The Florida moratorium continues but now allows landlords to begin the filing process and 'get in the action cue' for when the process can begin. Meantime, the CDC has put a national moratorium in place through December. Hayward discussed the uncertainty created by having two moratoriums and HFUW's concern about keeping people housed.

Trudell described how the utilities are preparing for hurricane season in the wake of the pandemic as well as preparation suggestions for residents. Two weeks before tropical storm Isaias they drilled for power outage response, considering how to manage the spread of coronavirus if their people needed to respond to an outage. Trudell also told residents how they can prepare for the outages brought on by storms, such as clearing things from outside the house that might be blown onto a power line.

Segment                    Protecting Victims of Domestic Abuse and Their Pets

Topic:                      During COVID

Organization:          Harbor House of Central Florida

Guest(s):                 Michelle Sperzel, CEO

Contact:                 (407) 886-2856; harborhousefl.com

Date:                      7/12/20

Duration:                20:00

Issues:                    Sperzel described the ongoing work to safeguard victims of domestic violence in the wake of COVID-19 and new legal support for their pets. She described the virtual opportunities that allow domestic violence victims to access support amid the confines of COVID quarantine, without the abuser knowing. As a safety measure, fewer women and children are able to stay at the shelter so that they can employ social distancing. Most recently, legal efforts made it such that pets are protected under Injunction for protection hearings. This helps victims protect the victims who have staying in abusive relationships in order to protect their pets.

Date: 7/26/20
Duration: 30:00

Issues: Gagliano described the work done by the Seminole County Animal Services and invited listeners to support their work. She made the point that unlike the Pet Alliance, Animal Services is a government branch, supported by taxpayer dollars, so they have to take all animals. So in addition to the kittens and dogs, the shelter now has a bird, pig, chicken and more. Right now, they are on COVID restrictions so are doing adoptions by appointment but people can see the animals up on their website. She advised listeners making hurricane plans to stock up for their pets too.
