Description: Aurora Dedicates Memorial to Shooting Victims.

This is a time for people to remember, mourn, but also celebrate the lives of those ripped from the Aurora community too soon. Friday evening, hundreds coming together outside the Aurora Municipal Center at the memorial garden for the dedication of a memorial for those injured and who lost their lives in the Aurora theater shooting six years ago. 83 white cranes are scattered across the garden, with 13 in the center flying in a column up towards the sky. Those cranes' wings are translucent to symbolize the lives lost, 12 plus one unborn child. "This greater Denver area knows this tragedy all too well," said Tom Teves. His son Alex was killed that tragic night. Loved ones and families stood tall Friday, thanking the community for the help and support over the years. The community bond growing stronger year after year. "A lot of laughs, a lot of hugs," former Chief Dan Oats said. "And friendships that came out of this terrible tragedy." The funding for the sculpture put together by the non-profit 7/20 Memorial Foundation. "My prayer is that this memorial fulfills the purpose for which it was created," said sculptor Douwe Blumberg. Description: US Employers Add over 150k jobs; jobless rate slips tenth of point.

U.S. employers slowed their hiring in July, adding 157,000 jobs, a solid gain but below the healthy pace they maintained in the first half of this year. The Labor Department said the unemployment rate ticked down to 3.9 percent from 4 percent. That's near an 18-year low of 3.8 percent reached in May. Employers added an average of 224,000 new workers in the first six months of this year, a faster pace than in 2017. The pickup has impressed many economists because it's happening late in the economic expansion, which has entered its 10th year and is now the second-longest in U.S. history. The economy grew in the April-June quarter at its fastest pace in four years. Business and consumers are optimistic, suggesting solid hiring is likely to continue.

Description: Fortune 250 Company VF Corp Relocates to Denver.

Fortune 250 company VF Corporation, the holding company of outdoor brands including The North Face, JanSport and Smartwool, is moving its global headquarters to Denver after receiving $27 million in job growth incentive tax credits. The Colorado Economic Development Commission made the announcement early Monday morning. The commission approved the tax credits last week in a bid to attract the company, dubbed "Project Cardinal," with a headquarters staff of 800 employees with an average salary of $185,721. "This project is strong validation of the state's role as a leading attractor of industry and it is especially heartening that it comes with VF -- a company whose brands and culture align with Colorado's core values," said Colorado Office of Economic Development and international trade executive director Stephanie Copeland. It was the second-largest incentive award ever from the commission. "We are thrilled to welcome a new partner that embodies the values that define Colorado," Gov. John Hickenlooper said in a statement. "VF's move underscores the critical driver that the outdoor recreation industry plays in our economy where business meets lifestyle." "We are grateful to Colorado for the job growth tax credits that represent a long-term commitment to our company and we want to make a long-term commitment to the people of Colorado," VF chairman, president and CEO Steve Rendle said. "For every dollar of job growth tax credit that we receive and use, we will match that dollar in a donation to the VF Foundation and designate those funds to support the charitable interests of the citizens of Colorado." The company will move to Denver in the spring. Several of its outdoor brands, including The North Face, JanSport, Smartwool, Eagle Creek and Altra will also move to Denver. Smartwool currently employs 70 people at its headquarters in Steamboat Springs. VF employs nearly 70,000 people worldwide and has operations in more than 170 countries. It also includes brands Vans, Timberland, Dickies and other work-wear brands that will not relocate to Denver. It had global revenues of $11.8 billion in 2017. "It is a great strategic fit for our business, and we are excited to be relocating our headquarters and several brands to the metro Denver area next year," Rendle said. "We believe that the creation of our new headquarters in the area will help us to unlock collaboration across our outdoor brands, attract and retain talent, and accelerate innovation."

Description: Girl Scout Troop Pushes to Reduce Plastic Bags.

