LOCAL ISSUES ADDRESSED DURING THE QUARTER

The following are local issues of concern to the community. Programs that addressed these issues during this reporting period are listed on the following pages.

Local Issue/Concern	Brief description of local issue or concern
Government	Medical Marijuana applications became available in July and many stories involving government and politics focused on the new program as many questions surfaced from cities and patients. Efforts by Little Rock's mayor and the governor to address violent crime also made headlines. New, tougher laws against texting and driving took effect in August. Meantime, the Arkansas Attorney general requested a date be set for the execution of Jack Green. The state was able to replenish its supply of the controversial execution drug. The top local political story in September was the 60 th anniversary of the integration of Central High. 1957, with a military escort, 9 black students began class in Central High.
Health	Throughout July, THV11 reported on old health trends that had seen a resurgence. We looked into whether they in fact had a health benefit, like drinking apple cider vinegar. THV11 also continued to report on Arkansas' evolving medical marijuana program and the increase in tick-borne illnesses. The death of former U of A athletic director Frank Broyles and country music legend Glen Campbell shined light on the battle against Alzheimer's for the month of August. In September, there were many efforts to help the disabled, from children to adults. Government Leaders and non-profit groups began projects to help many people find jobs and built playgrounds for children with disabilities.
Crime and Public Safety	Violent crime in Little Rock topped crime news throughout the Month of July. THV11 covered the crimes themselves, efforts to stop the violence and political and law enforcement efforts to address concerns. The continued effort by police and community groups to tackle violent crime made headlines again in August. Crime was particularly a focus in the city of Little Rock, where more shootings and homicides occurred. Violent crime in Central Arkansas decreased in September. It

	was great news. Property crimes in several cities, however, continued to be a problem.
Education	Several big decisions were made in July impacting some of the state's largest school districts. The Pulaski County special School district fired its Superintendent. The Little Rock school district, meantime, debated what to do with several schools the district decided to close last year. August meant back-to-school for kids across Arkansas. High School sports also returned. In September, the anniversary of the integration of Central High topped not only political/governmental news, but also Education. More than a dozen events were held leading up to the ceremony. President Bill Clinton was the featured speaker.
Consumer/Economy	Growth of Little Rock's SoMa district was reported in July as a positive advancement for the city, and North Little Rock's "pop-up" shops also opened to promote small businesses in that city as well. In August, voters in North Little Rock approved a 1% sales tax increase to fund city operations and police/fire protection. In other consumer news, lottery players flocked to retailers in hopes of winning the more than $700 million Powerball jackpot. The rare solar eclipse and Hurricane Harvey dominated environmental news in August. Harvey continued to top headlines throughout the end of the month, as damage reports and cleanup efforts continued. Efforts to help the low income and homeless was a big issue being addressed in both Conway and Little Rock for the month of September. Opposition to proposed shelters halted plans in both cities.
Environment	The first week of above-normal temperatures topped dominated news for a week in July. The majority of the month was cooler than normal. The devastating hurricanes this fall topped environmental news in September. Local volunteers traveled to impacted areas to help and many donated items.
