BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): Many Native Americans in the Southwest live in what are effectively food deserts, places where fresh fruits and vegetables and non-processed foods are simply not available. But in Arizona, Native American farmers are trying to change that. Tayler Brown of Cronkite news of AZ PBS with a story of corn in many colors and beans full of nutritional magic.

=====
Issue: animal welfare

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Wake Up Call

Date: Oct 5, 2018 Time of day: 8:08am Duration: 14:13

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): A series of stories in the Santa Fe New Mexican that are critical of Santa Fe's No Kill Animal shelter and Humane Society are being branded as "distortions" by Shelter officials. In two stories, September 23 and 24, the New Mexican cited questionable financial transactions on the part of Shelter board members and its former director. But current director Dr. Jennifer Steketee, says the newspaper omitted some facts and distorted others to make them fit a foregone conclusion that the Shelter is in bad financial shape. Steketee says the Shelter's budget is balanced. She also says both stories were picked up by local and national news sources, and she wants the record corrected. The newspaper has since published an opinion piece by Steketee, defending the Shelter. We spoke with Dr. Steketee and with Board Treasurer, Bill Synnamon about the budget situation at the Shelter.

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here and There

Date: Nov 12, 2018 Time of day: 5:07pm Duration: 50min

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): Here in NM, and many other places in America, the recent midterm elections burned through more money than ever before. This is a record with the endurance of a sandcastle. So, from where and whom is the money coming from? and is it paying off in votes? Dave Levinthal led a team of reporters from the Center for Public Integrity to answer these questions. Fortunately for us, the answers are complicated and interesting. Like are a lot of little skinny financial supporters better than a small bunch of big fat ones?

Date: Dec 3, 2018 Time of day: 8:10am Duration: 6:48
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): New Mexico State University regents approved state regulations for hemp cultivation during a special meeting last Thursday. Kristie Garcia, public information officer for the New Mexico Department of Agriculture, says the university regents' approval is necessary because UNM is a land grant college. The state agriculture department submitted the rules for licensing and inspection of crops to ensure compliance with New Mexico and federal laws. Hemp is cultivated around the world for its industrial and commercial uses. Hemp belongs to the cannabis sativa species, and is controlled by federal drug laws banning cultivation of cannabis, which contains a psychoactive substance THC. (Tetrahydrocannabinol). KSFZ spoke with Kristie Garcia about the new rules:

Issue: hunger/poverty
WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Wake Up Call
Date: Dec 21, 2018 Time of day: Duration: 24min
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): New Mexico leads the nation in child hunger. MK Mendoza speaks with the executive director of Santa Fe's Food Depot to get to the bottom of understanding what's at root at that astounding statistic and what you can do to help turn that around. The face of hunger also consists of seniors and the working poor. They discuss the economics of just how close hunger can lie even within a 2 income household income with children. And they look at the impact of a 22% increase in household expense a food tax will add to poor families. She talks alternatives that can bring income in at a far more effective rate that doesn't throw more into poverty as well as the annual Souper Bowl contest coming up soon!
