Programs and Issues – 2022

The Programs and Issues in this file are "representative" of our news and public affairs efforts – but do not fully demonstrate the breadth of our reporting and our commitment to "live" local and relevant radio. Below is a summary of some of our major regularly scheduled broadcast efforts.

Monday-Friday:

Radio VT News provides extended coverage of local, state and regional news: 6:05am - 7:05am - 8:05am - 12:05pm - 4:05pm - 5:05pm Each Newscasts is 5 to 10-minutes in length and features a variety of reports.

At 7:30AM Mon-Fri – The Morning Briefing: 10-mins of World & National News

The Morning News Service airs from 7-9am – two full hours of news, weather, sports, travel updates, commentary, interviews, plus studio and phone guests. WDEV employs our own forecaster Roger Hill who details the micro-climate of the region while watching major national weather stories and climate change. The MNS is produced by Radio Vermont News with additional world and national updates from CBS Radio News.

Radio Vermont News has developed reporter relations with WCAX-TV Channel 3 News. Monday-Friday reporter Alexandra Montgomery joins the Morning News Service with a "live" interactive update to explore stories in much greater depth than available from wire service reports.

In our "Conversation with the Editor" series, we discuss major stories from some of Vermont's most respected weekly newspapers:

Monday: The News & Citizen (Morrisville) – Tommy Gardner, Reporter

Tuesday: The Addison Independent (Middlebury) - John Flowers, Reporter Wednesday: The Valley Reporter (Waitisfield) -Erica Nichols-Frazier, Reporter

Thursday: The Gazette (Hardwick) - Ray Small, Publisher & Editor

Friday: The Herald (Randolph) – Tim Calabro, Publisher

Re-Broadcast of WCAX-TV News: 11-11:30pm

Since the conversion to all digital over-the-air TV broadcasts, many in our listening area told us that they missed WCAX news – no longer available to them "over the air."

Through special retransmission agreement with WCAX News, WDEV re-broadcasts the 11pm report as a service to the public. (This is occasionally pre-empted by late-airing sporting events such as when the Red Sox play on the West Coast.)

Saturday Morning:

Similar to weekdays, WDEV is "live and local" with updated news reports including the Morning News Service from 7-8am. This hour also features "For the Birds" a program dedicated to watching and listening to birds; "The Green Mountain Club" report – with opportunities to explore VT outdoors and take advantage of guided and organized hikes around the state.

Sunday Morning:

At 6:00AM, WDEV airs CBS Radio Sunday Morning, and "The Takeout with Majhor Garrett", a weekly news magazine show. National and International issues are explored in-depth with a variety of reporters and guests.

The City of Burlington has a shortage in crossing guards, and in some cases school administrators are having to pick up the slack.

Nearly one third of the Crossing guards jobs are sitting empty.

One crossing guard, Latasha MacDonald, tells Local 22 News that she's out early every school day, ensuring that children and pedestrians get across this busy street safely

(021422SOT Latasha MacDonald)

The Director of Public Works, Chapin Spencer says In some cases, the shortage has forced school officials to fill in for the guards to help ensure the safety of students.

(021422SOT Chapin Spencer)

Recently, there have been times where there hasn't been any coverage when a crossing guard cannot work.

Vermont restaurateurs say they're at a "dire tipping point" because of the Covid-19 pandemic.

Unaffordable housing near work and lack of transportation are two pressures the pandemic has worsened as restaurants scramble to attract and keep workers. Another is that employees have come to expect better pay and working conditions. Plus, restaurants are paying more for food.

Covid-related closures this winter have also been costly. One survey found that during the Omicron wave, 56 percent of Vermont restaurants had closed on days they would normally be open.

In 2020, the federal Restaurant Revitalization Fund helped about 30 percent of Vermont restaurants stay afloat, but that funding has dwindled. The National Restaurant Association estimates that 4,000 Vermont jobs could be lost without further help from the federal government.

