ISSUE DESCRIPTION: Kuskokwim River residents are urging state fishery managers to open the river one day per week to gillnets

PROGRAM SEGMENT: Hunting & Fishing DATE/TIME: August 26 , 2021
8:46am DURATION: 5:33

DESCRIPTION OF SEGMENT: Kuskokwim River residents are urging state fishery managers to open the river one day per week to gillnets. Last week, for the first time ever, fishery managers with the Alaska Department of Fish and Game (ADF&G) closed the river and nearly all tributaries to gillnets and coho salmon harvest. The month-long closure is meant to conserve the near-record low coho run. Residents are asking managers to compromise with people who need fish.
