Issue: rural healthcare in NM
WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): At Noon
Date: 7/5/16 Time of day: 12:11pm Duration: 6:21
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): In many rural communities, access to specialty care represents the biggest health challenge. Since 2003, a groundbreaking initiative at the University of New Mexico has confronted that gap – with promising results in small towns across New Mexico and, now, around the world. It’s called Project Echo, and as KSFR reporter Ellen Berkovitch learned through interviews with its founder, Doctor Sanjeev Arora, the innovative health-care mentoring model is already a game changer for medicine. Project ECHO uses medical specialists and telecommunications technology to train and mentor health care providers in rural communities. These providers then apply the knowledge they gain to address complex disease processes from Hepatitis C and HIV to diabetes and addictions in their home communities. The model has seen rapid expansion locally, nationally and internationally. Now a Senate bill has been proposed to extend Project ECHO even more systematically throughout the US. Ellen Berkovitch has the story.

Issue: transportation & community organizing

Date: 7/12/16 Time of day: 12:15pm Duration: 5:28

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): The Chainbreaker Collective is an economic and environmental justice organization focused on access to transportation for low-income Santa Feans. Chainbreaker has a big job to do, and now they're inviting you to help them do it. The collective is launching the Bicycle Resource Center University, a free twelve-week crash course in bicycle mechanics and social justice organizing. Executive Director Tomás Rivera says BRC University is a response to his organization's desire to serve more of the Santa Fe community, and the community's desire to become more involved in that service.

Issue: child welfare & public education funding

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): At Noon

Date: 7/14/16 Time of day: 12:13pm Duration: 8:28

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): Hundreds of New Mexico's most dedicated child advocates brought their collective energy to bear on the third annual Kids Count Conference in Albuquerque recently. As KSFR's Deborah Martinez reports, the group intends to have an impact on the next legislative session in January, as lawmakers wrestle with dwindling cash for education, and discouraging data on children's well-being in New Mexico.

Issue: reforms at NM Dept of Human Services

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): here and there

Date: 7/28/16 Time of day: 5pm Duration: 50min

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): The NM State Department of Human Services, like the Albuquerque Police Dept is being fitted for court-ordered Federal monitoring. Despite years of harsh criticism and instructions from the court, a Federal Judge says NM DHS has been cheating legally-entitled citizens out of their Food Stamps and welfare payments. The result, she said, was that many families have been going to bed not just poor, but hungry. Senior Reporter Joey Peters of the NM Political Report on the latest area of NM governance to require training wheels.

Issue: Gila River diversion

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here And There

Date: 8/4/16 Time of day: 5pm Duration: 50 min

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): Some people look at a mountain stream like the Gila River in SW NM and see wildness, nature before man laid a hand on it. Other see the Gila and say, how can man make it better? ...or is it just...make it more expensive? No question the Gila is beautiful just as it is, but environmental reporter Laura Paskus of NM in Depth says, for decades politicians have been planning to harness the Gila, redistribute its waters and spend up to a billion dollars. That grand plan has run out of money, but a new proposal could still cost more than $300 million without even counting the cost of decades of maintenance.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): A far more serious problem than 2009." That's how Democratic Senator John Arthur Smith who chairs the New Mexico Senate Finance Committee described New Mexico's budget deficit to KSFR's Mary Lou Cooper. Since 2014 oil and natural gas prices in New Mexico have dropped precipitously. While consumers welcome the prices at the pump, the impact on the New Mexico budget which typically receives up to 25% of general fund revenue from oil and gas has been devastating