Versions 1. 2/2/2022 3:45:04 PM - Lee Kittell - TRT 00:00:40 ✓

00:00:40 at 20 v characters per second

A U.S. Postal Service worker in Montpelier made a public plea for help last month as residents complained about widespread delivery delays.

The Postal Service has had to deliver a deluge of packages since people started staying home and ordering online when the pandemic began two years ago, and Vermonters have been raising concerns about problems with the mail for months.

Among the reasons for the delays, the postal worker said, is the Postal Service's new protocol of "packages first, mail second."

The postal worker said that free Covid-19 tests are compounding the problem. Since people have been able to order the tests, first from the state of Vermont and now from the federal government, the Montpelier Post Office is dealing with volume that is almost double that before Christmas.

Vermont's largest hospital, the University of Vermont Medical Center, is operating under an emergency staffing plan because 422 staff members are out of work for COVID-19 related reasons

The hospital says staff will be sent "to areas of highest need."

New Text Document

A major state investigation shows many Vermonters are going months without the specialty health care they need.

For the past several years access to health care has not been keeping up with demand, and the pandemic response made that problem worse.

The report dug into why many Vermonters have to wait for months to see some medical specialists.

Ena Backus, the state's director of health care reform tells WCAX News that the Data shows neurology and dermatology patients wait the longest, sometimes over a year.

(021722SOT Ena Backus)

According to state leaders, the study does not demonstrate whether people received appropriate care within the appropriate time frame for their acuity.

The panel wants hospitals to track wait times and make the results public.

They also recommend making it easier to accept Medicaid payments, bolstering the number of physician's assistants, increasing telehealth, speeding up licensure for all medical professionals, and doubling down on shifting away from fee-for-service payments.

In the meantime, Financial Regulation Commissioner Mike Pieciak tells Channel 3 News that wait times could get longer as Vermont's demographic problem places a supply and demand crunch on specialty care.

(021722SOT Michael Pieciak)

Interim Human Services Secretary Jenny Samuelson says Vermonters might also need to lower their expectations.

(021722SOT Jenny Samuelson)

Some are already taking action to reduce wait times and woo workers. Brattleboro Memorial Hospital is sharing specialists with bigger hospitals. The UVM Medical Center announced this week it is raising wages and bonuses. And Northeastern Regional Hospital in St. Johnsbury is giving employees money for housing.

The UVM Medical Center and the Union representing the hospital's nurses agreed on a 10% wage increase starting this next pay period.

The agreement comes before contract negotiations set for the coming months.

The Hospital says there is a 22% vacancy rate among nurses now, more than double what it is in an average year.

Deb Snell of the Federation of Nurses and Health Professionals tells WCAX News that about 300 traveling nurses are filling the staffing gaps at UVMMC, making more money on average than the nearly 2,000 union nurses at the medical center.

(021522SOT Deb Snell)

Nurses will also get an additional 5% increase both this October and next October, and all technical employees-- excluding imaging techs who have a separate agreement-- will receive a $5,000 stabilization bonus.

Stephen Leffler, the president and COO of UVMMC, says the pay increases will cost the hospital over $5 million for the rest of the fiscal year, with the retention bonuses costing around $10 million over two years.

(021522SOT Stephen Leffler)

Snell says this translates to around a $3-$5 increase an hour.

Leffler adds while they are still assessing how these wages compete, he has a sense these will make them competitive in the state.

The rest of the nurses' contract will be negotiated in the spring but the wage aspect of negotiations is now complete.

State regulators said no Wednesday to a hefty increase in service charges at Rutland Regional Medical Center.

Green Mountain Care Board members voted 4-1 to deny the request for a midyear increase in those rates, citing concerns about the burden the increase would impose on small businesses and privately insured Vermonters.

Board members said much of the hospital's projected deficit for the current fiscal year involves one-time costs, such as retention bonuses and the higher costs of hiring temporary staff.

