

Second Quarter – 2022

 KCHE Radio aired numerous news stories about funding that was recently received by the Lewis Hotel as part of Cherokee's downtown housing grant that was applied for. The funds will be used to help renovate the hotel, which was a giant tourist attraction decades ago in Cherokee. This story focused on the improvements that will be made to Cherokee when it comes to tourism, by virtue of this grant.

 KCHE Radio aired numerous news stories about several road construction projects in the city of Cherokee, as well as gave area drivers an update on new routes to take when traveling in the city. Community betterment was focused on in these news stories, which featured soundbytes from the city's mayor.

 KCHE Radio aired numerous news stories about COVID vaccinations, booster shots and safety against the virus. A local doctor informed listeners about different types of booster shot and original vaccine combinations, and the fact that they will work even if your booster shot is different than the vaccine that someone first received.

 KCHE News aired numerous news stories about the local Extension Offices throughout the area offering free protective items to all local farmers. The items included hearing and sun protection that were geared mostly toward those farmers that would be driving tractors. Agriculture is an issue that KCHE Radio focuses on tremendously over the course of an entire year.
