DATE	TIME	SHOW #	TOPICS
10/1/15	25:00	#1367	On this week's 51%, we hear about how a certain university is responding to sexual assault; a retiree and her dog search for missing people; a harpist elicits interesting reactions from primates; and we have a women in history profile.
10/8/15	25:00	#1368	On this week's 51%, taking a breath and the time to regroup. First, a yoga therapist addresses food addictions. Then, does yoga have to go om-less? And a writer looks at yoga and storytelling.
10/15/15	25:00	#1369	On this week's 51%, we hear about helping women take the lead, there's hope for reducing child marriages in Africa, and a story about a voodoo queen.
10/22/15	25:00	#1370	On this week's 51%, we hear from a woman who runs a medicinal marijuana bakery. A teen goes public about domestic violence, and we bring you a Halloween memory.
10/29/15	25:00	#1371	On this week's 51%, we hear about a local effort to raise awareness about human trafficking. An Internet sensation goes on tour to share fans' stories, and a young woman leads "Hipsters of Nature."
11/5/15	25:00	#1372	On this week's 51%, reversing the roles in one of Shakespeare's tragedies. We hear from a transgender service member on balancing identity and serving the country. Plus, a woman creates the tiniest museum in her city.
11/12/15	25:00	#1373	On this week's 51%, a woman takes her work against gun violence to another level. Then we hear from former Fortune 500 executive about women and transition.
11/19/15	25:00	#1374	On this week's 51%, we get personal, below the belt. First, homeless women face a particular monthly challenge. Then we hear why girls should be queens of their pelvic regions. And we have an historical look at gal pals.
11/26/15	25:00	#1375	On this week's 51%, the family gatherings have begun, and we take a look at the state of the Family Leave Act in California. Then, a woman who cares about New York City children in foster care seeks to broaden their horizons by exposing them to the arts. And we make a toast to the original Champagne Lady.
12/3/15	25:00	#1376	On this week's 51%, we take two looks at matchmaking. First we meet the most popular woman on a certain online dating site. Then we travel to Israel for a story of matchmaking in a more traditional sense.
12/10/15	25:00	#1377	On this week's 51%, we hear from an author devoted to raising awareness about ocean conservation and climate change. Then, a girls basketball team gets a clothing makeover, and the game gets easier. I'm Allison Dunne and this is 51%.
12/17/15	25:00	#1378	On this week's 51%, we take a look at female robots and other artificial Eves. And you'll hear how a government program is helping new mothers in a California county.
12/24/15	25:00	#1379	On this week's 51%, we hear from an author of a book about what it will take for a woman to be president. And teaching kids about preventing sexual violence goes the texting route in a rural county. Plus, a teen tells about the travails of junior year.

DATE	TIME	SHOW #	TOPICS
7/1/15	25:00	#1354	We'll hear about two famous cousins in the Roosevelt family who took on public, powerful roles for women at the time; and a woman honors patients who died at a mental institution and a man in Nigeria ditches Barbie dolls for African queens.
7/8/15	25:00	#1355	We explore choices in a lifetime. First we'll hear from an author who wants to change the approach to exercise. Then we meet a woman honored with being her town's oldest resident followed by a teenager who wants the right to make her own medical decisions.
7/15/15	25:00	#1356	New York is home to new legislation combating sexual assault on college campuses; a woman talks about companies that hire workers with disabilities, a female comedian says there's more than just humor in her Disabilities Act; and a young woman provides art therapy to marginalized kids in Portugal.
7/22/15	25:00	#1357	A psychotherapist talks about healing and self-love, a Nobel laureate marks her birthday by opening a school for girls, and an essay on storytelling after the shooting at a Charleston church.
7/29/15	25:00	#1358	We hear about a book on First Ladies. Then, three young women head off for military life and we hear from a lawyer who says the U.S. criminal justice system is broken.
8/5/15	25:00	#1359	We explore pregnancy from two different angles. First, we hear from a mother who gave birth as a teenager in foster care. Then, a midwife talks about her profession and latest novel. While teen pregnancy has declined throughout the years, it has not for girls in the foster care system. They're two and a half times more likely to become pregnant by the time they're 19. Nicole Rocke was one of these young girls. Making Contact Reporter Leticia Miranda has Nicole's story from New York City.
8/12/15	25:00	#1360	Two mothers launch a math and science-themed clothing line for girls. We also have a story about a coveted red dye, and you'll hear from a few women about a mental health line for peers.