Green Mountain Care Board Chair Kevin Mullin tells WCAX News the regulators denied the request because a midyear adjustment isn't appropriate unless it's an emergency, and he argues Rutland Regional isn't there yet.

(033122SOT Kevin Mullin)

Claudio Fort, the hospital's chief executive and president, said without the increase, there could be cuts in services and the hospital could default on its loan payments.

Governor Phil Scott and his administration are asking state lawmakers to remove some recent changes they have made to next year's budget.

The concerns have to do with changes to how Vermont's federal funding from the American Rescue Plan Act will be used.

Lawmakers in the House reallocated $90 million dollars in federal funding from the American rescue planted, and Adam Greshin, the Commissioner of the Department of Finance and Management, sees their plans don't align with the administration's long-term vision.

(012822SOT Adam Greshin).

The administration is particularly concerned about what spending could be omitted from the final budget if the $90 million dollars goes elsewhere.

$50 million in financial help is available for homeowners who have fallen behind on mortgage and utility payments.

And unlike other packages, people can use it for past-due property taxes, too, dating all the way back to the beginning of the pandemic.

Maura Collins, the executive director of the Vermont Housing Finance Agency tells WCAX NEws Applicants will have to prove financial hardship from the pandemic and there's a $30,000 cap per household.

(012522SOT Maura Collins)

The Vermont Housing Finance Agency granted just under $10 million to 900 Vermonters last year in a previous package. This time, they expect this money to help about 3,000 families.

There are caseworkers to walk people through the application process and legal assistance to help people get out of debt.

You can apply at vermonthap.vhfa.org. A Homeowner Assistance Program information hotline is open Monday through Friday, at 833-221-4208.

The Vermont House gave preliminary but unanimous approval on Thursday to a $358 million plan to spend tens of millions on housing, one-time bonuses for frontline workers, and a one-time payment required to seal the deal on a tentative proposal for pension reform.

The budget adjustment act is usually a sleepy affair, passed in the opening weeks of the legislative session, that makes minor tweaks to the current year's annual budget. Larger policy debates are reserved for the budget, which gets hashed out in the waning days of each annual session.

But with the state flush with federal cash -- and under pressure to spend quickly as both labor and housing shortages come to a head -- this year's budget adjustment bill, H.679, is a different story.

-- Gov. Phil Scott laid out a budget plan Tuesday that he says will invest a record $7.7 billion without raising taxes. In fact, the governor says it will return money to taxpayers.

011822SOT Phil Scott A

--The wide-ranging financial blueprint addresses workforce woes, housing and leftover federal funds.

The governor called for big investments in career technical centers, initiatives for retirees and internships through the Department of Labor.

011822SOT Phil Scott B

Among the proposals, he wants to add $1 million to the state's internship program, assisting employers with wages and supporting workers in learning new skills. Another $1 million would go to VSAC's Advancement Grants, which help adults enroll in training programs for careers like nursing, EMTs, line workers and web programmers. It also calls for $2.7 million to pilot a workforce network in six communities. If it works, Scott says it should be expanded statewide.

- --The governor is calling for $15 million in budget adjustment to keep more nurses in Vermont. Another $18 million in existing funds would help train, retain and recruit health care and mental health workers.
- --Among other things, Scott says the budget fully funds the state's retirement obligations with a total payment of $394 million.

To help Vermonters with housing needs, the budget proposes $15 million to encourage the construction of homes for middle-income Vermonters. Another $25 million would go to VHIP, to help transform rundown or vacant units. It also invests another $105 million for affordable, mixed-income housing.

011822SOT Phil Scott C

- --The governor proposed tax cuts focused on middle-income Vermonters, retirees and young workers. He says the package will help tens of thousands of Vermonters keep more of what they earn. There are tax credits for nurses and child care workers. And the governor proposed exempting military families' retirement from state taxes.
- --The governor says a $90 million surplus in the education fund can provide property taxpayers with a rebate on what they overpaid, proposing returning $45 million to Vermonters this year.

