- The Oklahoma Blood Institute hosted 20 blood drives during the final quarter of 2020. Lakes Country Radio partners with OBI to help spread the word about these drives and collect blood from our community. The OBI is the blood supplier for all hospitals in our listening area. OBI regional representative Ashley Hinson joined Blake on The Morning Rush every other Thursday to talk about their blood drives
  - The Director and Found of Cherokees for Black Indian History Preservation, Ty Wilson, came in on September 23rd to talk about their “Pop-Up In the Park Event.” The vent raises awareness for Cherokee peoples that also have African-American Heritage. It also raises money that goes toward their cause.

- Court Appointed Special Advocates of Cherokee County joined Blake on The Morning Rush on August 6th and September 15th to discuss their upcoming training. The program is made up of volunteers that speak for children in the court system at no fault of their own. The training discussed was to educate these volunteers. “CASA” works with the Oklahoma Department of Human Services and Indian Health Services.
- Every year KEOK and KTLQ discuss Back to School safety throughout the month of August. Local Police Chief Natesafer King joined “Wide Awake with Kira and Blake to discuss both the dangers and what can be done to keep our kids safer, as they wait for their respective buses and walk to and from school.
- Amy Carter with “Team Tahlequah” sits in every Monday morning to educate listeners on the importance of shopping at local business and supporting small business owners. This has continued during the Covid-19 crisis and we’ve been able to help small businesses reach listeners about new hour changes, sales, delivery, etc.