8/19/15	25:00	#1361	A Kurdish singer takes her message to the war zone; we check in with a mother who started a foundation after her son was fatally shot by police; and a writer shares a story about racism.
8/26/15	25:00	#1362	A woman hopes to help others caring for their aging parents, a female activist works to keep youth from fleeing an African country, and an anthropologist tells us about a macho sport involving birds.
9/2/15	25:00	#1363	It's living large with a same-sex couple from many decades ago; and women going to or teaching at the gym is commonplace in the U.S., but not in another country.
9/9/15	25:00	#1364	We talk about empowering women and men. First, a producer attempts to crack the mystery of men, and starts The Testosterone Project. Then, we hear from a few high-school students about feminism and gender equality.
9/16/15	25:00	#1365	We hear about how technology is helping to combat sexual assault. We then travel to the Yucatan to learn about indigenous women and childbirth. And a women's choir sings without a director, by choice. College students are back in school and, over the past couple of years, governmental leaders and victims have increasingly called attention to sexual assault on campuses across the country. Using a pilot program at a college in Massachusetts, one company is working to combat the issue with technology.
9/23/15	25:00	#1366	We'll hear about how a famous New York City park could see its first female statue; a Malaysian woman is a virtual mom, and another mom takes issue with a few words.

DATE	TIME	SHOW #	TOPICS
4/1/15	25:00	#1341	On this week's 51%, it's the 100th anniversary of an international women's peace group. Plus, a professor receives a grant to study a girls' education program in India. And, what's a runcle?
4/8/15	25:00	#1342	On this week's 51%, we'll hear from the co-founder of a web site on loss and grief, where issues are presented candidly. Plus, a man does his part to combat sex trafficking in Argentina; and Amy Poehler talks about that voice in the mirror.
4/15/15	25:00	#1343	On this week's 51%, we'll hear about a woman who takes on the Catholic Church by becoming a priest. And candid conversation on a web site about loss and grief. We'll hear from the co-founder of that site. We first bring you a story about a woman who says, yes, she broke the Church's Canon Law and she doesn't care. She has found a place in Roman Catholic Women Priests. We go to San Francisco where Judy Silber reports for KALW's Crosscurrents.
4/22/15	25:00	#1344	On this week's 51%, we'll hear from singer/songwriter Mary Gauthier. Plus, the head of Fair Trade Africa wants to effect change, and a bit about birdsong. Mary Gauthier is on tour with her latest album, Trouble & Love . She has seen plenty of both: an orphan and teenage runaway, former addict and alcoholic, and restaurateur. 51%'s Ian Pickus spoke with Gauthier during one of her stops in New York.
4/29/15	25:00	#1345	On this week's 51%, just more than one year after the kidnapping of Nigerian schoolgirls, we'll hear from Amnesty International on militant group Boko Haram. Plus, Vermont takes action to close the pay gap, and a trio of stories for Mother's Day.
5/6/15	25:00	#1346	On this week's 51%, we'll speak with an author of a book about women in baseball, and you'll hear about a push to put a female face on the $20 bill and pushback in France over price differences for products marketed to women. Only occasionally do we hear about girls playing baseball. Many baseball followers may not even be aware that there is a national women's baseball team in the U.S. or that Team USA has medaled in every international competition in which it has played for the past decade. American women baseball players are one of the best kept secrets in American sports.
5/13/15	25:00	#1347	On this week's 51%, a deaf woman expresses her love of music and misconceptions, and we'll hear from filmmaker, writer, and artist Miranda July about her first novel and then a snippet about Muppet feminism. From jazz to hip hop - Louisa Petcure, finds herself wrapped up in music. But she hears the music differently than someone who is not deaf. Marcia Adair reports for DW from Hamburg, Germany.
5/20/15	25:00	#1348	On this week's 51%, living well, first via sustainable happiness, then, through fine dining. And it call comes together with a focus on women's health.
5/27/15	25:00	#1349	On this week's 51%, there's a new site focusing on gender dynamics in the 2016 presidential race. Plus, a teen reporter equates a pop star with feminism; and young girls guess at what their future careers might be.
6/3/15	25:00	#1350	On this week's 51%, women and children freed from Boko Haram face difficult times returning home; human rights activist and author Rafia Zakaria talks about unheard female voices in Pakistan; and a woman finds comfort in a veterans comedy boot camp.
