Manager's Memo

Those of you who have children or work with children will appreciate knowing that KUED has really ramped up the services we provide for families and children in the last few years. We know that, in addition to quality educational television, teaching kids to read at a young age instills the foundation for language and literacy development. When parents read to their children, children perform better in school and develop a lifelong love of reading and learning.

One of the efforts of KUED Kids is putting books in the hands of young children ensuring that all Utah children have books in the home. We are thankful to the R. Harold Burton Foundation for funding this worthwhile effort that yields benefits far into the future.

Over the summer, KUED Kids delivered on a promise to get and keep kids reading all summer long by donating KUED Kids Reading Corners to these homeless and family resource centers: Family Promise of Salt Lake, The Road Home Family Shelter in Midvale, and the Grandfamilies and Kinship Care Program with the Children's Services Society. Reading Corner donations include bookshelves, seating, cozy rugs, and hundreds of books for children to read, explore, and even take with them.

KUED is invested in creating imaginative and literature-rich spaces within organizations so that all children have access to books in early childhood. Last summer, KUED donated Cleone Peterson Eccles Mobile Education Labs to these same organizations, which included PBS Kids Playtime Pads filled with educational apps and games for young children. It is our hope that by providing these educational resources, we are instilling the foundation for all children to develop strong literacy skills and a love of learning.

UNDERWRITER PROFILE

NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM OF UTAH

Rio Tinto Center | University of Utah

The Natural History Museum of Utah (NHMU) celebrates its 50th anniversary this year. In those five decades, they have developed a reputation of excellence in research, education, exhibitions, collections stewardship, and community service.

Designated as the state's museum of natural history, NHMU has the privilege of caring for Utah's collections of natural and indigenous cultural objects. They serve people in communities across the urban and rural landscape by providing access to these collections. The Museum communicates the importance and value of the natural world and providing key science-literate educational services.

In 2011, the museum moved into its spectacular current home, The Rio Tinto Center. It was a transformational milestone for the Museum, providing a much-needed platform for 21st-century research and education. Since opening, they have successfully increased their services, honed their quality, developed a sustainable operation, and became a top destination in Salt Lake City.

The National History Museum of Utah offers a wide range of programs for everyone. For children, there are STEAM-based Discovery Classes, badge workshops for Girl and Boy Scouts, summer camps, and explorations with Utah's animals and birds. There are also yoga programs, family late-night activities, sleepover events, and the Bluegrass and BBQ Music Festival.

From now through September 15, don't miss the Museum's special exhibition, Yellowstone:

Invisible Boundaries. The exhibit focuses on the migrations of elk and other charismatic, wide-ranging wildlife in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem. Explore the challenges these animals face as they leave Yellowstone National Park and cross into surrounding multiple-use and private lands in search of winter resources. Their journeys link the ecosystem's outermost foothills and ranch lands to its deepest, mountain wilderness.

The mission of the Natural History Museum of Utah is to illuminate the natural world and the place of humans within it, in the context of the extraordinary landscape of Utah. They proudly support the programs on KUED including Nature, Dinosaur Train, and the shows on PBS Kids 24/7.

WHY YOU LOVE COUNTRY MUSIC, EVEN IF YOU DON'T

In partnership with KUED, this special Osher 15th Anniversary course will teach you all about country music's roots in ballads, hymns, and the blues. Train your ear with musicologists and songwriting experts to explore where country music came from and how it reflects and influences American society today.

Our four-part course culminates with a special film screening featuring highlights from Ken Burns' new documentary series, Country Music, followed by a live concert with performances by local music artists and bands from other genres covering their favorite country music songs.

SEPTEMBER 11 What Rock Owes Country

SEPTEMBER 18 Everyone Has a Song: Find Yours

SEPTEMBER 25 Country Music's Crossover into Mainstream America

SEPTEMBER 26 Country Covers Concert

The classes are open to all "lifelong learners" who want to learn about what makes country music a truly American art form. All classes, including the film and concert event, will take place at the Main Library in Salt Lake City.