A group of Girl Scouts is trying to change the law in unincorporated Jefferson County to cut down on single-use plastic shopping bags. The girls came up with the idea to reduce plastic bag consumption as a way to earn their Silver Award for the Girl Scouts. "It's been a problem that's been going on in our environment for far too long," 14-year-old Ella McIntyre said. Target in Glendale estimates its customers go through about 20,000 plastic shopping bags a day. "It's just a normal part of our lives we don't even think about it until we look at it and say oh my gosh, this is happening," Girl Scout Amanda Bontempo said. Because of the pollution from plastic bags, cities such as Boulder and Avon already have ordinances that require customers to pay a fee for using plastic bags. Tuesday morning, Girl Scout Troop 2458 made a presentation about its idea in front of the Jefferson County commissioners. It suggested implementing a 10 cent fee per plastic bag. "My first thought was ... this isn't possible for four teenage girls to go into a courthouse and say we want to get rid of plastic bags. They've been here for hundreds of years," McIntyre said. County leaders have asked the girls for more information about their initiative and will consider it in the coming weeks. Under the proposal, consumers could avoid the bag fee by using paper bags or bringing their own reusable bags. "We have like a million reusable bags from random stuff so we just threw a bunch of them in the back of our mom's car and now whenever we're like, oh let's go to Target, let's go get some groceries really quick, we bring them with us and it's just a simple thing," Girl Scout Mia Jordan said. The girls say they understand if Jefferson County doesn't adopt their idea. They say they will be happy if they inspire at least one person to ditch plastic bags for good. "We're just four teenage girls trying to make something happen," Girl Scout Gianna Akins said.

Description: Weld County Mayors Rally Against Proposition 112.

It is not every day hundreds of people gather on the steps of the Greeley Courthouse for a rally, but on Thursday that is exactly what happened. "112 is probably one of the most reckless pieces of law that I have seen," John Gates, Mayor of Greeley, told the crowd of mostly energy employees. Stephanie Dionne came because she believes her job may be at risk. Dionne works as an engineering tech with Noble Energy. "It's scary," Dionne said. "They want to protect their families, I want to protect my family I have two small kids," Dionne said. The news comes as the Colorado Legislative Council published its nonpartisan report, known as "The Blue Check" - outlining potential impacts of Proposition 112. The report says, "Limitations on new drilling will reduce local property tax collections," something that bothers Greeley Mayor John Gates. "When numbers of people move out it impacts your economy, your housing, your schools," he said. Watching the rally from afar was a supporter of Proposition 112 Patricia Nelson. "All they care about is the money," Nelson said. Nelson is supportive of the measure because she fears for her children's safety at Bella Romero Academy in Greeley, which is set to have multiple oil and gas sites nearby. "They don't care about my safety or my children's safety," Nelson added.

Description: Parents Need to Prepare Kids for Coming Out Gay at Earlier Age.

The suicide of 9-year-old Jamel Myles taking has hit home for many in the Denver community, including Blanca Leos. "My son was unfortunately bullied when he was in middle school," Leos said. She's the president of the Denver chapter of Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays. "He had such a time with the coming out process, he did have an attempted suicide," she said. Kids are starting to come and identify as gay, lesbian or transgender at a younger age. "I know for my son, I asked him 'When did you know?' And he told me it was very early on," Leos said. "It's definitely getting younger," said psychologist Sheryl Ziegler with The Child and Family Therapy Center at Lowry. "I mean, I remember years ago, seven or eight years ago, when it seemed young when a middle-schooler came out to me. Now that's the norm." For Myles' mom Leia Pierce, her son came out to her when he was 9 years old. He also told her he liked dressing differently. "And he goes, can I be honest with you?" Pierce said. "And I was like sure, and he's like, 'I know you buy me boy stuff because I'm a boy, but I'd rather dress like a girl.' I was like that's fine, I was like we can get you whatever you want. Two days after that he tells me he's gay." Ziegler said parents can help prepare kids for what they might face at school, especially heading into a large middle school. "Let's talk about all of the differences that are gonna exist between all the kids there," Ziegler said. Leos said it doesn't hurt for parents that don't have kids who identify as LGBTQ to talk with parents who have children that do identify, to have a better understanding. She said not every child comes out the same way, and sometimes you need to pick up on the cues. "Sometimes you know they're telling you without really saying it," Leos said. The National Alliance on Mental Illness said LGBTQ individuals are three times more likely than others to experience health conditions such as depression, which can lead to suicidal thoughts.

Description: Colorado Kids Grieve Together at Camp Erin.

