To a Certain Degree	6/17/2019	This episode's guest was local author Erik Deckers. While most of Erik's work is marketing or business-related, his first novel was partly written while he was in the residency program at the Jack Kerouac house in College Park. Along with discussing that program, we talked about his approach to self-publishing and the process of writing the novel.	The residency program at the Jack Kerouac house is a great non-profit that few people know about, either as a chance to apply or as a place to donate. Writing a first book is also of interest to many aspiring writers. We also discussed local coffee shops that are conducive to the writing process as well.

To a Certain Degree	6/24/2019	This episode's guest was Kelly Joy Ladd, a local artist who has a show at CityArts in downtown Orlando. We discussed the experience of doing a show with a female curator featuring two other female artists. Along with that, we talked about her approach to art and the inspiration behind her work.	Informing the public about local art installations and artists is key to expanding participation in the arts in the Orlando area. Getting to know local artists - how they got into it, what makes them successful, and more - also helps inspire other artists. We also discussed the overall art scene in Orlando, and places to go to experience it.
Outloud Orlando	6/25/2019	Whose your Diva? Are you a casual fan of your gay icons? Non Binary Talk What is it? and how do we understand it and accept it? President trying to start world war 3. How this man affects the gay community? Law works action reading of the Muller report. Do people really care about this report? Presidential elections: Mayor Pete has a shooting in his hometown. His poll numbers are low with black communities. Shooting in his community will taint the numbers even more. Impeachment. is it worth it? Nancy Pelosi doesn't want to but Eric does. Do we focus only on news that is in our favor? Color in the workplace. Can we have more diversity in the workplace? Everyone wants to be represented.	These topics affect our community and the straight community. The straight community needs to hear how the gay community reacts to these topics.

Sittin' Atop A Pile of Poop... And The View Is Spectacular!	6/27/2019	Interviewed Representative Anna Eskamani about transparency in politics. We talked about her successes, fears, humanism, and what's happening in Florida politics today.	Important to get to know our legislators on a personal level. Transparency in politics is an issue relevant today.
To a Certain Degree	7/1/2019	The guest, Kris Zara, is a performer with a local theater show called Black Cow Jumps. The group performs around central Florida exclusively in venues like the Jack Kerouac house in College Park and the Winter Park Library. We also discussed her experiences as a full-time nursing student.	The discussion was about the local theater scene through the eyes of one performer. The benefits of being on stage and the cathartic nature of the performance was discussed, which is beneficial for people considering pursuing theater locally. In addition, the discussion on nursing school is helpful for people thinking of a career change.
Outloud Orlando	7/2/2019	Topics Dating after cheating Democratic Debates winners are Elizabeth Warren and Kamala Harris. World Pride overcrowded and hot. Bells Palsy living with it for now.	these issues affect our community and will teach the hetero community about the opinions of gay men and women.
To a Certain Degree	7/8/2019	The guest, Jillian McManus, is a 7th grade math teacher at a local middle school. We discussed the approach the district is taking to translate real world problems into the classroom to make learning more applicable and informative. We also discussed the local improv theater scene focusing on the classes and venues available.	It informed listeners about how the school system was changing and some of the challenges a math teacher faces. The discussion on improv also helped identify ways in which classes on this subject may help people. We also discussed the importance of lifelong learning, such as taking classes at the library and other places.

Outloud Orlando	7/9/2019	Ariel being black and who will play Ursula Trump flubs his lines on fourth of July Local events Judy Garland movie Do we have Angelina Jolie fatigue?	These topics help educate our community on how gays think about certain topics.