6/10/15	25:00	#1351	On this week's 51%, a woman talks about her non-profit group helping young people released from prison. We'll also hear about a women's prison book project, and a daughter shares her experience of loving and letting go of her father. In New York City a food truck with a purpose takes a chance on young people fresh out of jail. It's a way for the previously incarcerated youth to integrate back into society by earning paychecks and getting work experience. Pierre Bienaimé has this Deutsche Welle

DATE	TIME	SHOW #	TOPICS
1/1/15	25:00	#1328	On this week's 51%, a young woman in England is out to combat sexism worldwide. Then we'll hear from a doctor about cancer prehab. And women on the fire brigade in France are far from numerous. Laura was sick of rude comments and inappropriate groping on crowded buses, so the young Londoner has been sending a clear message to other women: You do not have to tolerate sexism. Joanna Impey reports from London.
1/8/15	25:00	#1329	On this week's 51%, we'll hear from the lead author on a study about Chinese comfort women. And a medical student uses crowdfunding to help Ugandan's access clean water.
1/15/15	25:00	#1330	On this week's 51%, as more states legalize some form of marijuana use, one woman has a message for other women. We'll hear about a female pinball wizard and a male midwife.
1/22/15	25:00	#1331	On this week's 51%, we'll hear about efforts to address sexual assault on campus. Also on this week's show, the youngest woman to ever serve in Congress is sworn in, and we'll hear about the female side of football, when it comes to Super Bowl ads and on the field.
1/29/15	25:00	#1332	On this week's 51%, New York's governor has a plan to combat sexual assault on college campuses. Plus, a Central American girl heads to Texas to escape domestic violence; a proofreader finds herself more involved in her work than anticipated; and a story about Cupid's flawed approach to romance. With New York having the most schools being federally investigated for sexual abuse complaints, WBFO'S Focus on Education reporter Eileen Buckley has a story about a recent complaint filed against Canisius College in Buffalo.
2/5/15	25:00	#1333	On this week's 51%, we'll tell you about women and the field of veterinary science; you'll hear about how a dog helped a girl stop trying to kill herself. Plus, federal legislation concerning abortions, and a teenager who wants to learn about love.
2/12/15	25:00	#1334	On this week's 51%, you'll hear about women who are changing the game, literally or figuratively. First the literal, as in developing video games. Then, a female farmer fights for land use; a teenager grows wary of lipstick ingredients; and an essay about changing a human brand. Female gamers do not always have it easy in the virtual world. But, as Rhiannon Corby reports, they are finding ways to combat sexism in video game culture.
2/19/15	25:00	#1335	On this week's 51%, domestic violence from two angles. First, we'll hear about a message from a book about domestic violence - an adult message from a book written by a girl. Then a retired police officer discusses a protocol adopted in his New York county to help victims. Plus, hiring women mechanics to appeal to women.
2/26/15	25:00	#1336	On this week's 51%, female film directors. There weren't any nominated for this year's Oscars, so we'll turn elsewhere to hear from the women's director chair. And one director talks about group Film Fatales.
3/5/15	25:00	#1337	(Repeat #1326) On this week's 51%, we'll speak with a filmmaker who walked the wards of Chinese hospitals to speak with young workers poisoned by the chemicals that went into making our cell phones. Plus, we'll hear about a program to entice women into coding. And, sure, the cookies may be good, but the Girl Scouts want to be known for a lot more than that.
3/12/15	25:00	#1338	On this week's 51%, we'll hear about a woman whose passion is ecotourism, in China. Then we'll speak with an author with another passion, writing about unrequited love that she learned to let go.
3/19/15	25:00	#1339	On this week's 51%, one International Women's Day event serves as a call to action, amid women's resilience and ability to impact others.

10/3/14	25:00	#1315	On this week's 51%, the U.S. president and vice president announce a campaign to help put an end to sexual assault on college campuses. You'll hear about a study focused on female college students and sexual assault. Plus we'll hear from actress Swoosie Kurtz about her memoir. Last month, the White House launched an awareness campaign on sexual assault called "It's On Us".
10/10/14	25:00	#1316	On this week's 51%, a woman nearing 80 is on a mission to introduce the world to Indonesian literature. Then, we visit Zambia to learn what is being done to decrease the number of teen pregnancies and we'll hear about a young woman's campaign to put an end to a human rights violation.
10/17/14	25:00	#1317	It seems like every other day someone in the media is talking about the American education system being "broken". They say it...and everyone nods in agreement. But one of the foremost authorities on education in the US says that public schools are doing fine...the real problem is the growing trend towards privatization. Today on the Best Of Our Knowledge, we'll talk to former US Assistant Secretary of Education Diane Ravitch, who calls the privatization movement a Reign of Error.
