for fundamental answers: "how come the Viennese could one day be listening to Mozart and the next day be beating up their Jewish neighbors?" He studied history and literature at Harvard, but on the advice of a friend, he pursued a psychoanalysis curriculum to further probe the depths of the human brain. He spent summers in medical school while working as a psychiatrist in a hospital. Even though he graduated with honors, he needed more answers: "I wanted to know where in the cranium the id, the ego and the superego were located." A friend at Columbia University suggested that he should study the brain one cell at a time. And that's when the Nobel Prize-winning chapter of Eric Kandel's scientific career began: with a marine snail, aplysia, and the biologically materialist theory of reductionism. His older fellow citizen, Sigmund Freud, had meanwhile departed for London, so these Viennese geniuses furthered the world's understanding of the human soul, simultaneously, from both sides of the Atlantic. Meet the Nobel laureate in the bowtie, this week on The World Show.

Can entrepreneurship and philanthropy truly meet organically? Most entrepreneurs are generous people, who derive great pleasure from philanthropy. A 33-year-old computer programmer named Tim Berners-Lee changed the world forever when he invented the World Wide Web in 1989. His visionary decision to make it a free and accessible resource sparked a global revolution in how we communicate and participate in public life. After 25 years outside the spotlight, Sir Tim Berners-Lee emerges to tell his story for the first time and discuss new threats to Internet access as we know it. ForEveryone.Net connects the future of the web with the little-known story of its birth and the principles upon which it was founded. Tim has declared Internet access a human right and has called for an "online Magna Carta" to protect privacy and free speech, extend connectivity to populations without access, and maintain "one web" for all. With governments increasingly censoring speech online and blocking access to social media platforms-and big corporations seeking to make profit by controlling how Internet users get information-the film poses the question: Will we fight for the web we want or let it be taken away?

This is the intimate and revealing story of Stephen Hawking's life. Told for the first time in Hawking's own words and with unique access to his home and public life, this is a personal journey through Hawking's world. The audience joins him at home, under the care of his nursing team; in San Jose as he "wows" a packed theatre audience; in Silicon Valley as he meets a team of technicians who hope to speed up his communication system; and as he throws a party for family and friends. HAWKING also carefully tells Hawking's life journey, from boyhood under-achiever to PhD genius, and from a healthy cox on the Oxford rowing team to diagnosis of motor neuron disease, given just two years to live - yet surviving several close brushes with death. The film also highlights his greatest scientific discoveries and plots his rise to fame and superstardom.

Dolores Huerta's fascinating life, from the fearless young woman confronting teamsters on violent picket lines to the activist grandmother nearly beaten to death by a San Francisco police squad, was overshadowed by the legacy of Cesar Chavez. After she was forced from the ranks of the all-male union leadership after his death, Dolores learns the painful truth- that her gender is the greatest obstacle of all. But she turns her defeat into inspiration, setting the course for a lifetime pursuit of equality for all. While tracing Huerta's trajectory through the most radical social and cultural movements of the past 50 years, from brown power and feminism to LGBTQ rights and environmental justice, Dolores provides an unflinching look at the barriers faced by women and people of color within the very communities they're fighting for.