There's something healing about Colorado's great outdoors. And healing is just what the kids at Camp Erin 2018 need. "I'm here for my dad because he was killed by a drunk driver," said one child at the camp opening ceremony. "I'm remembering my mom who died from drugs," said another. This is grief camp. Where kids who've lost the most important people in their lives get to visit Camp Granite Lake in Golden for one weekend in August. We first told you about Camp Erin Denver in 2016, when we introduced you to campers Tyler and Sean. Camp Erin was first set up by The Moyer Foundation, a charity established by former Colorado Rockies player Jamie Moyer and his wife, Karen. There are now nearly 50 camps nationwide, helping about 3,000 kids ages 6-17 deal with the loss of a significant person in their life. The kids get to spend the weekend in nature. And surprisingly, that kind of scares one mom. "Because our son died a year ago in a hiking accident, so to leave our other son here is rough, but at the same time we don't want to hide him from the world, and we want him to have some healing," Lisa Ragon told FOX 31. Her son, Noah Ragon, 8, died at Hanging Lake near Glenwood Springs last summer. It appears he was hit in the head by a falling rock. A photo brought to Camp Erin Denver by his little brother Ben, 6, shows them smiling together about a half-hour before the accident that killed Noah. "But while my parents were up there and my mom she went up to the top of the waterfall and said to my dad, 'Noah's been in an accident.' So my dad went to check, they did CPR. But nothing happened," Ben said. As tragic as Ben's story is, there are also 65 other kids coping with devastating loss at Camp Erin Denver this year. "He never expressed his feelings, so my grandpa said it was by suicide," said one girl, talking about the death of her father. Each child's loss is as poignant as the next. "You're losing someone who was the second half of your heart. Someone who took care of you and raised you and made you become the person you are," said one camper. "We have lots and lots of deaths by suicide. Among the campers, we have a girl here whose stepmom was murdered by her dad," said Barb Kamlet, director of Camp Erin, and executive director of Shimmering Wings, the non-profit that organizes the camp annually. The goal is to get the kids to open up. Help them with the healing. Give them coping skills. "We teach them it's ok to cry, it's ok to not cry. Kind of how to channel those emotions," Kamlet said. More than anything, the camp surrounds the kids with others who can relate. Children who are also grieving. The only ones who really know what these campers are going through. And so few people can relate to what Ben Ragon and his parents are going through. "I think that's a huge part of the healing, is to say, 'I'm not alone,'" Lisa Ragon said. By the end of the weekend, Ben and those 65 other grieving kids will know they're in it together. Thanks to the healing powers of nature. And the power of togetherness. "I think it's amazing this place exists, and I see in the other campers that they've had a meaningful experience, they've connected with each other. It feels like there's a sacred quality to it, and we're just really fortunate that we could be involved in it," said Aaron Ragon, Ben's father. Canada was back in a revamped North American free trade deal with the United States and Mexico late Sunday after weeks of bitter, high-pressure negotiations that brushed up against a midnight deadline. In a joint statement, U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer and Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister Chrystia Freeland said the agreement “will strengthen the middle class, and create good, well-paying jobs and new opportunities for the nearly half billion people who call North America home.” The new deal, reached just before a midnight deadline imposed by the U.S., will be called the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, or USMCA. It replaces the 24-year-old North American Free Trade Agreement, which President Donald Trump had called a job-killing disaster. Trump on Monday morning called it a “great deal,” tweeting that it “solves the many deficiencies and mistakes in NAFTA, greatly opens markets to our Farmers and Manufacturers, reduces Trade Barriers to the U.S. and will bring all three Great Nations together in competition with the rest of the world.” He added: “Congratulations to Mexico and Canada!”

Description: Denver Extends Salvation Army Shelter in RiNo.

It appears Denver's busiest homeless shelter is here to stay, at least through the rest of this year. City council Monday night approved an extension for the Salvation Army's Crossroads Shelter in the RiNo District. The shelter, which often houses more than 600 men during the busy winter months, fills a big need in the city of Denver. However, some people who live near the shelter are expressing concerns about safety in the area. "It's more uncomfortable than anything," said a woman named Haley, who lives nearby. "I understand the location. I just think it's a little close to home." The building off of Brighton Boulevard first opened its doors in the early 2000's when the Salvation Army transformed the aging warehouse into a shelter. It's now the city's busiest, at times housing close to 700 men. Neighbors say those large numbers have brought a number of problems. "I've heard of some windows on cars smashed, some break-ins. I had a jacket taken off my porch," Haley said. "I fell asleep on the couch one night and heard my gate open. I was like, what the hell was that?" said Michael Didia, who also lives near the shelter. Didia says someone stole pillows off his patio. He acknowledges it's a minor crime, but he says he fears it could lead to bigger ones. "When I come out in the morning to walk the dogs early they're pretty much lined up on everybody's stoops. People are just sitting there. It's kind of unnerving," he said. The Crossroads Shelter has also had problems of its own. The fire department has identified numerous health and safety violations at the facility in the past, everything from overcrowding to inadequate escape routes and restrooms. The Salvation Army has spent at least $200,000 addressing those issues while also discussing a more permanent solution. The Salvation Army plans to eventually demolish the aging shelter and rebuild on the same site. However, there is currently no timeline as to when that might happen. As for the contract extension approved by city council on Monday night, Salvation Army Major Divisional Commander Mike Dickinson released this statement:

