Photographer Michael Forsberg and filmmaker Pete Stegen set off on a remarkable 55-day adventure. They travel more than 1,300 miles through three states -- on bike, on foot and in a canoe -- to trace the journey of Nebraska's Platte River from snowmelt in the mountains of Wyoming to where it finally flows into the Missouri. Through iPhone interviews, journals and drawings - and with a backdrop of spectacular landscapes - Follow the Water chronicles the story of where our water comes from, and why we should care.

DEVIL CLOUDS: TORNADOES STRIKE NEBRASKA #000H

Airs: Wed 04/17/2019 at 22:00:00:00 on NET-HD

Easter Sunday, March 23, 1913, with little warning, seven tornados roared through eastern Nebraska, turning this into the deadliest natural disaster in Nebraska's history. The most devastating tornado cut a seven mile swath through Ralston and Omaha, killing 100 people. All told, the tornado outbreak would be responsible for 168 deaths and nearly $10 million in damage (more than $200 million in today's dollars). It's a story full of heroes and colorful characters; a story of tragedy, but also recovery and resolve; and the story of a city and state in transition, and the impact of a single devastating event on these places.