The Low Income Heating Assistance Program, or LIHEAP, will have its funding more than doubled this year.

The normal appropriation per year is around $3 billion, but a big push by congress, has brought the program an additional $4.5 billion from the American Recue Plan.

Vermont Congressman Peter Welch tells NBC5 the extra money is coming at an appropriate time.

(011022SOT Peter Welch)

Vermont is receiving $26.6 million from the American Rescue Plan for LIHEAP. Added to the $18.9 million in annual appropriation, $45 million is now available to help families pay their heating bills.

About 39,000 people in Vermont use LIHEAP money every year to heat their homes.

Democratic leaders in the Legislature have not been shy about criticizing Gov. Phil Scott's response to the pandemic since variants have sent the state's case and hospitalization numbers skyrocketing.

And, in the days and weeks leading up to the 2022 legislative session, they vowed to take action.

Yet one week into the session, no new proposals for mitigating the spread of the virus had made it onto the agenda in key committees.

Some Covid-related matters have kept lawmakers busy of late. The first bill passed by both chambers would allow municipalities to carry over their pandemic-era Town Meeting Day practices for another year. And the House and Senate health committees are discussing how to expedite legislation that will extend a host of regulatory flexibilities adopted in March 2020 for medical providers and insurers.

The Burlington City Council plans to meet remotely until further notice, in response to a record-shattering spike in Covid-19 cases across Vermont.

The change was made Monday by council President Max Tracy in consultation with Mayor Miro Weinberger.

Councilors have been meeting in a hybrid format since last summer, allowing councilors and members of the public to attend in person at City Hall or via videoconference. Before the hybrid format, pandemic-era meetings were held fully online.

But now a fully remote meeting is not legal since Vermont is no longer in a state of emergency, Tracy said. To comply with the state public meeting law, officials plan to set aside a conference room in City Hall where members of the public can sit and watch the remote meeting, though all of the councilors except Tracy are supposed to tune in remotely.

Vermont's top education official sent a terse email to a school superintendent whose district reimposed its mask mandate this week.

Faced with rising cases of Covid-19, administrators in the Washington Central School District reimposed the mask mandate starting Monday. The decision drew swift criticism from the secretary of education.

Emails show that the education secretary urged the superintendent to drop the mask mandate shortly after she made her announcement, and sarcastically suggested she probably was better-informed than the state Department of Health.

The district includes six schools in East Montpelier, Berlin, Plainfield, Worcester and Middlesex. The mask mandate extends through Filtery and school officials say they will discuss an extension.

Vermont's health and education leaders are making changes in COVID mitigation strategies at schools.

The Scott Administration says certain testing tools are not as effective against the omicron variant, so schools will end contact tracing and PCR surveillance testing, and shift the responsibility from the school to the home.

Education Secretary Dan French acknowledged recent criticism that the change in strategy in schools is "abrupt", but the Test-to-stay program was no longer effective, and contact tracing in K through 12 schools will stop.

(011222SOT Dan French B)

The Scott Administration says parents will get a response notification with testing recommendations depending on the student's vaccination status. All this comes as Vermont expects cases to increase into January but slow down by February.

The Vermont Department of Health today is reporting 715 cases of COVID-19 for Monday. Cases on Sunday were 806, on Saturday were 2,217 and on Friday were 1,722. The record daily high was set January 7, with 2,975 cases of COVID-19. Reported cases tend to run higher as the week goes along as people get tested and the labs report their results.

Hospitalizations today set another record with 116. ICU stays, which also had been elevated, were 26. The one-day record there was set December 7, 2021, (31). Hospitalizations and ICU visits had not surged even as cases have more than tripled the previous couple of weeks, but are on the rise the last week.