"The Salvation Army's contract with the City and County of Denver covers the operational cost of providing essential services to 240 men who stay at Crossroads each night. This contract has been extended twice since it commenced on January 1, 2017 and this second extension covers the remaining six months of the year. We are working with the City and partnering with agencies to remain compliant with zoning regulations and the set occupancy number. We will continue to work with the City and County of Denver to meet the unmet needs of our growing city and remain grateful to the community for its continued support."

Description: Longmont's Homeless Population Drops.

New statistics show a drop in Longmont's homeless population, according to the city's deputy police chief. Part of the success is attributed to programs that focus on police having direct conversations with people living on the streets. Some people in Longmont say seeing a homeless person is much less common than it used to be. Business owner Don Jensen said customers used to be afraid to walk through an alley next to his guitar shop because the homeless were camping out there. "I'd say over the last few months, it's pretty much been a non-issue. I don't know what's changed. I don't know exactly what they've done, but it's improved immensely," Jensen said. The city credits some of the success to police offering new social services to the homeless. "We're helping people get connected with treatment services. We're helping them connect with mental health services. And we're helping them get stable, which helps at the next level getting them into housing," Longmont Deputy Police Chief Jeff Satur said. Satur says officers have seen a 73 percent year-to-year drop in the number of calls to deal with the homeless. There has also been a dramatic drop in the cost of cleaning up encampments. However, some people who live near Athletic Park believe some of the homeless ended in up in their neighborhood. "I think it just depends on the time of day. Like, right now, it's just calm and quiet. But when the sun goes, down everything changes," said a woman who only identified herself as Stephanie. Some of her neighbors believe the homeless problem is the worse they've seen in years. "I'm just grateful that it's become an issue that we're all looking at and paying attention to, and that it can get better and people can find the resources that they need," said Marian Stonacek, who also lives near the park. Police say fixing the problem will not happen overnight. However, officers say they are glad to be making progress. The community will meet in three weeks to discuss the efforts to deal with the homeless problem.

Description: Salmonella Outbreak Grows to 19 from Fort Collins Restaurant.

The number of people sickened by a salmonella outbreak at a Fort Collins restaurant has grown to 19, according to the Larimer County Health Department. Last week, six people who dined at La Luz Mexican restaurant on Walnut Street in Old Town Fort Collins were believed to have become sick from eating there. Some of those who had contracted the illness have had to be hospitalized, the health department said. The restaurant voluntarily closed its doors after the outbreak. The restaurant is cooperating with the health department in trying to determine how the outbreak happened. Salmonella can cause infections affecting the intestinal tract, urinary tract, bloodstream or other body tissues. It's often spread through food consumption. The bacteria can be spread through people who are sick who handle food. Symptoms might include diarrhea, fever, abdominal cramps, vomiting and bloody stool, and typically appear six to 72 hours after eating contaminated food. Katie O'Donnell with the Larimer County Health Department said in addition to the 19 cases, there are more pending. La Luz's Walnut Street location and its location on Boardwalk Drive scored "fair" ratings during health department inspections.

Description: UCHealth Performs 1st Transplant Surgery After Program Suspended.

UCHealth has operated on the first transplant patient to come over from Porter Adventist after Porter temporarily suspended its transplant program in July. Billie Mills is recuperating after she received a kidney transplant in August, donated by her daughter Jayd Wells. The mother-daughter duo had originally scheduled the transplant through Porter Adventist Hospital, but 13 days before the surgery, they were notified that Porter had voluntarily suspended its transplant services. More than 200 patients were told to find another hospital. Jayd remembers the call. "It was almost to where you are throwing up. You are just nauseous thinking about what do we do from here? Thirteen days away from surgery and now what?" she said. The Porter patients were told to contact one of the two hospitals in the area offering transplant services, either Presbyterian St. Luke's or UCHealth Transplant Centers. Mills worried her timetable would be pushed back dramatically. "We knew that there were a lot of patients from Porter. With only having two choices around the area, the other two facilities are going to be packed with people, and so we had no idea how long it might take," Mills said.

