Number of Full-time Employees:

During the Reporting Period, a total of 3 full-time positions were filled and 14 people were interviewed for full-time openings. These numbers are higher than in last year, due to replacing 3 full time positions. The information required by the FCC is provided in the charts that follow.

Outreach Activities:

Established an Internship Program designed to mentor students who are interested in broadcast employment and assist these students in learning the skills needed to pursue a career in radio broadcast media.

In 2016, there was a total of 1 intern from Auburn University that received academic credit for her participation in our program. We worked closely with Ric Smith, Internship Director for Auburn University's Communication Department, to help guide students in their field of interest and allow them to explore all aspects of radio broadcast. We also had another intern from the Connecticut School of Broadcasting who received credit for his participation in our program. Several past interns have become full-time employees, such as Brooke Myers, Evan Deloach, Taylor Jones, and Reid Slider, and all give credit to Tiger Communications' mentoring program for guiding them to careers in the broadcasting field.

Set up a comprehensive recruitment and outreach program designed to widely publish information regarding full time job opportunities for all the stations.

Tiger Communications aired a Public Notice Release as part of regularly scheduled "Help Wanted" radio commercial that invited local community groups to notify station management if they would like to be updated on full-time job openings. In addition, a press release containing the same information was sent to local newspapers in an effort to involve the local community in our recruitment efforts. To date, Tiger Communications notifies 3 local associations when full-time positions open—The Alabama State Employment Agency, State Employment Office in Opelika and The Tuskegee Chamber of Commerce.

Created a mentoring program for new station employees.

Tiger Communications has cross-trained employees in order to provide skills in multiple arenas of broadcasting. This benefits both the station by increasing employee flexibility, and the employee by providing a more diverse skill-set that should help in regards to their current position as well as any future broadcasting endeavors. Examples include board operation training for all programming employees, traffic coordination training for multiple production/on-air personalities, and account management training for multiple on-air personalities.