State officials have been concerned by the impact on the health care system. Already, the University of Vermont Medical Center has gone into emergency staffing mode.

There were two additional deaths reported today for a statewide total of 499.

A first-grade student at the Academy School in Brattleboro was vaccinated for Covid-19 against the expressed will of his parents.

Windham Southeast Supervisory Union Superintendent Speno revealed that information publicly in a letter to parents on Tuesday.

Vermont Daily Chronicle asked Governor Phil Scott about it at Tuesday's press conference, and the Governor denied knowing anything about it, and Secretary of Education Dan French said he was contacted by The New Hampshire Commissioner of Education to quote "alert me that he had heard a rumor about this."

In the letter Interim Superintendent Mark Speno said that during a recent vaccination clinic for children ages five and up, a mistake was made. A student whose parents did not consent to vaccination was mistaken for a student whose parents did consent.

Speno added "The Health Department has worked to evaluate its procedures to ensure that this does not happen again. Thankfully, we are not aware of any harm to the student because of this mistake."

GOVERNORS PRESS CONFERENCE

--As Vermont COVID case counts continue to hit record highs, Vermont health officials Tuesday outlined their shift to a new strategy that jettisons contract tracing and embraces rapid testing.

State health officials say the high number of cases has made it impossible to continue contact tracing, because of both the highly contagious nature of the omicron variant and the shorter incubation period. Now, the state says it's up to infected individuals to alert close contacts.

Here's Health Commissioner Dr. Mark Levine

- --Governor Phil Scott says the state on Wednesday at 10 a.m. will activate a new website that will allow Vermonters to order rapid tests online. He says the tests will be a key tool to address the fast spread of the omicron variant. There will be 250,000 kits available initially and there will be a limit of two per household.
- --Vermont forecast models suggest daily case numbers could more than double through the rest of January. Hospitalization rates remain elevated but stable for now.

For the second week, a number of schools have opted to shut down because of staffing shortages. Education Secretary Dan French says districts will be required to make up these days just like a snow day.

He says districts will be able to apply for a waiver for those days.

With such high infection numbers combined with the changes in test reporting, Vermont health officials have scrambled over the --last several days to track infection numbers. Officials say various glitches in the reporting system mean the state's online dashboard won't' be updated until Wednesday at the earliest.

The state of Vermont is going to be providing free rapid COVID-19 tests to the state's regulated child-care centers.

The "Tests for Tots" program, which was announced Friday, is designed to allow the cente to test children and staff when a positive COVID-19 case is detected at their program.

It's a spinoff of the "Test to Stay" program that has been an important tool in Vermon地 K-12-schools.

Governor Phil Scott says the program will decrease the burden of contact tracing for child care program staff, while limiting the impact of quarantines on children, their families, and staff.

Child care providers can enroll in the program immediately.

Vermont's teachers' union is calling Friday's decision to end contact tracing and surveillance testing a "demoralizing blow" to anyone involved in the state's school system.

In Saturday's statement, the Vermont chapter of the National Education Association, criticized the Agency of Education's abrupt decision amid record-breaking case counts and school closures.

Previewing the policy shift in an email to local school officials Friday, Secretary of Education Dan French promised more guidance early this week and framed the change as an opportunity to relieve educators' already overburdened workloads.

The state Agency of Education's new approach appears to shift the burden of "test-to-stay," a regimen in which close contacts of positive cases take daily rapid tests before the beginning of class, from school staff to the family members of students.

The union denounced what they called the state's ever-changing, "tone deaf shifts in safety guidance, saying "The secretary of education decided to commemorate one of the most chaotic weeks ever in Vermont schools by yet another Friday night announcement of yet another abrupt COVID policy shift."

The teachers' union called for more tools to mitigate the spread of Covid-19, including rapid tests — a sore subject after teachers and students returned from their winter break to find that many of the rapid tests given to schools by the state Agency of Education last fall expired in late December, according to local school officials.