But, it didn't take long. The family contacted the UCHealth Transplant Center in the beginning of July and were able to schedule a date for surgery on August 15. Billie was the first Porter patient to get a transplant at UCHealth, but more than 170 Porter patients have contacted that facility. The Transplant Center at Presbyterian St. Luke's also continues to see a significant increase in patient referrals. "Volumes have risen more than 50 percent since the month of July. We have been able to successfully accommodate these patients by increasing our staffing levels and appointment availability. We welcome all patients to our program and will work with each individually as they continue to pursue transplantation," said Alyssa Johnston, vice president of transplant services at Presbyterian/St. Luke's. Porter is in the process of rebuilding its transplant program. That process could take up to a year. Billie Mills is grateful that the Porter patients are being accommodated.

Description: 3-D Crime Scene Images Enter Colorado Courtrooms.

Thanks to a number of popular TV shows, there's a misconception about what crime scene analysts really can do. But their jobs are getting easier thanks to improved technology. The Colorado Bureau of Investigation gave us an exclusive look at their tools that help them create a 3D crime scene. For crime scene analysts, documenting every detail is important. CBI Crime Scene Analyst Erick Bryant said, "Crime scene investigation is a one-time thing. You have only one time to process the scene correctly. This allows us to gather a bunch of data from that crime scene and look at it, days, weeks, months, long after that scene has been long gone." FARO is a computer scanning system that produces 3D images of crime scenes. Bryant said, "It is an infrared laser scanner that measures literally everything it sees." And just like Google Street View, you can move around to see different angles. "It allows you to bring the crime scene into the courtroom in a virtual environment and put a juror in that scene or put a prosecutor in the scene in a way you just can't do with 2D imaging." CBI also uses a drone in conjunction with FARO to get a complete look at a crime scene. Dave Yocum said, "This has made things a million times easier. It cuts down on a lot of processing time from our scenes and we tend to get a whole lot more information. CBI uses this technology about 140 times per year, assisting agencies around the state. They've helped in high profile cases like the 2013 shooting at Arapahoe High School and the 2016 Park County shooting where a deputy was killed. Investigators believe it's important to share this information with the public. CBI Deputy Director Jan Girtten said, "We want to share our knowledge. It's not what we really see on TV, not really how we do things. We do it quick, but we don't do it overnight. We want to make sure the public who becomes our jurors really understands our technology and could understand our explanations." It is National Forensic Sciences Week which was formed to recognize the work of forensic analysts as well as to educate potential jurors and law makers so they have a better understanding of the realities of crime scene investigations.

Description: Watts Charged with Murder for Killing his Family.

Christopher Watts was formally charged with murder on Monday in the deaths of his wife Shanann and his two young daughters, Bella and Celeste. The Weld County District Attorney's Office said Watts, 33, has been charged with nine felony counts, including three counts of first-degree murder after deliberation. He was also charged with two counts of first-degree murder -- victim under 12/position of trust, one count of first-degree unlawful termination of a pregnancy and three counts of tampering with a deceased human body. Prosecutors faced a Monday afternoon deadline to file the charges. An affidavit detailing what led to Watts' arrest is expected to be unsealed later Monday and could reveal a lot about what investigators know about the deaths and the motive. Watts is being held without bond in protective custody in Weld County. He is due in court Tuesday to be advised of the formal charges. The body of Shanann Watts, 34, was recovered Thursday in a shallow grave near an oil tank on property owned by Anadarko Petroleum, where Christopher Watts worked as an operator. Officials said Thursday night they found the bodies of the girls, 4-year-old Bella and 3-year-old Celeste. Court documents said the girls were found in an oil well in close proximity to their mother's body. Court documents filed by defense lawyer James Merson said the girls had been submerged in crude oil for four days. The Weld County Coroner's Office confirmed the identities on Friday. The cause of their deaths has not been made public. Defense attorneys asked for DNA samples from the girls' necks, but the motion was denied. The motion suggested they might have been strangled. Shanann Watts, who was 15 weeks pregnant, and her daughters were reported missing at 1:40 p.m. on Aug. 13. The Colorado Bureau of Investigation issued a missing-endangered alert for the three on Tuesday. The Frederick Police Department, the CBI and the FBI canvassed the area before arresting Christopher Watts on Wednesday night. A close friend has said she dropped off Shanann Watts at home about 2 a.m. Monday when they got home from a work trip. She saw her go inside. She said the two friends were supposed to meet later in the day, but Watts didn't answer her phone. Christopher Watts said in an interview Tuesday that he didn't know where his wife and daughters were.

Description: Massive I-70 Project Breaks Ground.

After 15 years of planning, the Colorado Department of Transportation broke ground on Friday morning on the massive Central 70 Project. The rebuilding of Interstate 70 on the east side of Denver will cost $1.2 billion and take four years to complete. It's the largest transportation project in the state's history. The 10-mile stretch between Brighton Boulevard and Chambers Road will be widened and a toll lane added. And much of the new road will be put below ground. That will entail the demolition of the viaducts between Brighton and Colorado boulevards with a park built on top. At that time, traffic will be diverted into a massive open-air trench that will be built alongside the viaduct. And everything will be detoured. "One of the requirements they put on the contractor is they have to keep the interstate running," CDOT spokeswoman Rebecca White said. "The only lane closures can happen in the evening. "Over the four-year construction period, there are a handful of times they can fully shut down the interstate and that's when they have to do demolition. "Once the contractor has the first part of the lower interstate done, we are going to take all the traffic from up there on the viaduct to down below and then the viaduct can come down safely because there is no active traffic on it." Gov. John Hickenlooper, Denver Mayor Michael Hancock and other officials were on hand for the groundbreaking.

Description: I-25 Gap Project Breaks Ground.

The Colorado Department of Transportation broke ground on the accelerated Interstate 25 South Gap Project in Douglas and El Paso counties on Thursday morning. The project will rebuild and expand Interstate 25 between Castle Rock and Monument, a stretch of the highway that is in desperate need for an update. The Gap will add one Express Lane in each direction. The two general purpose lanes will remain free. CDOT said the old road along the 18-mile route is in rough shape so it's taking the fastest approach possible to get a project this size up and running. "It served its purpose for a long time, but in the last 10 years or so, it's gotten congested, the crash rates have gone up, so we are moving aggressively to save lives," CDOT spokeswoman Tamara Rollison said. "It's an incredibly important project. We are building it to save lives, to reduce congestion and provide travelers with an option of travel choices so they have a level of reliability they don't have today." The real work begins next week on the $350 million project. El Paso and Douglas counties and the federal government are helping fund the project.

Description: Broncos Rollout Mobile Ticketing System.

Broncos fans used their smartphones to get into the team's home opener at Broncos Stadium at Mile High on Sunday, a change from last year's paper ticket system. The Broncos rolled out the mobile ticket system this year to cut down on counterfeit tickets and fraud. The team also hopes the system will decrease lines into the stadium. Most fans standing in line Sunday said they are pleased with the change. "I think it's great the way it's going. I don't think there is any way around it. You have to adapt and change," said Justin Bettendorf. Others missed the sentimental value that came with holding a paper ticket in hand. "It's probably going to be easier. It's quicker. But I'm old school, so I don't know what's wrong with the real thing," said Kathy Pearson. While the new system is intended to speed up entry into the stadium, the glare of the sun made it difficult for agents to scan tickets quickly, adding to wait times outside the stadium. Other fans had to step out of line to upgrade to the latest version of the ticket app that was updated in the days before the game. "We downloaded our app with our tickets four days ago. We went to enter the stadium and there had been an update in the last few days," said Bryan Gieszl. "Why would you do that two days before the first day? So, we had to figure out how to re-update our phones."

Description: Blackmon Hits for the Cycle.

The Rockies' Charlie Blackmon completed a cycle by hitting an RBI double in the eighth inning Sunday at Coors Field. Blackmon doubled down the first-base line off Washington Nationals reliever Kyle McGowin. It was the ninth cycle in the Rockies' 26-season history and the first of Blackmon's career. Blackmon tripled in his first at-bat and homered into the right-field seats in the third inning. He beat out an infield single in the fourth while going 4 for 5 in the game. Blackmon's cycle was the first by a Rockies player since Nolan Arenado completed one by hitting a game-ending home run against the San Francisco Giants on June 18, 2017.
